U. S. WORKS ON 3,000 SHIPS FOR WORLD TRADE

Completion of Big Program Up to Congress.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—What to do with the American merchant marine, built, owned, and operated by the United States government, is one of the pressing problems of economic reconstruction with which congress shortly will be called upon to deal.

A committee of the shipping board is now at work upon a survey of the situation and soon will make a report to congress on the comparative advantages and disadvantages of various plans suggested for the disposition of the merchant fleet in process of construction.

Are Three Plans.

There are three general policies being studied by the committee. They are:

Continued government ownership and operation of all ships built by the government, exclusive of requisitioned craft, which will be released to owners.

Government ownership, but lease of vessels to private interests.

Sale of the ships to private interests.

The entire program of construction called for the completion of 3,116 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 16,915,045 dead weight, at a cost of approximately $3,500,000,000. Congress has athorized expenditures totaling $3,571,000,000; has actually appropriated of this amount $2,635,000,000, and the shipping board has expended of this amount $1,100,000,000.

Program Cut Down.

Since the signing of the armistice the program has been curtailed to some extent by the cancellation of contracts for many ships not yet under construction. Further curtailment, the shipping board holds, would occasion greater losses to the government than would the carrying out of the entire program.

Unless congress should interfere, therefore, the board will go forward with a construction program calling for the completion of nearly 3,000 ships aggregating 15,000,000 tons by the end of 1920. Nearly 3,500,000 tons of this amount are now in commission.

Cost Is Heavy.

These ships are being built at war costs of labor and materials, which are estimated at an excess of from $50 to $75 a ton over pre-war costs, an element which indicates to some extent the loss that would be sustained by the government in selling the fleet to private interests when shipbuilding conditions shall have become normal again.

First—Private operation in the main.

Second—Continuation of government building in order to give stability to the American shipbuilding industry.

Third—A limited degree of government operation, chiefly in pioneering in trades where private capital might not care to venture at first, and in establishing certain regular lines of steamships.

Rests with Congress.

"The question of the nation's policy with regard to shipping," Mr. Colby said, "is not for the shipping board to decide. The board may make suggestions and it may state opinions deduced from its studies or from its experience. But the formulation of a policy rests with congress, and it is for congress to say whether the large and growing merchant fleet shall be operated by the government or by individuals as agents or lessees of or as purchasers from the government.

"Whatever congress may do, it is unthinkable that we shall repeat the mistakes of the course of legislation in this country for sixty years that reduced America's share of her own foreign commerce carried in her own ships from a percentage in excess of 90 to less than 8 2-3 per cent just before the outbreak of the European war.

Against Government Operation.

"My personal view is against government operation of our merchant fleet. The business of ship management, the expert grasp of domestic and overseas market conditions, the shrewd sense of trade presuppose personal

SAYS GERMANY MUST STAND ON WILSON TERMS

New Minister Issues a Statement to Tell His Attitude.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 4.—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, the new German foreign minister, has issued a statement outlining his policy. From comment in the Tageblatt of Berlin, it appears that he declared that Germany must not yield to every peace condition her opponents may wish to dictate. The Tageblatt adheres to the minister's point of view and says:

"No peace must be signed which differs by the breadth of a hair from the principles of President Wilson's fourteen points which Germany has accepted and the entente willingly, or unwillingly, has signed."

The Tageblatt then discusses Germany's delusions before the war and says these were fed by a "fatal propaganda which drove America into the war and led to the inevitable catastrophe."

Insists on "Firm Will."

"It is necessary," the paper continues, "to avoid the self-deception of which the minister speaks, but it is not necessary to plunge madly into self-humiliation. Continuous lamentations and half-hearted weakness must lead the entente to see that the German people have no will of their own and may bend under any yoke of slavery. Thus, bereft of its most valuable territories, Germany might be held down in continuous impotence.

"We regard it as urgently necessary that Germany should convince the world of her firm will and loyalty to realize President Wilson's peace, but not to accept any other, especially that of Premier Clemenceau. Minister Brockdorff-Rantzau has said this with a plainness and a frankness which the German policy too long has been lacking. He rejects a peace of violence, destruction, and subjection despite the serious crisis in Germany. The people will back him up."

Orders Arrest of Many.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Kurt Eisner, the Bavarian premier, has ordered the arrest of a large number of officers in Munich to answer charges of high treason against the Bavarian republic, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam. The officers include five colonels and seventeen captains. They will be tried by a special court.

Hints Move on Bolshevik.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 3.—The Berlin Vossische, alarmed at Bolshevik "inhuman cruelties," hints that a union will be effected between the Germans and the British to oppose the advance of the soviet army toward the Baltic.

SEVEN INJURED WHEN TRAINS ON I. C. CRASH

Seven persons were injured, one of them severely, when a through train on the Illinois Central railroad struck the rear end of a suburban passenger train standing at the Twenty-second street station at 8 a. m. yesterday.

The injured, all of whom are employés of the railroad, are:

Frank Randinelli of 631 South Clark street.

Gussetti Satino of 1005 South State street.

Carmino Tacelli of 631 South Clark street.

Salvatore Gellino of 608 Federal street.

Recetta Giacona of 2837 Princeton avenue.

Engineer Henry Wells of the through train said that a heavy fog prevented him from seeing the suburban train until he was within 100 feet of the rear coach.

Petrograd Soviet Will Pick Husbands for Women

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The town council of Petrograd, according to an Exchange telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen, has decided that all unmarried women between the ages of 18 and 45 shall be provided with husbands selected by the council. The children of these unions, it is added, will not be allowed to remain with their parents, but will be educated under the control of the soviet government.

American to Estimate Belgian Railway Damage

BRUSSELS, Jan. 4.—Col. Barclay Parsons, American railway expert, has been appointed by the United States to assess the damages inflicted by the Germans upon the Belgian railways, it was announced today.

FIND SIX BLOOD COVERED BODIES IN FARM HOUSE

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 4.—Five persons were found murdered, and the body of a man believed to have been the murderer, was found in a farmhouse on Holmana's Island, eight miles northwest of Little Sioux, Iowa, late this afternoon. The dead are:

Wilber Johnson, farmer, in whose home the bodies were discovered.

Mrs. Wilber Johnson, his wife.

—— Johnson, their 8 year old son.

Mrs. Mabel Jones, said to be a sister of Johnson.

Baby Jones.

Details of the crime are lacking. The bodies were found in their beds, covered with blood.

It is believed the motive for the crime was the unsuccessful suit of the slayer for the hand of Johnson's daughter, who has not been located. The murderer is said to have bought a shotgun at Tekama, Neb., yesterday.

Says U. S. Friendship Is Linked with Irish Rights

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Daily News, in an editorial discussion of a letter from a "highly placed Englishman in Dublin" relative to conditions in Ireland, says:

"We have to choose now between a recognition of Ireland's rights or the loss of our hard won union with America, with all that means to ourselves and the world. That is a cardinal fact in the menace of the Irish situation."

The newspaper "earnestly appeals" to Englishmen to "use all their influence to avert the disaster to the world which this threatens," and concludes by saying, "A little longer and it will be too late."

'Jean Crones' in Virginia Proves Another Mistake

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 4.—George Wiler, arested here on suspicion of being Jean Crones, wanted in Chicago for attempting to poison 200 guests at a banquet given at the University club in that city nearly three years ago, was released today after a Chicago police officer and the steward of the club which employed Crones declared he was not the man wanted.

Belgium to Expel All Aliens Who Dealt with Germany

BRUSSELS, Jan. 4.—The Belgian minister of justice announces that all foreigners of enemy origin who had relations with the Germans during the war will be expelled from Belgium.

COURT RULES OUT EFFORT TO BLOCK DRY AMENDMENT

Injunction Proceedings in Ohio Are Refused.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 4.—Prohibition forces gained a signal victory in the United States District court here today when United States Judge Hollister handed down an opinion dismissing a suit to enjoin Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio from presenting to the coming meeting of the Ohio legislature the proposed national prohibition amendment.

Judge Hollister, in a lengthy opinion, not only dismissed the injunction suit but stated that it was his opinion that the chief point made by the plaintiff, Albert G. Erkenbrecker, a real estate man, that the proposed amendment should have received two-thirds of the total membership of both houses of congress instead of two-thirds of the members voting was not good logic.

Main Appeal Illogical.

In this respect the court said: "Since the 'body' is the 'house,' and a majority of a quorum transact the business of the house in passing a bill, so two-thirds of a quorum passes a regulation proposing an amendment. So it seems to this court.

"If the framers of the constitution had intended, by use of the word 'house,' a different meaning from its universal meaning when applied to the ordinary business of enacting laws, it would seem that they would not have left such an important matter to conjecture and inference, and would have said 'two-thirds of the membership of the house' rather than 'two-thirds of the house.'"

Not the Time, Anyhow.

In his opinion, ruling strictly on the injunction suit, Judge Hollister said that he could see no reason why this matter could not have been decided after ratification of the proposed amendment as well as before ratification, and he saw no reason why an injunction against Gov. Cox should be granted, inasmuch as the plaintiff would not be injured by the act of the governor in submitting the amendment.

London Paper Predicts Second Visit by Wilson

LONDON, Jan. 4.—President Wilson will leave for New York on Feb. 15, but probably will return before conclusion of the peace conferences, the Exchange Telegraph company declared today.

TEXANS FLY TO DETROIT AT 136 MILES AN HOUR

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—An observation De Haviland airplane reached Detroit this afternoon from Ellington field, Houston, Tex., making the 1,650 mile trip in 724 minutes of flying time, and the last lap from Indianapolis at the rate of 122 miles an hour under adverse weather conditions.

The machine was one of three which left Ellington field on a "gulf to Detroit and return" map making and observation trip Dec. 21, and was piloted by Capt. L. J. Robinson, with Lieut. A. A. Adams, observer. Capt. Robinson made the flight under the direction of the technical department of the engineering corps for observation and to test the operation of the Liberty engine under severe weather conditions.

Today's flight from Indianapolis was made with temperatures ranging from zero to 10 below, but no engine or oil troubles were experienced, although no special engine equipment had been provided.

Demobilized Fighters to Get Chance to See Europe

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—American soldiers overseas will be given opportunities to see something of Europe before returning home, Secretary Baker said today, in a letter to Representative Young of North Dakota, in response to an inquiry as to whether more liberal policy in granting furloughs abroad could not be adopted. Secretary Baker said that, as far as practical, leaves would be given to officers and enlisted men of organizations ordered home. This policy was recommended by Gen. Pershing.

Admiral Schley's Cousin Gets Croix de Guerre

New York, Jan. 4.—Lieut. J. Montfort Schley Jr., a cousin of the late Admiral Schley, wounded five times in seven hours during the second battle of the Marne, has received the Croix de Guerre, relatives here were informed today. He is rapidly recovering and is expected home soon. It was not until he received his fifth wound, a bullet in the leg, that Lieut. Schley had to leave the battlefield.

THE WEATHER.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 5, 1919.

Chicago and vicinity—Unsettled, with rising temperature Sunday; probably light snow; moderate northerly winds.

FORECAST FOR THE WEEK.

BOLSHEVIKI IN BUDAPEST RIOT; PERIL HUNGARY

Lenine Lieutenant Stirs Mobs; Aided by Hunger.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Six weeks ago, when the world-wide demand arose for first person news from the central empires, a young American newspaper reporter from Detroit presented himself to the director of "The Chicago Tribune" foreign news service in Paris with the assertion that he was prepared to attempt to penetrate Austria.

This reporter left Paris with credentials as "The Tribune" correspondent and managed to cross the Franco-Swiss border on the night before it was closed by interallied order. Three weeks ago he dropped out of sight in Switzerland and was out of all communication from that time until today, when the following dispatch was received from him from the interior of Austria. He reports from Budapest with the first accounts of street fighting and the spread of the red terror in the capital of Hungary.

Frederick A. Smith was one of the first correspondents to penetrate Germany. Ladislas Czapski is the first to record present conditions in Austria. These two correspondents have scored two big achievements for the readers of "The Tribune."

BUDAPEST, Jan. 1.—(Forwarded by cable from Paris, Jan. 4.)—Budapest today is like a city built over an active volcano. The various organizations supposedly accountable for law and order seem to be tottering. The Russian epidemic of Bolshevism has reached the virulent stage. Famine and freezing are its active allies.

New Year's eve was celebrated with riot and murder in the city's streets. The dawn of the first day of the year brought a slight breathing spell, but it only seems to be founded on the fact that the various divergent elements are sorting themselves out and solidifying themselves for another outbreak.

Dr. Bela Kun, chief Bolshevik agitator of Hungary, is once more at large after unsucessful efforts to suppress his malign influence.

Attack Infantry Barracks.

The disturbances began late in the afternoon, on the last day of the year, at the barracks of the First Honved infantry regiment. It was the object and cry of the rioters to establish a communistic regime based on the Russian model.

The forces of the rioters were augmented by numbers of young students and soldiers of the Budapest garrisons, which have become inoculated with Bolshevism.

Many of the rioters were armed and hundreds of shots were fired through the barracks windows. The unarmed members of the mob contented themselves with hurling cobble stones torn up from the street.

Riots Spread Over City.

It required all of the disjointed efforts of the police and those disciplined troops willing to com-

PRESIDENT SAYS GERMANS MADE SCIENCE DISGRACE

ROME, Jan. 4.—[By the United Press.]—Denunciation of the "disgrace" and "shame" to which science has been put by the Germans and regret that "science should, in a nation which has made science its boast, have been put to such dishonorable uses in the recent war," were voiced by President Wilson today in accepting membership in the famous Academy of the Lincei, Italy's great organization of scientists.

"There is a serenity, a long view on the part of science, which seems to be of no age, but to carry human thought along from generation to generation, freed from the elements of passion," he said. "Therefore it is, I dare say, with all men of science a matter of profound regret and shame that science should, in a nation which had made science its boast, have been put to such dishonorable uses in the recent war.

"Every just mind must condemn those who debased the studies of men of science so as to use them against humanity, and, therefore, it is part of your task and of ours to reclaim science from this disgrace, to show that she is devoted to the advancement and interest of humanity and not to its embarrassments and destructions."

New York, Jan. 4.—Charging big "cross order" sales of Liberty bonds by income tax dodgers, transactions in one day exceeding $40,000,000, Assistant District Attorney Brogan in a report to the county district attorney today urged the need of an inquiry by the stock exchange to ascertain the names of wealthy men suspected of thus causing the decline in the price of the war securities sharply below par.

"It is generally conceded," Mr. Brogan's report said, "by those who are familiar with market conditions, that the low prices obtaining for Liberty bonds at the end of the income tax year was seized upon by a great many to sell their bonds with a view of establishing losses to offset profits which would have to be shown in making their income tax reports.

Half Were "Cross Orders."

"This reached the highest point on Dec. 30 when over $40,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds were traded in. In the last ten days in the year 1918 the transactions amounted to $250,000,000 in Liberty bonds alone. My investigations in the case show that probably 50 per cent of these transactions were made on cross orders by heavy investors, who gave their brokers a selling order for anywhere from $500,000 to $1,500,000 worth of Liberty bonds, at the same time putting in a buying order to buy the same amount at the market price, thus establishing a fictitious loss to report on their income tax returns.

"The same method has undoubtedly been followed by many people in the sale of other securities and other investments, and probably in their own business enterprises.

"If it is permitted to go unnoticed the government probably will lose millions of dollars which it expected to get under the new income tax law."

Will Call for Books.

Mr. Brogan said he proposed to have a conference with the collectors of internal revenue in New York in reference to calling upon the stock exchange for a record of buying and selling orders exceeding $500,000 from all stock exchange houses.

Small investors, he said, at the same time have been persuaded to exchange their Liberty bonds for worthless stocks. In one western state, he said, $20,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds of the first and second issues had been wheedled from gullible investors and it would be a fair estimate to place the amount thus obtained by swindlers at $250,000,000 to $500,000,000.

Imagine I. W. W. Hoarder! But It's of Explosives

Topeka, Kas., Jan. 4.—William J. Duvall, United States explosive inspector, stated today before a gathering of United States employment service representatives here that the I. W. W. and possibly other interests have hoarded supplies of explosives in this state. He said the purpose was for the terrorizing of industry and that such a campaign is national in its scope. Trails leading to this disclosure, he said, have been uncovered, and a checking up process is now in operation to locate these supplies.

VISIT IN ROME OF PRESIDENT COMES TO END

Starts Back to Paris by Way of Genoa and Turin.

ROME, Jan. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Wilson today was received at the vatican by Pope Benedict. The president's arrival was announced by the master of the chamber to the pope, who awaited the president in the throne room, where two gilded armchairs had been placed.

The president was admitted immediately to the presence of the pope, who was gowned in white.

On his way to the throne room the president was accompanied by a procession of vatican servants. The procession made its way through halls filled with antique pictures and precious tapestries.

Greeted by the Guard.

As the president entered the antechamber to the papal apartments he was preceded by the pontifical chamberlain. Gendarmes in immense busbies and the Palatine guard and the Noble guard in their red tunics were drawn up to greet him.

In view of the president's rejection of the papal peace offer months ago, the reception of the American executive at the vatican today was looked forward to with great interest in all official circles, and the warm greetings exchanged by president and pontiff were commented upon with much satisfaction here.

No official announcement was made regarding the conversations of Mr. Wilson and the pope. Previously, however, the pope gave an audience to the American correspondents in which he expressed hope for a lasting peace and expressed his appreciation of the part America was taking to achieve it.

Presented with Mosaic.

Pope Benedict presented to President Wilson a handsome mosaic reproducing Guido Reni's famous picture of St. Peter. The mosaic was made in the vatican grounds by the ancient mosaic factory of the vatican and is a yard square. The mosaic has been valued at $40,000.

Cardinal Gasparri, the papal secretary of state, presented President Wilson with two copies of the modification of the canon law, compiled by the cardinal. One copy is bound in white parchment and contains an autographed dedication to President Wilson. The other is in red leather and bears the following autograph: "Homage to Princeton University, from Pietro, Cardinal Gasparri, Vatican, Rome."

Leaves Rome for Genoa.

President Wilson left Rome for Genoa shortly after 9 o'clock tonight with the cheers of the Roman throng that had gathered ringing in his ears. His visit to the Italian capital had proved the busiest of his European trip, as it was the most demonstrative.

The presidential party is not expected to reach Paris until Tuesday morning, as the itinerary provides for stops at Genoa, Milan, and Turin.

The president is represented as expecting, on his return to the French capital, to find the peace delegates up to the point of deciding upon the first principles of the proposed league of nations, thus paving the way to the disposal of what he regards as the necessary preliminaries to the peace before his return to the United States about the middle of February.

Will Visit Genoa Today.

Arriving at Genoa at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, a three hours' visit for the president is planned. Wreaths will be laid on the statue of Columbus that was built from contributions from Italians in America, while at Milan a civic reception on a large scale has been arranged.

The president will attend a banquet as the guest of the city and also attend a portion of the performance of the opera "Aida" before leaving for Turin, where he will arrive Monday morning. The program for his stop in Turin has not yet been fully arranged.

The president's visit to Brussels and the regions devastated by the war, it now has been determined, will not take place until just before his departure for home, the middle of February.

Little regarding the political developments of the president's visit have been permitted to become apparent. It now is known that the plan made for him to address the populace of Rome in a public square yesterday, when 50,000 persons vainly waited for him to appear, was abandoned partly because the Italian government felt it inadvisable on account of lack of sufficient notice and its consequent inability to make suitable arrangements for handling the crowd, although the president was willing to go through with the plan.

Visit to the Pantheon.

Before going to the vatican today the president had his first real glimpse of the Eternal City. An early visit was paid to the Pantheon, where wreaths were laid upon the tombs of King Victor Emmanuel II. and King Humbert there, and then the presidential party motored up the great hill overlooking Rome where stands the imposing monument to Garibaldi.

The president alighted from his motor car and, standing bareheaded beside the statue of the great Italian and surrounded by the ruins of the historic centuries, he looked over the city lying below, crowned by the dome of St. Peter's and with the vatican gardens spread out before him.

President Wilson viewed the impressive scene silently for several moments and then went on to the round of his day's activities.

Of these his attendance at the meeting of the Royal Academy of Science and luncheon at the American embassy came before the carrying out of the most important part of the program for today.

CEREMONY AT MEETING

[BY THE UNITED PRESS.]

ROME, Jan. 4.—President Wilson's visit to the pope this afternoon was attended by elaborate ceremonies. He went from the American embassy to the vatican, owing to the peculiar relations of the vatican and the quirinal, which made it desirable for him to proceed directly from American territory.

Arriving at the gate at 3:45 p. m., the presidential party was greeted by a platoon of Swiss guards in bright uniforms and the band of the vatican gendarmes, which played the American national anthem. Within the court were more guards and gendarmes.

Several church functionaries received the president and escorted him to the top of the royal stairway. There the party was joined by other guards and officers of the vatican militia, forming a cortége which proceeded to the Clementine hall.

Monsignor Samper, master of ceremonies, welcoming the president in the name of the pope, escorted him into the hall of arms, from which a door opens into the small throne room. Opening this door, Monsignor Samper announced to the pope that President Wilson had arrived.

Pope's Arms Outstretched.

Pope Benedict, dressed in white robes and white cap, and wearing red slippers, came toward the president with outstretched arms. He clasped the president's hands in both of his and shook them warmly. Then they entered the throne room for a private conversation, while the master of ceremonies closed the door behind them.

The president's party remained in the hall of arms. At the conclusion of the conference a bell rang and Mgr. Samper opened the door. When the president emerged he was taken in charge by Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, who showed him about the famous Borgia apartments.

Meanwhile the other members of the party were presented to the pope. He talked cordially with the correspondents, voicing his pleasure in the amicable relations between Italy and the United States. He spoke of President Wilson as "your great leader." Benedict spoke in Italian, which was translated by Mgr. O'Hearn, rector of the American university.

CITY'S WELCOME WARM

ROME, Jan. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—Royalty and the officials of Rome gave President Wilson a most cordial reception yesterday.

"I hope you will feel at home here," said King Victor Emmanuel in greeting President Wilson yesterday as the president stepped from his train.

The king and Mr. Wilson then reviewed a company of soldiers drawn up at the station while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner." After a short conversation in the royal waiting room the king and Mr. Wilson appeared in front of the station. This was a signal for a great outburst of enthusiasm, cannons being fired, soldiers presenting arms, and the historic bell on the capitol ringing, which is done only on the greatest national occasions.

Welcomed by the Mayor.

At the Plaza Esedra, Prince Prospero Colonna, the mayor of Rome, surrounded by aldermen and liveried servants, awaited the arrival of the procession. Prince Colonna delivered an address in which he welcomed the the president in the name of the Eternal City and expressed the gratitude of Rome and Italy for all America did materially and spiritually to win the war. This imposing scene occurred in the huge square bounded on one side by the venerable ruins of the Diocletian baths and on the other by semicircular buildings, gayly decorated with palms, flowers and streamers bearing the names of redeemed Italian cities. The moment Prince Colonna's address was over the cheering broke forth once more with redoubled vigor.

The procession turned down the Via Nazionale, a long, straight thoroughfare leading almost directly to the quirinal. The smile of the president caused an ovation which became more tremendous as he drove along. From windows flowers were showered upon Mrs. Wilson and Miss Wilson. They acknowledged the people's salutations, their bows producing even greater outbursts of enthusiasm.

Called Out on Balcony.

When the presidential party arrived at the Quirinal the military bugles blared forth and the guard of honor presented arms, while the square, already full, became packed to its capacity with the streams of humanity pouring in from all sides and calling loudly for President Wilson to appear on the balcony.

The president and Mrs. Wilson, with their royal hosts, responded to the call. The sight of them on the balcony was the signal for the climax of the demonstration. The crowd seemed to have gone wild, the people cheering unrestraindly for President Wilson and for America. The presidential party was obliged to appear several times on the balcony to satisfy the clamors of the people.

Informal Reception in Palace.

When President Wilson and his party reached the Quirinal from the railway station they were conducted inside the palace to the throne room, where there was an informal reception. Mrs. Wilson and Queen Helena chatted for a few moments, while the president talked earnestly with King Victor Emmanuel, Premier Orlando, and others. The massive staircases were lined with the young men of the king's household guard.

After a brief reception the president was conducted on a tour of the rooms of the palace given over to hospital uses. Scores of Italian soldiers, many of them grievously wounded, and others almost completely recovered, greeted him from their beds or standing on their crutches in the various wards. The president smiled continuously or waved greetings to the men with his hat as he passed through the chambers.

Rooms Given Over to Red Cross.

The president walked with the king and Mrs. Wilson with the queen. It was explained to the visitors that the royal family had not lived in the palace since the beginning of the war, all of its rooms now being given over to Red Cross work. The guest chambers were being used for hospital purposes to such an extent that the members of the president's party will sleep in portions of rooms that have been screened from the adjoining hospital wards by tapestries and hangings.

President and Mrs. Wilson later took luncheon with the royal family at the Villa Savoy, which is just outside the walls of the city, standing in a magnificent park.

Address Made by President Wilson to Citizens of Rome During Visit

ROME, Jan. 4.—President Wilson, speaking at the dinner at the quirinal at which he was the guest of honor last night, said:

"Your majesty: I have been very much touched by the generous terms of the address you have just read. I feel it would be difficult for me to make a worthy reply and yet if I could speak simply the things that are in my heart I am sure they could constitute an adequate reply.

"I had occasion at the parliament this afternoon to speak of the strong sympathy that had sprung up between the United States and Italy during the terrible years of the war, but perhaps here I can speak more intimately and say how sincerely the people of the United States had admired your own course and your own constant association with the armies of Italy, and the gracious and generous and serving association of her majesty the queen.

Italians in American Army.

"It has been a matter of pride with us that so many Italians, so many men of Italian origin, were in our own armies and associated with their brethren in Italy itself in the great enterprise of freedom. These are no small matters and they complete that process of the welding together of the sympathies of nations which has been going on so long between our peoples.

"The Italians in the United States have excited a particular degree of admiration. They, I believe, are the only people of a given nationality who have been careful to organize themselves to see that their compatriots coming to America were from month to month and year to year guided to places in industries most suitable to their previous habits. No other nationality has taken such pains as that and in serving their fellow countrymen they have served the United States, because these people have found places where they would be most useful and would most immediately earn their own living and add to the prosperity of the country itself.

"In every way we have been happy in our association at home and abroad with the people of this great state. I was saying playfully to Premier Orlando and Baron Sonnino this afternoon that in trying to put the people of the world under their proper sovereignties we would not be willing to part with the Italians in the United States because we too much value the contribution that they have made not only to the industry of the United States but to its thought and to many elements of its life.

"This is, therefore, a very welcome occasion upon which to express a feeling that goes very deep. I was touched the other day to have an Italian, a very plain man, say to me that we had helped to feed Italy during the war and it went to my heart, because we had been able to do so little. It was necessary for us to use our tonnage so exclusively for the handling of troops and of the supplies that had to follow them from the United States that we could not do half as much as it was our desire to do to supply grains to this country, or coal, or any of the supplies which it so much needed during the progress of the war.

"And knowing, as we did in this indirect way, the needs of the country, you will not wonder that we were moved by its steadfastness. My heart goes out to the little, poor families all over this great kingdom who stood the brunt and the strain of the war and gave their men gladly to make other men free and other women and other children free. These are the people, and many like them, to whom after all we owe the glory of this great achievement, and I want to join with you, for I am sure of joining with you, in expressing not only my profound sympathy but my very profound admiration as well.

"It is my privilege and honor to propose the health of his majesty the king, and her majesty the queen, and long prosperity to Italy.

A CITIZEN OF ROME

In accepting the title of citizen of Rome at a ceremony in the capitol Mr. Wilson said:

"You have done me a very great honor. Perhaps you can imagine what a feeling it is for a citizen of one of the newest of the great nations to be made a citizen of this ancient city. It is a distinction which, I am sure, you are conferring upon me as a representative of the great people for whom I speak. One who has been a student of history cannot accept an honor of the sort without having his memory run back to the extraordinary series of events which have centered in this place.

"But as I have thought today I have been impressed by the contrast between the temporary and permanent things. Many political changes have centered about Rome from the time when from a little city she grew to be mistress of a great empire. Change after change has swept away many things, altering the very form of her affairs, but the thing that has remained permanent has been the spirit of Rome and the Italian people. That spirit seems to have caught with each age the characteristic purpose of the age.

Freedom in World League.

"This imperial people now gladly represents the freedom of nations. This people, which at one time seemed to conceive the purpose of governing the world, now takes part in the liberal enterprise of offering the world its own government. Can there be a finer or more impressive illustration of the indestructible human spirit and of the unconquerable spirit of liberty?

"I have been reflecting in these recent days about a colossal blunder which has been made—the blunder of force by the central empires. If Germany had waited a single generation she would have had a commercial empire of the world. She was not willing to conquer by skill, by enterprise, by commercial success. She must needs attempt to conquer the world by arms, and the world will always acclaim the fact that it is impossible to conquer by arms; that the only thing that conquers it is the sort of service which can be rendered in trade, in intercourse, in friendship, and that there is no conquering power which can suppress the freedom of the human spirit.

Rejoices in Closer Partnership.

"I have rejoiced personally in the partnership of the Italian and American people, because it is a new partnership in an old enterprise, an enterprise predestined to succeed wherever it is undertaken—the enterprise which has always borne that handsome name which we call 'liberty.' Men have pursued it sometimes like a mirage that seemed to elude them; that seemed to run before them as they advanced, but never have they flagged in their purpose to achieve it, and I believe I am not deceived in supposing that in this age of ours they are nearer to it than they ever were before.

"The light that shone upon the summit now seems to shine almost at our feet and if we lose it, it will only be because we have lost faith. A breath of hope and of confidence has come into the hearts and minds of men.

"I would not have felt at liberty to come away from America if I had not felt that the time had arrived when, forgetting local interests and local ties and local purposes, men should unite in this great enterprise that will ever tie free men together as a body of brethren and a body of free spirits.

"I am honored, sir, to be taken into this ancient comradeship of the citizens of Rome."

VICTOR PLEDGES ITALY'S SUPPORT TO WORLD LEAGUE

ROME, Jan. 4.—In his address to President Wilson at the quirinal, King Victor Emmanuel declared that Italy was preparing to cooperate with him in the formation of a league of nations. The king used the following language

"Italy, having now gathered to her own bosom those brothers so long sorrowing under foreign oppression, and having reconquered the confines which alone can give her security and true independence, is preparing herself to coöperate with you in the most cordial manner to reach the most practical means for drawing into a single circle the civilized nations, for the purpose of creating in the supreme form of a league of nations the conditions most fitted to safeguard and protect each one's rights."

Daniels Denies Undue Profits on Eagle Boats

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Commenting today on reports of high profits paid for construction of Eagle boats by the Ford plant, Secretary Daniels said profits on these craft were smaller than for any other class of naval construction and very small in comparison with what the navy department was prepared to allow. No new type of boat ever had fully realized the hopes pinned to it, he added, but official reports of trials of the first Eagles showed they were satisfactory.

Daniels Opposes Rodman in Sinking of Foe Ships

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Secretary Daniels said today that he did not concur with Admiral Rodman's recommendation for sinking German capital ships. While indicating some of these must soon be junked, Daniels said he believed in letting the matter go to the peace conference for determination.

The disturbance seemed to have broken out simultaneously in a number of places throughout the city. The attack on the Honved barracks is thought to have been the signal for the general outbreak.

Count Alexander Festetics, the new army minister, who had only been in office a few hours when the trouble started, ordered out the loyal troops, which were dispatched to the danger points. Prior to this move one of Count Festetics' first official actions had been the suppression of one of Bela Kun's principal revolutionary newspapers, and this action was cited by the rioters as one of the causes for the uprising.

Russians Provide Funds.

Bela Kun is reported to be well supplied with large sums of money, supposed to emanate from Russian sources. The object of this foreign financing is unknown, but it is believed that the Russian Bolsheviki desire to see Bela Kun successful in carrying out his political designs with the distant hope of a Slavic alliance based on the principles of internationalism.

Out of 20,000 troops now garrisoned here it is estimated that 2,000 responded to the call of Bela Kun. During the evening many of these soldiers marched on the military prison in the central detention barracks and began a demonstration for the release of the military prisoners.

Bullets End Prisoners' Revolt.

The prisoners themselves revolted at the same time and tried to rush their guards. The gates of the prison were closed and locked while details of troops defended the walls. The guards fired pointblank into the ranks of prisoners and drove them back into their cells.

Bela Kun himself was one of the prisoners, but only for a short space of two hours. The authority responsible for his arrest is as undetermined as is the identity of those who made possible his release, but it was his speech which incited the rest of the prisoners to mutiny.

Threatens Invasion of City.

Upon his release Bela Kun publicly threatened that in event of further opposition to the Bolsheviki by the loyal forces of the city Budapest would by invaded by thousands of Bolsheviki from the surrounding provincial districts. This threat has been sufficient to throw many citizens into the fear that a wholesale massacre is imminent.

Bela Kun is known to be at the head of a systematic and intensive propaganda bureau which is operating through the adjoining provinces. It publishes an organ called the Red Flag.

For the payment of his agents in the army Bela Kun is reputed to have brought 12,000,000 crowns out of Russia, where he was once confined as a prisoner of war and where he is said to have served on one of Lenine's military commissions for the purpose of spreading Bolshevism among the Hungarian war prisoners.

Appeals to Hungry and Jobless.

Bela Kun is making the most out of the lack of coal, the closing of factories, the growth of the food shortage, and the steadily soaring prices of the necessities of life. He is carrying his appeal to the war stricken, unemployed elements of the proletariat and is fast acquiring a large following.

The rational citizens of the city tell me that unless the allies without delay dispatch adequate armed forces to Budapest every coalless and foodless day will bring the Bolshevik elements of Hungary just that much nearer to controlling the entire country. Today strong detachments of troops are patrolling the streets of the city and machine gun details guard the approaches to the bridges across the Danube. There have been no further clashes, but all day long there has been intermittent firing of rifles and hand grenade by the celebrating soldiers.

U. S. Mission Goes to Austria.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—An expedition is being sent into Austria and the surrounding states by the American peace commissioners for the purpose of studying the political, social, and economic conditions. The commission, which is expected to arrive in Vienna next Monday or Tuesday, will be headed by Prof. A. C. Coolidge of Harvard university. It will have headquarters in Vienna and subagencies at Prague, Budapest, Agram, and other places.

GERMANY MADE PEACE TO AVOID LORRAINE BLOW

PARIS, Jan. 4.—[Havas.] — Germany hurried to request the armistice when she saw that a new allied offensive was to be launched on the Lorraine front on Nov. 12 by 600,000 men under command of Gen. De Castelnau, says the Excelsior.

American and French troops, it says, were concentrated on the front between Briey and Chateau Salins. They were supported by 3,000 guns of all calibers and had 300 tanks available on a front of about forty-five miles. Duke Albrecht of Württemberg, the German commander on this front, had available only twenty-five divisions of inferior fighting quality. These divisions contained approximately 160,000 men. He had only 1,000 guns.

This allied attack, the Excelsior continues, would have carried the war into annexed Lorraine and into Rhenish Prussia, threatening to cut off the German army in Belgium and in the Ardennes from its bases.

German general headquarters, realizing that the divisions on other sectors were exhausted and that its forces were demoralized and worn out, averted a catastrophe by pleading for an armistice.

The Excelsior concludes: "The success of the offensive was assured, but it could not have made victory more complete than it already was, because Germany accepted all our conditions. Marshal Foch deemed it useless to cause further shedding of blood and consented to stop hostilities, although Germany was then in a desperate plight."

WILSON THINKS PEOPLE VOICED CRY FOR LEAGUE

Convinced the Public Will Demand Union of World.

BY RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

[Copyright: 1919.]

ROME, Jan. 4.—President Wilson is impressed with the popular receptions given him in Europe. Rome's hearty welcome has capped the climax of his satisfaction over America's attitude in the war and since the armistice.

It is not going too far to say that the president has interpreted the demonstrations in Paris, London, Manchester, and Rome as an indorsement of the league of nations. As he expressed it in conversation, he believes the plaudits that greeted his appearance were the voice of a people speaking to another people, not a personal tribute to himself.

Hears Voice of People.

His lack of knowledge of French and Italian prevented him from understanding all that was shouted from the crowds of Paris and Rome, but he believes they meant the same as the cries from the London crowds, which mean that the people want a world bound by an agreement to prevent future wars. The president was struck by the shouts from the London crowds favoring a league of nations.

It is felt by the president that the people of the allied countries will not be satisfied with a mere peace treaty—what they want is a concrete arrangement insuring them against future wars.

Roman Crowds Hail Him.

How the Romans welcome the president's presence was shown yesterday afternoon when he rode through the streets from the quirinal to the new chamber of deputies to receive the formal addresses. The sidewalks were packed with the people held back by a double line of cavalrymen and infantrymen.

A report had been circulated that the president would deliver an address at the Piazza Venetia. The spacious square is flanked by a great building which once was the Austrian embassy, and an equally huge structure of corresponding architecture, while in the rear rises the impressive white marble memorial to Victor Emmanuel, the king's grandfather.

When the carriage containing the king and president appeared the crowds began to show an enthusiasm which swept along from the Piazza Venetia through the Corso until the deputies' building was reached. Mounted cuirassiers, in brilliant garb, formed an escort, while behind but close to the president were the faithful secret service guards.

Cheers Are Continuous.

It is said that the Roman crowds are undemonstrative, but certainly those lining the sidewalks behind the closely massed troops belied that reputation. There was not the loud roar and shrill shouting one hears on similar occasions in an American city. It was more like a subdued, continuous rumble, but its continuousness was impressive.

The scene in the great new chamber of deputies was equally impressive. When the president and king appeared the galleries began a round of applause which among the deputies rose to cheering.

A remarkable thing about the affair was how many there were who understood the president. His references to Italian and American friendship were loudly applauded.

Names of Men Released from Prison Announced

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Names of three officers and nearly 100 enlisted men who have reached France after being released from German prison camps were given out today. The death of Lieut. Edward T. Comegys of Washington, D. C., while a prisoner in Germany, also was reported.

The officers released were Capt. Henry A. House, Duluth, Minn.; Lieut. Christopher W. Ford, New York City, and Lieut. Herbert R. Kendall, Santa Ana, Cal.

The enlisted men from the central west were:

James D. Matchett, Glenwood, Ia.

George W. Olsen, 3350 Lowe avenue, Chicago.

Walery Staszak, Detroit.

Edgar J. Filbey, Balbo, Ind.

Lewis D. Christakos, Detroit.

Paul H. Graham, Monroe, Ind.

Mike Gedwill, 3203 Lime street, Chicago.

George Koletes, 507 North Dearborn street, Chicago.

James W. Dailey, Evansville, Ind.

Bjorne A. Amundson, Superior, Wis.

Leston W. Stacy, Walnut, Ia.

Ruckman Denies Charge of Injustice to Negroes

Boston, Mass., Jan. 4.—Brig. Gen. John W. Ruckman, who commanded the department of the south during the race riots in Texas, for which a number of Negro troopers were hanged, today branded as "absolutely false" the charges of George T. Page, president of the American Bar association, that the justice of the "United States army is questionable."

In answer to Page's charges that justice in the army is meted out under ancient laws, Ruckman declared that the laws under which army justice is now dispensed were enacted in 1916.

Col. George M. Dunn, judge advocate in the Department of the South at the time of the Texas riots, joined Ruckman in denying all Page's charges.

Subsea Boats on the Way Back to United States

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—The navy department announced today that thirty-one destroyers and seven submarines are on the way to United States ports. The destroyers should arrive at their home ports within the next ten days or two weeks, but the submarines are not expected to reach this country for about three weeks.

AFTER ALLIES FIX TERMS, FOES CAN SIGN THEM

Germany Cannot Aid in Writing Treaty, Paris Paper Says.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—[Havas.]—The peace conference, according to the Petit Parisien, will proceed as follows:

FIRST—A conference of the four great powers.

SECOND—Representatives of Belgium and Serbia to be admitted for a study of the general situation.

THIRD—Admission of the other allies for conferences on the problems interesting them.

FOURTH—Presentation of conditions successively to Germany, Bulgaria, Turkey, German-Austria, and Hungary, and the signing of the peace preliminaries.

Take Up World League Last.

FIFTH—A general conference concerning the questions of a league of nations, freedom of the seas, limitation of armaments, and related topics.

The Czecho-Slovak delegation to the peace conference will leave Prague for Paris on Jan. 6, according to a Basle dispatch today.

The Bolshevik government of Russia intends to send Adolph Joffre, the former Bolshevik ambassador at Berlin, as its delegate, to Paris to claim admission to the peace conference, according to the Echo de Paris today.

Take Up "Scrap of Paper."

The famous treaty which Germany designated as a "scrap of paper" will come up for early consideration before the peace congress. This is the treaty made in 1830 when the great powers of Europe recognized Belgium as being separate from Holland and guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium.

It was the disregard of this neutrality and the invasion of Belgium by the German troops which brought Great Britain into the war.

The Belgian parliament recently adopted unanimously a resolution asking for the establishment of the independent sovereignty of Belgium and the abandonment of the guarantee of neutrality. The resolution adopted by the parliament was in response to the speech from the throne made by King Albert when he reëntered Brussels.

Wants to Be a Great Power.

After expressing gratitude to the nations aiding in the deliverance of Belgium, the resolution says:

"The tragic and glorious hours which Belgium has experienced give it the right to free itself from the ties which, in the past, limited its sovereignty and enervated its international action. Belgium will thus pass to the rank of the great powers which are mistresses of their destinies."

Incidentally, Germany's designation of the treaty as a "scrap of paper" involves the general question of establishing some means of guaranteeing the inviolability of treaties.

GOMPERS SAYS U. S. MUST HALT JOBLESS PERIL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Discussing reconstruction problems before the senate committee on education and labor today, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the people of the United States would not countenance a condition of industrial stagnation after the war. He said he had discussed with many men of affairs since the signing of the armistice the question of industrial stagnation and they took issue with the assertion made in some quarters that hours of labor must be increased and that wages must come down.

"There can be no repetition in the United States of the same conditions that prevailed in 1893 and 1894, when men and women were hungry for the want of employment," he added.

The problem to be met at this time, he said, is as great as the problem of winning the war. He paid high tribute to the service of workingmen throughout the country during the war and said the same could be said of employers.

Your "Cable" May Go by Wireless, Is New Rule

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Interchange of facilities between the ocean cable companies and the wireless telegraph plants in so far as the government's own communications with Europe are concerned, has been authorized by Postmaster General Burleson. If cables are loaded to capacity, an announcement today said, government messages filed for transmission will be turned over to the wireless stations, unless special objection to radio transmission is made at the time of filing by the office sending the dispatch.

'U. S. OUR MODEL,' CZECHO-SLOVAK PRESIDENT SAYS

Expects Relief from Militarism and Church Dictation.

BY FRANK J. TAYLOR.

[Copyright: 1919: By the United Press.]

PRAGUE, Jan. 2.—"American ideals will be those of the Czecho-Slovak republic," President Masaryk declared today in summing up the peace aims of his newly formed country for the United Press.

Masaryk said the Czecho-Slovaks are confident that the peace congress will settle all boundary and political disputes for them, but that they are depending upon the coöperation of the allies, particularly the United States, for economic aid. He said he was confident the present territorial disputes with the Germans and Poles would be adjusted.

Polish-German Problem.

"The greatest problem at present is the disputes with the Germans and Poles," he said. "The latter for years have been the Germans' colonists. We will give no nation the right to occupy our border regions militarily. All troops must be withdrawn except enough under an allied leader to keep order until the peace conference settles our boundaries forever.

"There are German elements in Bohemia, but they far from represent our nation. However, they were intended by Germany as an advance guard. This proverbial pressure of Germany toward the east must be stopped. That is the lesson of this terrible war. But regulation of the boundaries of the Czecho-Slovak republic by the peace conference will settle all this.

Finance Question Waits.

"Our whole development depends upon the establishment of our boundaries, constitutional representation, and the stabilization of our finances. The money question cannot be settled until our boundaries are defined. We have confidence in the justice of the allies.

"Our internal problems are being solved. Bolshevism is a great danger, but order prevails throughout Bohemia. There have been some attempts by our enemies to send agitators into our country to make trouble, but none of them succeeded.

Separate Church and State.

"The republican program we are working out includes separation of the church and state. The old system is a relic of the Hapsburg régime. Emperor Karl relied entirely upon the church, and had nothing else. Although some of the clergy are agitating among the uneducated against the republic, the majority are accepting liberation of the church, after the American example in the United States."

Why So Many Prefer the Brunswick

THE Brunswick method of Reproduction is the wonder of the phonographic art. And it wins acclaim from two principal ideas: The Ultona and The Brunswick Tone Amplifier.

The Ultona is an exclusive invention, an all-record player to be had only on The Brunswick. It plays all makes of records as they should be played—with the proper needle and the precise weight—and with the proper diaphragm.

The Brunswick Tone Amplifier is built entirely of wood, according to a new process. In this "Throat" of the phonograph all metal is discarded. This brings purity and volume of tone. There is an absence of the usual metallic sounds. You've never heard any record at its best until it is played on The Brunswick.

Your admiration for this superior phonograph will compel you to award The Brunswick first place. Come in. Your judgment is final.

LAST WOUNDED TAKEN SAFELY OFF TROOPSHIP

Sea Subsides and Sun Shines on Rescue; Order Inquiry.

Fire Island, N. Y., Jan. 4.—The last wounded soldier was removed from the stranded transport Northern Pacific this afternoon.

The last wounded were easily taken off. From a wintry dawn, with snow, a biting gale, and a rough sea, the weather changed remarkably during the day. The wind subsided and the ocean became smooth. At 2:15 p. m. the last stretcher case was taken over the side.

Sailors Signal "All Clear."

Twenty soldiers so seriously wounded that it was necessary to carry them on stretchers down a stairway swung over the transport's side made up the final contingent of passengers to leave the vessel.

As the submarine chaser which carried them headed for the hospital ship Solace a sailor on the Northern Pacific signal platform wigwagged to shore an officer's message that none but navy men remained aboard the liner.

Thus after three days of cold, wet work in a biting wind that veered only a few degrees from the northerly quarter, the sailor men and their officers wrote "finis" to a story of offshore rescue work considered without parallel in the annals of American shipping—the removal without loss of life of 2,500 persons, nearly 300 of them badly wounded, from a stranded vessel.

See Sun for First Time.

As the first of the litter cases were lowered over the troopship's side the soldiers saw the sun for the first time since their transport ran aground within a few hours of their home port early Wednesday morning.

The submarine chaser, its deck brown with recumbent and sitting figures in khaki, sped away from the big vessel's lee in a flood of light as the sun for a moment broke through the wintry cloud. Motor boats followed in the chaser's wake, wallowing through the seas toward the Solace, which had edged shoreward to within less than a mile of the Northern Pacific.

Observers on shore, watching through glasses, saw the helpless soldiers raised aboard the hospital ship through the ports. The Solace was rolling heavily, but the navy men worked skillfully and the rescues were effected without accident.

Tugs Fail to Stir Ship.

Two big wrecking tugs, after an hour's work, failed to stir the stranded Northern Pacific, imbedded in ten feet of sand, and naval vessels began taking off baggage in an effort to lighten the vessel. A skeleton crew remained on the transport to aid wrecking operations.

When the green and white flag on the transport's stern, indicating the presence of army personnel, was hauled down, Col. Valentine, representative of the army transport service on the beach, started for the mainland. At the request of Capt. Connelly he assigned a detachment of fifty infantrymen and thirty medical corps workers, in command of Col. Pierce, to stand watch on shore during the night.

The infantry will leave the island tomorrow, but the medical unit, with two surgeons, together with sixteen men and two lifeboats of the coast guard, will remain on the beach until the liner is floated or its crew sent ashore.

Inquiry Is Ordered.

New York, Jan. 4.—A board of inquiry has been ordered to investigate the stranding of the United States transport Northern Pacific off Fire Island last Wednesday morning, it was stated this afternoon at the offices of Admiral Gleaves, head of the transport service in this port.

No arrests have been made, it was stated, but they will be made as soon as formal proceedings are completed.

The bodies of Private Howard H. Ashbridge, Company C, Three Hundred and Fourteenth infantry, Seventy-ninth division, and of Private James A. Newall, Company K, Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry, Eighty-second division, presumably soldiers who died during the voyage from France, were removed from the Northern Pacific to the Solace, a wireless message from the hospital ship said.

New York Pastor to Act on Lincoln Center Call Today

New York, Jan. 4.—Whether he will accept a call to serve with the Abraham Lincoln center, Chicago, will be announced by the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, Unitarian, at tomorrow morning's service in the church at Thirty-fourth street and Park avenue. The call to the Chicago institution is threefold, in that Mr. Holmes has been asked to act as pastor of the center, director of settlement activities, and editor of the center's weekly religious paper, Unity.

It became known to members of the New York Unitarian Congregation that Mr. Holmes was likely to accept unless the Church of the Messiah ceased to continue along the conventional lines of a Unitarian denomination, and became a social center, with social, educational, and humanitarian activities akin to those of a settlement, as well as an organization for spiritual inspiration.

GERMANS FORM VOLUNTEER ARMY TO FIGHT POLES

Battles Continue in Posen; Invaders Win Fortress.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—[By United Press.]—The German government and the central committee of the soviets have decided to form a volunteer German army to march against the Poles.

The people's councils in Posen and Danzig have organized a militia to oppose the Poles.

The Poles have captured Skalmierzvse, destroying the fortress there, and seriously threaten the German garrisons at Ostrova and Krotoschin.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 4.—German troops defeated the Polish invading forces in battles at Lissa and Nakel, a Berlin dispatch reported today. The Germans' superiority in artillery gave them the victory.

[Lissa is fifty-two miles southeast of the city of Posen. Nakel is sixty miles northeast of Posen.]

The Berlin dispatch said Prussian Minister Ernst had conferred with some Polish delegates and that the latter had agreed that no attempt would be made to sever the province of Posen from Prussia before the matter could be taken up at the peace conference. It is not known whether these delegates had sufficient authority to reach an understanding by which the Polish invasion would be called off.

Hold Eastern Part of Posen.

Ernst is said to have admitted after the conference that the eastern portion of Posen province is in the hands of the Poles.

The German armistice commission has protested that the presence of Ignace Paderewski in Poland is causing dangerous excitement, and has demanded that the allies order him to leave, according to the Berlingske Tidende.

Deny Berlin Is in Peril.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 4.—The German war office today denied reports that 30,000 Poles are marching on Berlin, a dispatch from that city announced.

U. S. POLES GO TO FIGHT.

New York, Jan. 4.—The French line steamship France, which sailed today, carried a battalion of Poles numbering 1,554 men, recruited in America for the Polish army.

Doubts Big Invasion.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Representatives of the Polish national committee in Washington have notified the state department that they do not take seriously reports that a Polish army is marching on Berlin. They said that in their opinion the Poles had trouble enough in the vicinity of Vilna in warding off the threatened attack of the Bolsheviki without attempting to invade Germany.

It also was stated that the force reported in the German invasion was absurdly inadequate for such a purpose.

Acting Secretary of State Polk said the department had no information officially on the subject, but that he doubted that the Poles were contemplating an invasion of Germany.

Launch Ship Named After T. E. Wilson's Children

Chester, Pa., Jan. 4.—The Edellyn, first of the Delaware river 1919 fleet of cargo carriers, was launched today at the yard of the Sun Shipbuilding company.

The sponsor was Miss Helen Wilson of Chicago, who was chosen for the honor by Charles M. Schwab before he retired as director general of the Emergency Fleet corporation. Miss Wilson is a daughter of Thomas E. Wilson, the Chicago packer. The name Edellyn is derived from Edward and Helen, the names of Mr. Wilson's two children.

The Edellyn is 12,500 deadweight tons. It is a sister ship of the Marica and South Bend, recently launched.

Health of Army in U. S. Shows More Improvement

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Continued improvement in health conditions of troops in the United States is shown by the surgeon general's report today for the week ended Dec. 27. Both influenza and pneumonia cases decreased, and the port of embarkation, Hoboken, N. J., was the only station reporting more than 100 cases of influenza for the week. Eleven new cases of beri beri were reported from Camp Las Casas, Porto Rico.

Editor of Swedish Paper Tells of Reforms in Scandia

Sweden has carried out many internal reforms, according to Alexander J. Johnson, publisher of the Swedish Courier. He pointed out the nation's advances on suffrage matters and voting questions. He said:

"The lower house of the Swedish diet has, since 1909, been based on direct and personal manhood suffrage, but paupers and persons liable for unpaid taxes were excluded.

"The upper house is elected by provincial assemblies, the members of which are elected by communal suffrage, but only payers of direct taxes had the right to vote, and they had from one to forty votes each, in accordance with a scale based on the total income for which they were liable to pay municipal taxes. Corporations were entitled to vote, and plural voting was allowed. Taxpaying women were entitled to vote.

"The different origin of the houses has caused to be elected to the lower house a democratic majority of the left, viz., Liberals and Labor party, and to the upper house a Conservative majority. The importance hereof is obvious, as both houses are constitutionally equal, all questions coming up for discussion simultaneously in both houses. For the passing of new laws the consent of both houses is required.

"The budget is not treated as a whole, the various taxes and expenditure items being voted on by each house separately. Budgetary questions are finally decided by a majority of the whole Riksdag, both houses voting together.

"The substance of the present sweeping reform, of which the most important part has been carried through and which still remaining parts the different parliamentary parties have agreed between themselves and the government to pass during next session is as follows:

"All parliamentary and local elections are based on the most extended universal suffrage for men and women, irrespective of liability for taxes. Excluded are only persons under 23 years or those under guardianship paupers in poor houses, temporary bankrupts and certain criminals. Every elector can only vote in his legal domicile, plural voting being abolished. The right to vote is purely personal, corporations being henceforth excluded.

"The above principles apply also to the provincial assemblies electing members to the upper house. This, therefore, also henceforth rests on a purely democratic basis. Electors of these provincial assemblies must be 27 years old and members of the upper house, as now, at least 35 years. The electoral period, now six years, has been extended to eight years.

"By this reform the electors of the lower house have been increased by about 20 per cent, hitherto excluded as receiving public support or liable for unpaid taxes. Further must be added all women.

"In local self-government qualified majority is required for the deciding of certain economic questions. In greater municipalities the functions of primary assemblies have been taken over by representative bodies."

Fake Lieutenant's Bond of $1,000 Forfeited

The bond of "Lieut. Nabolski of the dental corps, United States army" for $1,00 was declared forfeited yesterday in Judge Caverly's court. There is such a lieutenant, but the young man arrested under that name a month ago is in reality H. Spratska of Stevens Point, Wis., according to J. W. Foillmer of the department of registration who arrested him.

Spratska, he says, had just finished a year in prison at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., for impersonating an officer and posing as "Lieut. Frensch." After he got out on bond recently, it is charged, he put over another bad check, for $55, on Langrebe & Beart, dental supplies, Masonic Temple building, and vanished.

Under the name of Nabolski, claiming that he had lost his license to practise dentistry in Illinois, Spratska not long ago deceived the Illinois department of registration into issuing a "duplicate license." However, the department investigated and found that the real Lieut. Nabolski is still in France.

Annual Dinner Postponed by Old Time Printers

The annual banquet of the Old Time Printers' association has been postponed to Saturday, Feb. 1, as the principal speaker, Col. Robert R. McCormick, is to be given a dinner on Jan. 18, the date previously announced, by his colege alumni. Opie Read, president of the Press club, has been invited to act as toastmaster. The banquet is the thirty-fourth to be given by the Old Time Printers' association, which was formed in 1885 and consists of printers and newspaper men who have seen twenty-five years or more of continuous service with the publishing industry in Chicago.

William A. Cahill is president; W. Fred Barnard, chairman of the banquet committe, and William J. Hartman and William J. Hack vice chairmen. The speakers' committee is headed by Bernard J. Mullaney, and includes John M. Ryan, Thomas E. Sullivan, William C. Hollister, and Senator Elect Medill McCormick.

The dinner will be given in the Gold room at the Congress hotel and more than 1,000 guests are expected.

INQUIRY IN DEATH OF CAMP GRANT MAN UNDER WAY

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—A board of inquiry held in the death of Sergt. Herbert Shaw, Company 3, One Hundred and Sixty-first depot brigade, is investigating the alleged accidental shooting of Shaw by a fellow soldier New Year's eve. Shaw died at the base hospital Thursday afternoon from wounds in the chest.

The first session of the board was held last night and thorough examination made of witnesses to determine whether the shooting was intentional.

The war department ordered today that gold, blue, and silver war chevrons must hereafter be a part of the uniform worn by every soldier.

Twelve hundred noncommissioned officers of the replacement unit at Camp Grant are to be discharged Monday and Tuesday.

In a letter from Lecorneau, France, under date of Dec. 8, Maj. Thomas L. Marshall has written Camp Grant officers that he is coming back with the Eighty-sixth division cadre. It is thought by some that he landed in New York on the Siboney yesterday.

H. F. COOPER, UNDERWEAR MAN, WEDS.

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—Announcement was made here today of the marriage of Henry F. Cooper, founder of the Cooper Underwear company of this city and one of the most influential men in the textile business of America, to Miss Bertie E. Hardy, daughter of W. L. Hardy of St. Louis, at the latter's home on Thursday.

170 UNFINISHED GERMAN U-BOATS TO BE GIVEN UP

LONDON, England, Jan. 4.—One hundred and seventy submarines, all under construction, were found when the allies' naval commission visited Germany to make arrangements for the carrying out of the terms of the armistice, according to newspapers here. These "U" boats, it is said, will be turned over to the allies.

Germany's newest battleship, the Baden, will be surrendered at a Britsh port within a few days, in accordance with the terms of the armistice, according to announcement here.

[The Baden has a displacement of 28,000 tons. Owing to the fact that this ship was completed after the war began little is known as to its armament. It has been reported that ships of this class had been armed with 16.5 or 17 inch guns, but information on this point has been meager and unreliable.]

The foreign office denies that a British ultimatum has been sent to the German commander in the Baltic region, as has been reported. It also declares it has had no reports of the landing of large British forces in the Baltic provinces.

Still the Airplanes Come In.

COBLENZ, Germany, Thursday, Jan. 2.—Sixty more German airplanes were accepted today by the Americans. One hundred more, which will be turned over to the Americans, have arrived here and trial flights are being given them by German aviators preparatory to their acceptance. So far all the machines offered have been accepted. All are brand new.

Ukraine Army Renews Fight for Lemberg; Bombards City

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 4.—According to Vienna advices to the Politiken fresh fighting has occurred during the last few days around Lemberg, where Ukrainian troops are making progress and are bombarding the city. The electrical works at Lemberg have been destroyed and considerable other damage has been done.

A Bolshevik revolution has broken out in Riga and street fighting is under way, according to the Lokal Anzeiger. The German theater has been set on fire.

Bolsheviki Enter Vilna.

WARSAW, Thursday, Jan. 2.—[By Associated Press.]—Bolshevist forces are reported in the outskirts of Vilna and towns on the railway between Minsk and Brest-Litovsk are said to have been occupied by them.

The Bolshevists are reported to be burning buildings and robbing and murdering peasants as they advance.

The Russian Baltic port of Libau, according to reports received here, is protected by one British cruiser, three destroyers, and one gunboat. The British warships, however, have landed no forces.

Semenoff Takes Rail Center.

IRKUTSK, Siberia, Wednesday, Jan. 1.—[By the Associated Press.]—New Year's finds Russia's internal strife accentuated and offering additional problems to the allies and the United States.

Gen. Semenoff, stung to action by the attempt made on his life at Chita, ordered his forces to capture the important strategic center of Verkhn Udinsk, midway between Irkutsk and Chita, and depose the officials. The correspondent, on his arrival at Udinsk, found two armored trains at the station and the Cossacks in complete control of the town.

Among those arrested at Udinsk was Col. Baronofsky, the military commander. The reason advanced by the Cossacks for the arrest of the colonel and other officers was that the officials were pro-Bolshevik. The townsmen, however, appear to think their offense was that they were favorable to Admiral Kolchak, the dictator of the Omsk government.

Japanese Do Not Interfere.

A large contingent of Japanese troops which was camped six mile from Verkhn Udinsk to guard the station did not interfere in the capture of the city by Gen. Semenoff, which assures him the domination of the railroad and telegraph lines in this section, as well as control of the great caravan route from China by way of Mongolia.

The operatives on the Siberian railway continue at work, but continually complain of conditions. They are paid with Bolshevik money and have just received their wages for September.

"Will Welcome Yanks."—Semenoff.

CHITA, Trans-Baikalia, Sunday, Dec. 29.—Defying the orders of his physicians, Gen. Semenoff, who was quite seriously wounded by fragments of a bomb thrown in a crowded theater here recently, received the Associated Press correspondent today. He discussed briefly the crisis in Russia, declaring that America is admired by Russians, who would welcome American troops in the battle against bolshevism.

"The landing of foreign troops on Russian soil is naturally distasteful," he said, "but it is necessary now to overthrow the Bolshevists."

Still at Odds with Kolchak.

Asked if his differences with Admiral Kolchak had been adjusted, he replied in the negative.

"Admiral Kolchak sent troops to Irkutsk," he said, "so I cannot say we are friends, but my Cossacks will always work for the best interests of Russia."

British troops have been paraded through the streets and the belief that American forces are coming seems general. A strong force of Japanese is encamped in the suburbs and is apparently sufficient to control the situation.

Japanese Withdraw 24,000 Troops.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Announcement that 24,000 Japanese troops will be withdrawn from Siberia is reported by a Tokio dispatch to the Express, quoting an official statement issued by the Japanese war office on Dec. 27. The statement, according to the dispatch, says that Japan intends to maintain henceforth only the smallest possible force in Siberia.

"Public opinion here," says the dispatch, "deplores the withdrawal. Allied observers, American as well as British, speak bitterly of intervention as being relatively a failure, owing to disunity among the allies and their mutual jealousy."

Eighty-six Die in Archangel.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—An official report received from the American military attaché with Ambassador Francis in Russia, announced today by Gen. March, shows total deaths from all causes in the American forces in the Archangel region up to Nov. 25 to be eighty-six.

Of these, nine were killed in action, even died of wounds, three drowned, and two died as a result of accidents and sixty-five from disease.

Official reports, Gen. March said, show that the military situation at Archangel is entirely in hand and that the troops are adequately fed and clothed for winter campaigning in that section.

WILSON ASKS 100 MILLIONS TO FEED MID-EUROPE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—President Wilson's first legislation recommendation based on his study of conditions in Europe looks to the relief of distress of populations "outside of Germany" which are threatened with starvation.

Request for immediate appropriation of $100,000,000 to supply food to liberated peoples of Austria, Turkey, Poland, and western Russia, who have no recognized governments and are unable to finance international obligations, was transmitted today to congress by Secretary Glass on cabled instructions from the president.

Mr. Glass went personally to the capitol for a long conference with Democratic leaders of the house and legislation to carry out the president's recommendations will be introduced by them after conferring with Republican leaders.

$1,500,000,000 in 7 Months.

The president's message said that food shipments worth $1,500,000,000 must be made from the United States to Europe in the next seven months. An international organization, directed by Herbert C. Hoover, will supervise the distribution of the supplies, most of which will be paid for by persons able to find the necessary resources.

The appropriation requested by the president will take care of the population in other districts, notably in eastern and southern Europe which have been ravaged by war and where freedom and governments will emerge only "slowly" out of chaos.

President's Message.

The text of the president's message follows:

"Extended investigation and consideration of the food situation in certain parts of Europe disclose that essentially the urban populations in certain areas are not only faced with absolute starvation during the coming winter, but that many of the populations are unable to find immediate resources with which to purchase their food.

"These regions have been so subjected to destruction by war, not only of their foodstuffs, but of their financial resources and their power of production and exports, that they are utterly incapable of finding any resources that can be converted into international exchange for food purchases.

"While the secretary of the treasury can accept obligations of certain governments and through these measures their situations can be cared for temporarily, there are still other areas through eastern and southern Europe where such arrangements cannot be made.

Freedom Requires Aid.

"This applies more particularly to the liberated peoples of Austria, Turkey, Poland, and western Russia. In these countries freedom and governments will slowly emerge from chaos and require our every assistance. The total shipments of foodstuffs from the United States to all parts of Europe during the next seven months will be likely to exceed $1,500,000,000, and from our abundance we can surely afford to offer succor to these countries destitute of resources and credits.

"The minimum sums upon which this work can be carried on for the next six months in the countries mentioned will amount to at least $100,000,000 for such services and supplies as we can render, and even this sum contemplates the finding of resources by so much of the population as can do so and as much assistance as can be given by the allied governments.

High Mission of U. S.

"The high mission of the American people to find a remedy for starvation and absolute anarchy renders it necessary that we should undertake the most liberal assistance to these destitute regions.

"The situation is one of extreme urgency, for foodstuffs must be placed in certain localities within the next fifteen to thirty days if human life and order are to be preserved. I, therefore, request that you should ask congress to make available to me an immediate appropriation of $100,000,000 for the broad purpose of providing for foodstuffs and urgent supplies, for the transportation, distribution, and administration thereof to such populations in Europe, outside of Germany, as may be determined upon by me from time to time as necessary.

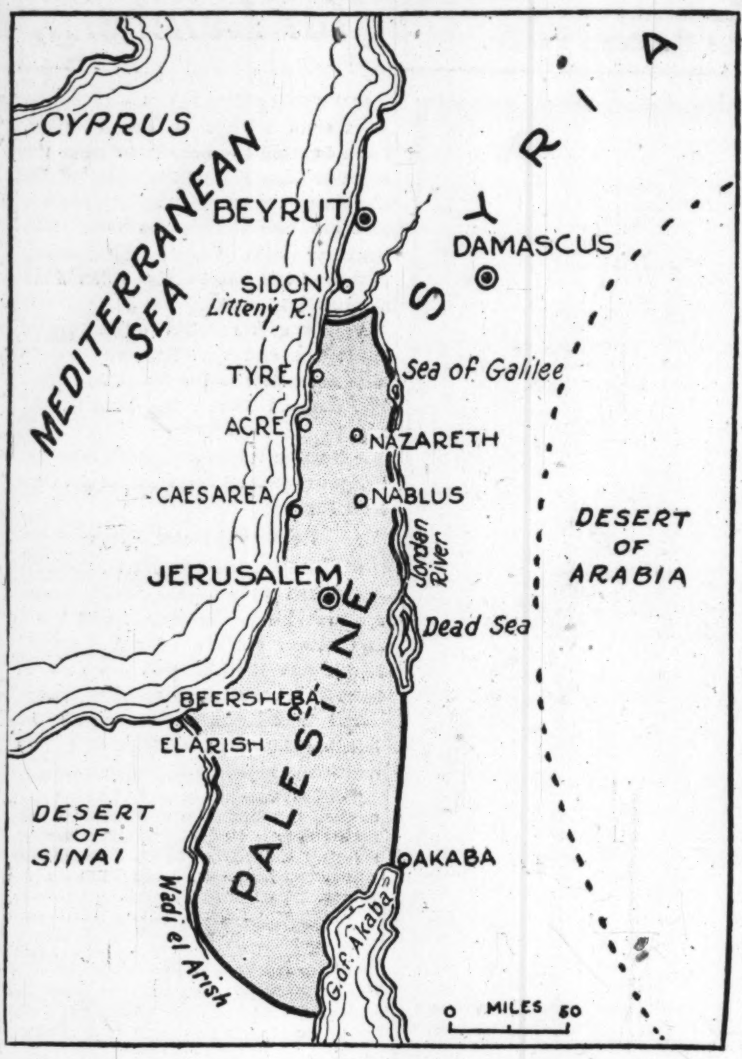
Small Compared with Good.

"I wish to appeal to the great sense of charity and good will of the American people towards the suffering and to place this act upon a primarily humanitarian basis of the first magnitude. While the sum of money is in itself large, it is so small compared to the expenditures we have undertaken in the hope of bettering the world that it becomes a mere pittance, compared to the results that will be obtained from it and the lasting effect that will remain in the United States through an act of such broad humanity and statesmanlike influence."

CROCKERY JACK.

Porcelain money has been made in Siam for circulation among the natives.

THE NEW PALESTINE



Dr. Sokoloff, a leader of the Zionist committee in Paris, has outlined the boundaries of Palestine that will be urged at the peace conference. In an interview with Walter Duranty, correspondent of "The Tribune" and New York Times, he said:

"We ask not for the greater Palestine of Solomon, but simply for the tract of country between our ancient boundaries, and to Beersheba, or, in modern terms, from the River Litteni to El-Arish. Westward our limit should be the sea, eastward it may be that the new Arabian kingdom will preclude our extension beyond the River Jordan, which would thus form our eastern boundary.

"Otherwise we feel that the region around Hauran and the desert tract southeastward in the direction of the Gulf of Akaba might be included in our territory. At present it is barren and practically uninhabited, but could be irrigated, as in ancient times."

Blind Bavarian Peasant Saw the Trend of Events

ZURICH—[By United Press.]—Ludwig Gandorfer, blind peasant of southern Bavaria, is credited with having helped arouse the people of Munich to revolt in an article on the revolution published in the Munich papers.

Kurt Eisner aroused the people with his oratory and energy while the peasant appealed to their emotions, it is explained.

Gandorfer and Eisner walked arm in arm through the Munich streets on the day of the revolution.

QUAKES IN CALIFORNIA.

DEMOBILIZATION IN FINAL STAGE, MARCH REPORTS

30th, 37th, and 91st Divisions Designated for Early Return.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Demobilization of the army is approaching its final phases with the breaking up of the combat divisions in this country and the issuance of orders for early return of the first three fighting divisions from France.

Gen. March, chief of staff, announced today that Gen. Pershing had designated the Thirtieth and Thirty-seventh (national guard) and the Ninety-first (national army) divisions for early return, while in the home training camps 40,500 men of the combat divisions, heretofore held intact, had been ordered discharged.

1,379,000 Picked for Discharge.

The three overseas divisions, with the headquarters troops of Maj. Gen. Read's Second corps, also designated for return, total 83,000 men. Gen. March said that, including these divisions, the total number of men available for discharge was 1,379,000 and that 40,491 officers and 630,369 men had been mustered out up to yesterday.

The chief of staff also disclosed that the war department was preparing to take into the regular army, under the proposed reorganization plan, those reserve and temporary officers whose records during the war show them to be fitted for professional military life.

First and Last in Europe.

Official records of the war department, announced by Gen. March, show that the First regular division, the first unit to arrive in France, landed in June, 1917, and that the last American division to land was the Eighth, in October last.

Between those dates forty divisions were sent overseas, the advance elements of each being landed as follows: August, 1917, Second division; September, Twenty-sixth; November, Forty-second; December, Forty-first; February, 1918, Thirty-second; March, Fifth and Third; April, Seventy-seventh; May, Eighty-second, Thirty-fifth, Twenty-eighth, Fourth, Twenty-seventh, Sixth, Thirty-third, Thirtieth, and Eightieth; June, Seventy-eighth, Eighty-third, Eighty-ninth, Ninety-second, Ninetieth, Thirty-seventh, and Twenty-ninth; July, Seventy-sixth, Seventy-ninth, Ninety-first, and Thirty-sixth; August, Eighty-fifth, Seventh, Eighty-first, Eighty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth; September, Eighty-seventh, Eighty-fourth, Eighty-sixth, and Thirty-fourth; October, Thirty-first and Thirty-eighth.

Deny Rainbow Rumor.

Gen. March, chief of staff, answering today a plea from anxious mothers, denied a report that Batteries B and D, One Hundred and Fiftieth field artillery units of the Forty-second (Rainbow) division, had been wiped out.

The report was submitted to Gen. March in the following query:

"I am writing on behalf of about 150 anxious mothers begging for information of our boys with Batteries B and D, One Hundred and Fiftieth field artillery, Forty-second (Rainbow) division. We have had no word since before the armistice was signed, and as there is a rumor current that they were almost completely wiped out in the last battles we are almost beside ourselves with worry. So if you can find out where they are and a little of how they are we will be truly grateful."

Replying, Gen. March said:

"The commanding general of the Rainbow division, Maj. Gen. Charles T. Menoher, arrived here a few days ago and has taken over charge of the air service. His office has informed us that up to the time he left, which was a few days preceding, there was no such thing as here reported. The batteries were not wiped out."

Insurance Is a Treasury Adjunct.

Gen. March requested that attention be called to the fact that the war risk insurance bureau is an adjunct of the treasury department and does not come under the war department. He said his personal mail was flooded with inquiries regarding insurance.

SHILLALAH

It's Neither Furniture Nor Household Article and Wife Doesn't Want It.

NEW YORK.—A shillalah is neither a household article nor is it furniture, according to a ruling by Justice Finch in the Bronx Supreme court. Therefore in granting Mrs. Rebeka Cahill, the Bronx, custody of her infant daughter, $12 weekly alimony, and the contents of the home she once shared with John J. Cahill, an engineer, whom she accuses of cruelty, it was ordered that the bludgeon be returned to him. Peter C. Kelly, Mrs. Cahill's attorney, brandished the stick in court.

"This is the only thing my client doesn't claim," said he. "It was used on her by her husband and she doesn't want it near her."

Cahill denies having beaten his wife or that she had to leave him to save her life. Cahill has been ordered by the court not to molest her.

Silence Order at Meals Brings Wife a Divorce

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Mrs. Ida Schutenhaus was given an interlocutory decree of divorce from Richard Schutenhaus, owner of a garage, by Judge E. P. Morgan. She said that for many years her husband would not let her talk at meals. Her two daughters testified in her behalf. Mrs. Schutenhaus was awarded a mortgage valued at $15,000 and $1,300 in cash.

initiative and require individual enterprise. A public administrative body could hardly meet such requirements on a small scale, much less on the unprecedented scale that operation would assume if applied to our large and growing national marine.

"It has been suggested that the government operate its merchant marine for a limited period, availing itself of the high freights which the war has established and which will not instantly decline to normal levels now that active military operations have ceased.

Can Reduce Value.

"The theory underlying this suggestion is that the government can in that way amortize excessive war costs of construction and reduce the value of its fleet to a point within the resources of prospective purchasers and to a level more nearly approaching post-war commercial costs than the high book cost which our ships represent at the moment.

"This proposal has logic and some measure of attraction. But I incline to the opinion that a failure to achieve the larger commercial objectives through such an extension of the period of government operation would more than counterbalance, by its indirect losses, the immediate gains through government operation.

Needs Personal Interest.

"The management of a ship, the selection of cargo, the hunt for markets, the study of customers' wants, the nice calculation of loss and gain, the intricate problems of routing, with the delicate interrelation of all these factors, demand as an indispensable factor in the right solution of our shipping problem the element of personal ambition and individual interest.

"There is still an important government function which nothing can supplant. We should both build and operate, but not as a general policy; merely, in my opinion, as a stabilizing and contributory function in the upbuilding of our merchant marine. We should build a substantial number of ships, with the view of stabilizing work in our shipyards and bringing about that sustained and steady demand for tonnage of standard type that would enable our shipbuilders to reach the low costs without which the industry cannot be kept alive, and to attain that proficiency in the craft of shipbuilding which is a vital element in the problem of costs.

Must Do Pioneer Work.

"As to operation, the government may well undertake the pioneering for new trades, and by its own operations, pursued judiciously and not in any sense competitively with our own shipowners, establish regular lines for freight, with fixed schedules of sailings. This work, in fact, the government must undertake, to a large extent absorbing the initiative, which will be justified by the large benefits flowing to the nation's trade as a whole.

"Only when the nation's shipping is recognized as a national asset, not the exclusive concern of any one section of the country, not a source of enrichment to any special class, will we approach this problem with enlightenment. The test of any policy is not the profitableness of the immediate operation, but the benefit to the nation's trade and commerce as a whole. The merchant marine is the delivery system of the nation's business, and our shipping policy, must seek its vindication in the widening of our commercial field, in the multiplication and diversity of our undertakings, and in the deepening of the foundation of our national prosperity."

NO FOOD, NO GAS

Population of Proposed Landing Station Is 3 Whites, 2 Indians.

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—It had been the plan of the officers in charge of the mapping of the transcontinental airways to make a stopping station at Mecca, on the desert. This idea was abandoned, however, when a telegram was received by Col. Harvey Burwell, commander of Rockwell field, who had requested information as to whether the place would be suitable as a landing station during the air mapping flight from Rockwell field to Needles.

The telegram was from the night telegraph operator of Mecca and read as follows: "Population of this burg is three white men and two Indians. No food, no gas. Nothing but sage brush. Advise that the airplanes keep going."

Girls Are Blamed for Stolen Auto Joy Riding

YAKIMA, Wash.—The touch of springlike weather here has apparently called out the youthful joyriders, who have been unnoticed for some time.

John Herrington, night police sergeant, holds that young girls who ask youths to take them for rides are responsible for the recent increase in automobile thieving and says he will make a special effort to connect them with escapades so as to make them bear a share in the punishment.

SEEKS TO SAVE RAILWAYS FROM POLITICS OGRE

McAdoo Urges Five Year Rule to Keep Roads Out of 1920 Campaign.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—The breach between congress and the administration over the disposition of the railroads remained wide open today when William G. McAdoo, director general of railroads, concluded his argument before the senate interstate commerce commission for a five year extension of the period of federal control. Mr. McAdoo insisted he had no substitute plan to offer should congress refuse to pass his five year control bill. He urged the extended control to keep the railroads out of politics in the 1920 presidential campaign.

Grave misgivings were felt by members of the committee over the administration's threats to turn the railroads back to private ownership without awaiting additional legislation unless congress promptly grants the five year extension. If Mr. McAdoo succeeded in convincing the committee of anything it was the determination of the administration to execute this threat, which Senator Cummins of Iowa, the ranking Republican member of the committee, characterized as "nothing less than a crime."

With the committee almost a unit against Mr. McAdoo's five year program, steps are in the process of formulation to make the retention of the railroads mandatory until congress can enact legislation fixing their status or until the expiration of the period of twenty-one months after the proclamation of peace.

Believe Amendment Would Pass.

The law, as it now stands, authorizes the president to relinquish the roads at any time he sees fit. Senator Cummins said today that a measure would be introduced in the senate amending the railroad law to compel the administration to retain the roads until the enactment of new legislation.

If the temper of the committees is an index of the sentiment of the senate, such a measure probably will be adopted.

It is believed that the house might also favor such a measure. There is a feeling, however, that congress in the end will find itself powerless to restrain the president if he decides to turn the roads back to private ownership. The president has the power of veto and it is regarded as extremely improbable that the opposition could muster sufficient votes to pass such a measure over his disapproval. The chief hope of the opposition lies in the remote possibility that definite concerted action by both houses might influence the administration to change its attitude.

Approve Unified Operation.

There was no noticeable moderation today of the hostility of the committee to Mr. McAdoo's five year extension idea.

Many members declared themselves in sympathy with most of his other recommendations, particularly with regard to the permanent unified operation of the roads, but insisted that there was no reason to believe the country would be any more ready to solve the railroad problems five years hence than two years hence. Throughout the questioning of Mr. McAdoo, lasting in all about two hours, not more than one inquiry indicating friendliness towards the five year program was asked.

That was put by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin at the end of today's session.

Senator Townsend, Republican, of Michigan declared his belief that Mr. McAdoo's plan meant "five years of uncertainty, instead of two years of uncertainty." Mr. McAdoo counter thrusted at this criticism by declaring that the country was "less likely to get a matured plan in two years than in five years."

New Director to Be "Pledged."

The director general left the distinct impression among members of the committee that his successor would be pledged to carry out the policies already formulated. When Senator Townsend pointed out that Mr. McAdoo was retiring and that his ideas might not be the ideas of his successor Mr. McAdoo replied:

"It doesn't cut much figure who is the next director general. He will certainly be a man with qualifications."

Senator Townsend suggested that conditions might be just as bad five years from now as they are now. "Oughtn't we have a period to test each plan?" he asked. Mr. McAdoo didn't think so.

Suggests Big Consolidations.

Senator Gore, Democrat, of Oklahoma wanted Mr. McAdoo's opinion about the advisability of letting down the antitrust bars and permitting railroads to merge, "gravitating towards two or three big national systems."

"That would be only a paliative to the situation," Mr. McAdoo answered.

"What will we have demonstrated in five years?" Senator McLean, Republican, of Connecticut asked. "Suppose we fail?"

"Then we will have demonstrated a failure," Mr. McAdoo responded.

"But can we test one system by demonstrating another?" Senator McLean asked. "That's like practicing on a piano by playing a violin."

"Five years' experience would give us a conclusive result," insisted Mr. McAdoo.

Has No Other Plan.

"You won't convince the partisans of any school that your five year test has been conclusive," Senator McLean said.

Mr. McAdoo admitted that any plan was "full of risks," but maintained that his program was the least risky.

Senator Watson, Republican, of Indiana asked: "If congress votes down the five year proposal then you have no suggestion to make?" he asked.

"No, I have not," Mr. McAdoo replied.

"Beyond that you do not look?" Senator Watson continued. "You haven't in mind any system for the future guidance of congress?"

"No," Mr. McAdoo answered. "I reserve my judgment for further experience."

Sees Aid for Merchant Marine.

Mr. McAdoo undertook to impress upon the committee the importance of granting the five year extension in relation to establishing coördination between America's merchant marine, now building, and the railroads. Such a coördination is highly essential to the industrial and commercial development of the nation, he declared.

Senator Cummins trained his guns on Mr. McAdoo's contention that the five year extension should be granted to keep the railroad question out of politics in the next presidential campaign. He characterized Mr. McAdoo's idea as "novel."

"You can't stop that," said Senator Cummins. "The people are going to determine the solution of this problem sooner or later."

The Big Political Issue.

Mr. McAdoo explained that he thought the agitation would be less acute if the five year extension were granted.

"It's bound to be a big political issue in 1920," Senator Cummins insisted. He pointed out that all factions seemed agreed upon the advisability of permanent unified operation of the railroads.

"Why, then," he asked, "don't you go ahead now and advise congress of a plan for immediate solution?"

"We haven't enough information," Mr. McAdoo said.

Denies Conflict with Wilson.

Senator Poindexter, Republican of Washington, asked Mr. McAdoo if he didn't think his recommendation was in conflict with President Wilson's views as expressed in his annual address to congress on Dec. 2. Mr. McAdoo said he did not think so.

"The president made an urgent plea for quick action," Senator Poindexter said. "You are asking for an experiment."

"We would make more speed under the five year period than otherwise," the director general contended.

The administration, it was announced, will rest its case on Mr. McAdoo's testimony. It had been expected previously that several other officials would appear on behalf of the administration. The interstate commerce commission will present its views Monday. Commissioner Edgar E. Clark will act as the commission's spokesman. The railroad executives will be heard Tuesday, with A. P. Thom, their chief counsel, acting as spokesman. The railroad officials will meet tomorrow in Philadelphia to put the finishing touches on their program. They will oppose both the five year extension idea and the immediate return of the roads without additional legislation.

FIVE SUFFRAGISTS ARRESTED FOR TWO NEW 'WATCHFIRES'

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—The watchfire demonstration in front of the White House this afternoon at which President Wilson's address to the Italian chamber of deputies was burned by suffragists of the National Woman's party, ended with the scattering of the fire brands upon the pavement by the crowd and the arrest of Miss Alice Paul and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Jr. of Philadelphia and Mrs. Phoebe Munnecke of Detroit Mich., as they were trying to retrieve them.

A few minutes later, for again lighting a flare in the great urn standing in the center of Lafayette park, opposite the White House, Miss Mary Dubrow of New Jersey and Miss Julia Emory of Baltimore, Md., were arrested.

The first group was charged with injury to government property, and the second with lighting fires in a public park. All the women this time put up collateral of $25 each and will appear in court on Monday.

The paving stone in the sidewalk in front of the White House was cracked by the heat yesterday, but there was no interference by the police with the watchfire until this afternoon.

There will be no fire and no picket guard before the White House tonight.

DELIVERED HER NEW HUSBAND IN A MAIL SACK

COLUMBUS, Ind.—A parcel post wagon stopped in front of the home of Mrs. Jesse Van Wye of Columbus. The postman struggled with a large mail sack, apparently completely filled. When Mrs. Van Wye answered his knock he asked, "Does this package of 'male' belong to you?"

Mrs. Van Wye opened the sack, looked at the contents, and said, "It certainly does, and it is lucky for you that you did not deliver it to any other woman."

The contents of the package was Mr. Van Wye.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Wye were married recently. He is a mail carrier from the local office. The wedding was a secret for a short time, but when it became public other carriers at the office put Van Wye into the mail sack, placed it in a parcel post wagon, and delivered the sack and contents at the Van Wye home. Mrs. Van Wye was asked to establish her identity before being allowed to open the mail sack.

CIVIL WAR IS DIVORCE CAUSE

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Charles H. and Stella J. Andrews, eighteen months married, might have been happy if the wife's relatives, who were majors and colonels in the confederate army, had let the civil war alone when they came to visit the Andrewses in their Long Beach home. Because they scrapped over the historic incidents, the majors and colonels espousing the cause of the south and Mr. Andrews the soldiers in blue, Mrs. Andrews finally left her husband and returned to Jefferson county, Missouri, where her relatives live.

Mr. Andrews went to court seeking a divorce. The decree was granted.

MEN AND MONEY DRIVE THIS WEEK FOR JOB BUREAU

'War Council' Called to Plan for Returned Fighters.

Money and men to carry the soldier and sailor reëmployment campaign to the limit in Chicago will be the chief objective this week for the special government job bureau.

Executives of all Chicago welfare associations have been asked to attend a "war council" in offices of the bureau at 4 p. m. tomorrow when Manager Dudley Walker will outline the active coöperation which the organizations have pledged to give. Officers of the Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, K. of C. war service, and other bodies will be requested to supply solicitors to canvass the city, or funds to aid in making the reëmployment drive equal in extent and interest to the campaigns accomplished during the months of war.

"So far government appropriation is not sufficient to cover all of the plans formed for the benefit of our returning fighters," said Mr. Walker yesterday. "Splendid support has been accorded the federal bureau by Chicago organizations, and I am certain that an effective job army will be mobilized for active, daily coöperation by the welfare bodies.

"The War Camp Community service has already promised to send four girl workers to the bureau Monday. They will be supplied with telephones and will rake the city for additional job opportunities."

Twenty-five replies were received yesterday from employers addressed in the circular letter sent out by the bureau, and openings for 150 returned fighters were offered.

Opportunities for returning accountants, freight handlers, and clerks came in from Chicago railroad offices, indicating that federal directors of the roads are making good their promise of reëmployment.

The question of continuous service and day and night offices for discharged fighters will be taken up by federal employment officials tomorrow. Reports show that, although the government bureau is closed each night and on Sunday, coöperating bureaus maintained by the Y. M. C. A., Salvation Army, and other organizations remain on the job.

NEW U. S. BUREAU TO AID INDUSTRY SHIFT TO PEACE

Chicagoan Urges Revival of Public Works to Keep Labor Busy.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—Creation of a new division in the department of labor, to interest the nation in public works and private construction, was annouced today by Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson.

It will gather and distribute information to enable private industries to make the transition from a war to a peace basis without serious interruption, "obviating uncertainty or hesitation for want of the practical data upon which business judgment must depend," the official announcement says.

The first problem of economic reconstruction is to learn through a survey of business conditions how labor and capital can be profitably employed during the critical period, when manufacturing plants are being shifted from war to peace production and when markets are being canvassed for future output.

Organize Separate Bureau.

The inquiry was intrusted to the information and education service in the department of labor, but because of the volume of work, a new division of the service was authorized, which is now being organized by F. T. Miller, publisher of industrial periodicals, under Roger W. Babson, chief of the service. It is called the division of public works and construction development.

Louis F. Post of Chicago, assistant secretary of labor, in a statement asserting that the government does not look forward to any unemployment crisis and that there is no reason for alarm over the future, urged a revival of building to tide over the period of industrial reconstruction.

Would Push Public Work.

"Many municipalities throughout the country," Mr. Post added, "and many states as well have during the war either abandoned or suspended large public improvements. The federal government itself has practically abandoned its building program for the last two years.

"This accumulation of work should be undertaken at once as a means of providing buffer employment to carry us beyond the transition period and take up such unemployment slack as may result."

Crowell Urges Purchase of Three More Sites for Use of Army.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Purchase of cantonment sites is proposed by the war department at this time simply as a business proposition and not with special reference to any permanent military policy. This was emphasized by Assistant Secretary of War Benedict Crowell before the house committee on military affairs today when members sought to obtain a little more light on just what sort of a scheme for regular army and civilian training is planned for the future.

Mr. Crowell presented figures to back up his contention that the government will make money by buying the land on which fourteen national army cantonments are located. He estimated a paper profit of $2,500,000 to the government in the purchase as against paying rental and damages provided in the leases without having any property at the finish to show for it. Two of the sixteen cantonments, Camp Funston, Kansas, and Camp Lewis, Washington, now are owned by the government.

Would Ignore Army Feature.

"This question should be settled without considering in any way the military feature," Mr. Crowell said. "We have considered two alternatives. One is to buy the camps and the other to turn them back. In the latter case it would be necessary to renew for a three year period the leases, which expire June 30, 1919.

"When the size of the army and future method of training is determined, then as many of these camps as are needed can be used. The balance can be wrecked and salvaged at our leisure. The land could be sold for suburban property and thus salvage the sewage and public utilities."

In arriving at his estimate of $2,500,000 profit, Mr. Crowell deducted $4,206,000, the excess cost of purchasing the fourteen cantonments over rental and damages, from $6,717,000, the actual value of the land. The discrepancy between this figure given as actual value and $9,650,000, which he said it would cost the government to buy the land, was not explained.

In case of failure to purchase, he said it would cost the government, through the three years dating from next June, a total of $5,443,500.

Wants to Buy Other Sites.

Mr. Crowell advocated the purchase of three other sites, those at Camp Benning, Columbus, Ga.; Camp Knox, Stithton, Ky., and Camp Bragg, Fayetteville, N. C. It is proposed that Camp Benning shall be used for a permanent infantry training camp and Camps Knox and Bragg for permanent artillery camps.

Representatives Kahn, McKenzie, and others rebelled at the idea of deciding the question of the purchase of these three sites without having any information as to how many other camps are to be made use of by the permanent military establishment.

Mr. Crowell said that the war department has the authority to purchase the sites of these three camps, totaling 290,000 acres, but that as a question of permanent policy was involved the advice of the committee was asked.

The amounts asked for the purchase of land are $3,600,000 for Camp Benning, $2,500,000 for Camp Knox, and $1,500,000 for Camp Bragg. The construction program calls for $21,000,000 at Knox, $17,000,000 at Bragg, and $14,000,000 at Benning.

FAMINE

Cablegrams from Syria and Armenia Tell of Terrible Suffering.

CABLEGRAMS telling of famine conditions in the near east came to Chicago yesterday from relief workers in Syria and Armenia. They were transmitted through Secretary of State Lansing's office.

The first message, from Jerusalem, was signed "Trowbridge," and read as follows:

"Relief administered to extent of funds has greatly alleviated conditions, but large numbers have not been affected. Many are dying of prolonged underfeeding. In some centers 100 grams of bread and soup are all they receive per day. It is pitiful to see the gaunt figures in rags passing from door to door begging for food. Hundreds of children are walking about the streets scouring for morsels to eat."

Another cable, signed by Maynard Elmer, reads:

"There are 30,000 people dying by the hundreds each day from hunger and cholera. Refugees from latest massacres dying in the hills. Turks and Germans removed all available wheat. General starvation imminent. Wheat must be bought from Cossacks. Additional workers, especially physicians, imperative."

Still another from the Judson commission at Teheran says:

"Mortality is high here on account of exhaustion, especially among children."

Conditions in Beirut were outlined in a message that came via Cairo and reads as follows:

"Men, women, and children are prostrate on the streets from exhaustion. The people are grazing in the fields like cattle. Children come to relief houses with flesh hanging on bones like bags. Their voices are gone, but their eyes plead and implore for crusts."

Millions Would Have Died in Vain; Brief Reply to His Critics.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Speaking here tonight before the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, Secretary of War Baker declared it inconceivable that the peace conference would make the world war an insupportable tragedy by failing to provide for a league of nations or some other arrangement to prevent such disasters in the future.

"We here in America who have worked and paid," he said, "the fathers and mothers who have given their sons, surely have a right to some high assurances of future peace as a consolation for their sacrifices. One cannot close his eyes and think of the peace conference at Versailles without feeling that there hover over it the spirits of millions of dead men demanding that their sacrifices be not in vain, that the statesmen of the world now secure to mankind the blessings which they died to obtain."

Not Speaking for President.

Mr. Baker said he had no intention of speaking for the president, whose statements had been explicit and in whose hands the case of America was now placed.

"He stands with head erect," said the secretary, "in the ancient places of the old world where other kinds of treaties used to be made and represents a great and free people. He is the advocate not of a form but of a principle.

"It may be that there are voices in this country which quiver with hesitation and, here and there, timorous uncertainty, but back of him, in that council chamber are the voices of the democracies of the world, of the men who labor and the women who sacrifice; he is by force of events the spokesman of the democracy of the world, and the compensation of this war will be a new magna charta, a new bill of rights to liberate the children of the future from the burdens of the past."

Not a "Holy Alliance."

As to the proposal for a league of nations, Mr. Baker said it was not such a scheme as the holy alliance suggested by some of its critics.

"It is not proposed out of cabinets of absolute ministers," he said, "but is rather the passionate demand of the man in the street, the simple and the unsophisticated, who know little of the intrigues and wiles of statecraft, but who know a very great deal about the suffering and sacrifice which war entails.

"For my own part, I refuse to be timid about America's capacity to do new things which are needed in a new world. I decline to distrust our purposes or to shrink from moving forward because the road seems wider and higher than roads we have traveled hitherto. I do not know what form these arrangements can take. I am not wedded to any particular method of preserving the peace of the world. I do not believe that so great an object can be accomplished by merely adhering to a particular form of words or phrases."

Old Way Proved Failure.

The peace conference, Mr. Baker said, undoubtedly faced intricate and difficult geographical and racial questions. "It would be conceivably possible," he added, "to make treaties ending this war in the old way, quieting its present discords and dealing with each national claim as though it were individual and of no community interest.

"But we had a world organized in the old way in 1914," he continued. "In the last months of that year the heady currents of international misunderstanding swirled together, and I know of no more pathetic picture than that of the helplessness of the great and enlightened governments of the world as their statesmen watched the stream and realized that no provision had been made to stem it.

Saw but Could Not Avert.

Sir Edward Grey in London exhausted the arts of traditional diplomacy to gain a moment for reflection; everybody saw the horrible magnitude of the impending disaster, but there was no organized opinion of the world, there was no agency through which the sane restraints of humanity and justice could operate.

"It is inconceivable that the peoples of the world would be willing now to face the possibility of another such trial without perfecting in advance modes of concerted action which will restrain the madness of the moment and be assurances of just consideration, dispelling forever the illusion that either national greatness or national safety essentially depends upon the ability of a people to destroy life, wealth, and property without stopping first to test out the possibilities of accommodation and concord."

Arms Ready When War Closed.

Mr. Baker made only one reference touching criticisms of the war department recently voiced in the senate. "Although there is much talk of the United States having to rely upon Great Britain and France to supply its armies with heavy artillery," he said, "nevertheless American industry did, in fact, supply to Great Britain and France practically an equivalent to that made available to us from them.

"American industry was able to meet the demands made upon it, and on the day the armistice was signed our army abroad was thoroughly equipped with American made rifles and machine guns; some heavy artillery had been shipped, and the stream of supply of all types of artillery, ammunition, and equipment was beginning at such a rate as would have supplied our own vast forces entirely from our own sources within a very few months."

DRAFT HOUSING CODE TO SOLVE STATE PROBLEM

Aurora Senator and Experts Plan Law to Guard Health.

A "state housing code" for Illinois is being drafted by Lawrence Veiller of New York City, secretary of the American Housing association; Charles B. Ball of Chicago, of the Chicago department of health, and State Senator Harold C. Kessinger of Aurora.

The bill will be modeled upon the Michigan code passed two years ago. The Michigan law includes Detroit, and all other cities above 10,000 population.

The bill will be the most modern presented so far in any state legislature, and more stringent than the bill introduced two years ago by Senator Kessinger.

"The amount of the lot that can be builded upon, plumbing, at least one outside window for every room, including bathrooms, are features of the proposed code," Senator Kessinger said. "All classes of buildings, single, double, and apartment dwelling houses, will be included. Only jails, state institutions, lodging houses, and hotels are exempted.

Illinois Behind on Law.

"Illinois is far behind other progressive northern states in this legislation. New York passed a code twenty-five years ago, and recently Indiana, Minnesota, and Michigan have put such laws upon their statute books. Gov. Harding of Iowa recently called in 300 representative citizens from every county of the state to confer upon the housing situation, and a bill has been drafted and will be presented at the next session of the Iowa legislature.

"Housing reform was one of the principal planks in the platform of the Lloyd George party, which only a few days ago won a tremendous victory at the English polls.

Guard Against Disease.

"The finding of 14,000 unreported cases of tuberculosis in one of Chicago's most congested districts and the present influenza epidemic, point to the need of a 'housing code' for Illinois.

MILK DEALERS SEEK A TRIAL OUTSIDE COUNTY

Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen, who represents the eight indicted officials of the Milk Producers' association, made application yesterday before Judge Kavanagh for a change of venue from Cook county. He filed voluminous affidavits claiming that the people of Cook county were prejudiced against the milk producers. He also filed copies of articles printed by various newspapers in regard to the milk investigation at the time that milk prices were raised.

On the motion of Assistant State's Attorney Hayden Bell and Nicholas Michels, argument on the petition was postponed for two weeks.

The men under indictment are Charles H. Potter, president of the board of directors; Clinton J. Cooper, William A. Goodwin, Arnold Huber, Roy Lewis, Willis J. Kittle, Robert M. Oman, and Robert Reese.

Judge Orders Normal Car Service in Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 4.—Judge John C. Pollock of the federal court for the district of Kansas this afternoon ordered Philip J. Kealy, president of the Kansas City Railways company, to see that normal street car service, hampered for nearly a month by a strike of car men, be restored to normal in Kansas City, Kas., without failure, by Monday.

A new restraining order against the strikers was asked today in the federal court at Kansas City, Mo., by Clyde Taylor, general counsel for the railways company, when he presented to Judge Arba S. Van Valkenburgh a petition brought in the name of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings company of Chicago, holder of the first mortgages of the company.

Board Bill of Uncle Sam's Rabbits $150,000,000 Year

WASHINGTON.—[By United Press.]—Uncle Sam is paying a board bill of $150,000,000 a year for the armies of jackrabbits, prairie dogs, and other pestiferous animals that roam over the western plains.

This startling fact is disclosed in the annual report of the secretary of agriculture.

The army of retaliation, composed of thousands of farmers, is fast wiping out the pests, however, the report shows. In practically every western state the war is being waged. Gratifying reports have been received.

YOU CAN AFFORD IT AT CABLE'S

A Piano, Player-Piano or Victrola

You CAN'T afford to buy elsewhere before at least looking here.
Thirty-five years ago CABLE'S entered the piano business with an IDEAL and an IDEA.

THE IDEAL—

To let no cost stand in the way of increasing the quality of our instruments; to let no method or tradition stand in the way of our reducing their cost.

THE IDEA—

PIANOS

To build and to sell the CONOVER, a piano which, considering its musical qualities, should be known as the most conservatively priced first grade piano of today.

To build and to sell the CABLE, a piano so sturdy in construction and beautiful in tone, that we could proudly hallmark it with our own name.

To build and to sell the KINGSBURY, a piano in which we could so put our trust as to be able to say "Your money's worth, or your money back."

To build and to sell the WELLINGTON, a piano with an exquisitely mellow tone, yet produced in such cost-cutting quantities as to be known as the world's lowest priced high-grade piano.

PLAYERS

To build and to sell the EUPHONA, the world's lowest priced high-grade player-piano.

To build and to sell the CAROLA, a player-piano that, because of its marvelous Miniature Inner-Keyboard, would exactly duplicate the human touch.

To build and to sell the CAROLA SOLO INNER-PLAYER, a player so entirely different in conception and so infinitely greater in results obtained as to be called "THE MIRACLE PLAYER."

To build and to sell the EUPHONA AUTOMATIC REPRODUCING PLAYER, which can be played by hand, by foot-operated pedals, or by electricity.

And to sell the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN, musically the most beautiful piano the world has ever known. And, furthermore, to sell any of these instruments on Easy Monthly Terms of Payment.

PLANES, MOTORS, BICYCLES, TAKE NEWS TO YANKS

Y. M. C. A. Distributes "Tribune" Army Edition to Fighters.

BY WILLARD W. WILLIAMS.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Dec. 20.—Circulating newspapers among American soldiers in France is a job that would have an American distributing company gasping on the ropes. It involves hard work and danger. Shooting along rough roads in a motor truck at thirty-five miles an hour is just one of the high lights of the job.

Yet the circulation manager's work has redeeming features. He brings the home news daily to thousands who, otherwise, would be shut off from America for weeks at a time. And, let it be said now, it's a mighty pleasant thing to be able to do some little service for Uncle Sam's doughboys.

Use Airplanes.

Every day in the week—even Sunday—the Y. M. C. A. shoots thousands of papers to the soldiers. While fighting was in progress secretaries went up to first line trenches. The papers are the three printed in English in Paris—THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the New York Herald, and the London Daily Mail. Distribution methods range from auto truck to airplane and include "toting" on the back and swift passage on motorcycles run by generals' orderlies.

Take, for example, the manner in which from 50,000 to 65,000 papers—dependent upon railroad facilities—daily go out from Bar-le-Duc to what used to be, before the boche and Uncle Sam started running pursuit races, the Verdun, St. Mihiel and Montfaucon sectors.

R. W. Jackson, who used to run a drug store in Boise, Idaho, is the man on the back of the truck, the "works," as the soldiers call him.

All Get Papers.

In the truck are countless bundles, each wrapped, labeled, and intended for some specific unit. These units may be big or small, may be field artillery or aviation, may be in a big camp or a tiny collection of tents far back in the forest, a hospital or a headquarters.

Besides the addressed bundles there are many without labels. These are intended for the casuals along the road, the M. P.'s, the troops going and coming from the points of occupation, the labor battalions who keep France's once magnificent roads in such shape that Pershing's men can make good speed over them.

Buddy Gets "Tribune."

Legs swinging, a smile on his face, an armful of papers constantly hugged against a rotund breast, Jackson sits on the tailboard as genial as when he dished out nut sundaes to pretty girls in Boise.

"Here you are, Buddy," he shouts to a straggling doughboy, straggling wearily along, head down and pack weighing a ton or so.

A TRIBUNE goes fluttering to the roadside. Buddy looks up, sees it is news from home, dated that morning, and falls upon it with a glad yell.

The paper is better than a month's pay to that soldier. It cheers his spirit. It lets him know the folks back home have not forgotten him, as he had almost begun to believe they had.

Scramble for Papers.

Talk about strengthening morale, a letter or a paper from home are the two most powerful influences in the world among American soldiers. "Buddy's" case is repeated with hundreds of variations. At one place a battalion, hiking forward, is resting beside the road. Heralds, Tribunes, Mails by the dozen are dropped. Discipline is lost for a moment. The captain scrambles against a private, the lieutenant with a corporal for the coveted prize. The loser, be he cook or commander, never squeals.

At a cross road up the line two couriers wait. Each has a motorcycle and side car. Each is to rush big bundles to commands camped miles away, where papers are worth their weight in gold.

Airman Gets Forty.

In a field nearby is a small, graceful looking Spad. Alongside the road is its pilot, an eager eyed, ruddy cheeked, fur and leather clad youngster.

"Saw you coming and lit to get some papers for the boys at 6," he shouts as the truck halts.

"How many—forty do you?" responds Jackson, and counts them out.

Questioning developed that the "kid" dropped his first boche just before the war ended and was on his way back to camp to report, with becoming casualness, his exploit.

Roadmakers Halt Work.

Imagine a youth of 19, fresh from his first aerial victory, stopping to get some daily papers. Must mean something in the life of even a flyer.

The truck slows. Road repairs. Senegalese squatting in the ditch, making "little ones from big ones," as rock breaking gangs say. Colored men in the road, working cheerily just as they do on the asphalt at home.

Work stopped as if the noon whistle had blown. Maybe some of the labor battalion could not read, but all seemed as eager for papers as if they had been students of journalism.

On again, company of doughboys bathing in stream 100 yards or so from the road. A shout and whistle drew their attention. A bundle of papers did the rest. They were naked as they charged across the fields. No women about. Bet they shivered as they read. Early December.

Pershing Gets News.

Truck load lighter, nearing G. H. Q. Stop there. Many troops. Special bundle for Gen. Pershing. Others for nearby hospitals. Can't forget the boys who were shot up to save the rest of us.

On again. Papers going fast. Two thousand off at an aviation camp. Out by air mail this same afternoon to troops in German territory. Maybe some will fall into the hands of Heinie. Hope so. Then he can read how America and her allies are preparing to make him foot the bill.

Ippecourt at last and the end of the route. Jackson is tired, but still smiling. Lots of papers left. Lots of men after them, too; Y. M. C. A. secretaries, bound for outlying huts; soldiers with trucks loaded with "Y" supplies, ready to go, just waiting for papers; stray lieutenants, dispatch riders, picturesque lads who dash around the country at sixty miles an hour, weaving in and out of the crowded traffic, grazing death and grinning every moment.

Some job, being circulation manager for the Red Triangle and the soldiers. Many of the Newspaper row lads who think they know the game ought to give it a try in France. They would learn heaps.

JUST BEFORE BREAKFAST IN FRANCE

The Arrival of One of the Three Army Editions of American and English Newspapers Means a Certain Scramble for Possession. The Y. M. C. A. Distributes the Papers to the Soldiers in Germany, in Camp, and in the Hospitals.

GENERALS ASSIGNED TO POSTS.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Brig. Gen. William J. Nicholson has been ordered to Camp Upton to command the One Hundred and Fifty-second depot brigade, Brig. Gen. John A. Johnson to Camp Dix to command the One Hundred and Fifty-third depot brigade, and Brig. Gen. Devore to Camp Logan, Tex., to command the Thirtieth infantry brigade.

FIREMAN BURIED AS BLAST SHAKES LOOP LANDMARK

David Barrett, an assistant fireman, was seriously injured and people in Arcade court, one of the ol dlandmarks of the loop, 32 South Clark street, were thrown into a panic shortly after 5 p. m. yesterday when a boiler in the basement of the Pixley & Ehler lunchroom exploded under its subzero head of steam.

H. Ekstrom, proprietor of the Electrical Repair shop, two doors east of the lunchroom in the Arcade building, was thrown violently to the floor by the force of the explosion, which shattered windows and brought down plaster in ever ystoreroom on the court. He lost no time in turning in a still alarm, but when firemen arrived they found a dangerous blaze working into the court from the ragged hole torn in the lunchroom floor.

Fireman Pinned in Ruins.

Barrett was found pinned under the wreckage. He was rushed to St. Luke's hospital in a fire truck and examination revealed a broken legg, posible internal injuries, and serious burns about the face and head.

Anna Haney, 1013 Chicago avenue; Mary Turpin, 916 Winchester avenue, and Katy Bibe, waitresses, were alone in the lunchroom. They escaped injury. Estimated damage amounted to several thousand dollars. Callistus Ennis is agent for the building.

An investigation into the explosion has been ordered because of admissions made by Charles J. O'Connor, 5411 Gladys avenue, engineer in charge of the high pressure steam plant, and his regular fireman, Harry Downey. O'Connor, the police said, admitted having "just stepped out for twenty minutes." Downey said he had gone up to the fourth floor five minutes before, leaving Barrett, with no knowledge of operating a steam plant, in charge of the place.

Injured by Gas Explosion.

Nathaniel Johnson, welder, 1302 South Wabash avenue, was probably fatally injured yesterday while working over a can of acteyleyne gas, which exploded, blowing away a part of the rear wall of his shop and breaking adjoining windows. Firemen took Johnson to St. Luke's hospital, where a broken collar bone and internal injuries were discovered. No fire followed the explosion.

GROWS MOST BEANS.

A few miles south of Los Angeles is the largest bean acreage in the world under one ownership. The Irvine ranch has 35,000 acres planted in beans, which bring the growers something more than $3,000,000.

CHANNON FAMILY SERVICE RECORD ANSWERS STELK

Father of Red Cross Driver Proves His Americanism.

The Channon family—father and daughter—paid its respects in no uncertain terms yesterday to Judge Stelk, who has impugned the Americanism of Miss Elizabeth Channon, Red Cross emergency driver.

The now famous controversy as to whether two emergency drivers should have satisfied the dignity of the law and Judge Stelk by appearing in his court also brought a statement from the jurist.

"Judge Stelk seems to be stretching things rather far when he impugns the Americanism of my daughter, who in all weathers for the last year has been driving her car to aid Red Cross work," said James H. Channon, the father. "If the laws are being made a joke of, as Judge Stelk claims, he might have selected a far more flagrant case as an example than one in which proper and complete explanations were made to him. If is a touchy and rather precarious 'dignity,' it seems to me, that is offended so easily.

Gives Family Record.

"And so far as '100 per cent Americanism,' as Judge Stelk phrases it, is concerned, with my daughter defying the weather to help her country at home and my son-in-law, Jerome P. Bowes Jr., now with the army of occupation in Germany after being gassed at Chateau Thierry, I hardly feel the Channon family need fear comparison of its Americanism with that of the president of the Illinois Staats Zeitung company."

"I did not try to avoid doing my full duty," said Miss Elizabeth Channon, the "culprit." "A year ago I was summoned for illegally parking my car. I was in the wrong then, took my medicine, went to court, and paid my fine. This time I had tried to aid wounded soldiers arriving here on trains and used my car as an ambulance. The train was late and my car was parked an hour and twenty minutes after 4 o'clock. When Mrs. Springer and I were summoned we were told not to appear by our superior officers, as the affair could be explained. We only obeyed."

Stelk Issues Statement.

Judge Stelk's statement, telling of his talk with Miss Florence Spofford, head of the emergency drivers of the Red Cross, said:

"She came to see me privately and asked that I excuse the two women from appearing in court. I retorted that in view of the fact that they had not come upon the first summons and had stated they did not have to appear because they had influence, I did not think they were showing the right attitude; that 100 per cent Americanism required recognition and obedience to the laws, the courts, and the institutions enforcing them, and that if they would come into open court and make their explanations that would undoubtedly end the controversy.

Denies Use of "Culprits."

"It is absolutely untrue that I classed the defendants as 'culprits' or that I employed any harsh or abusive terms in reference to them. I appreciate full well, as any right thinking citizen must, the exemplary services and sacrifices rendered by a large number of people connected with the Red Cross, as well as with other patriotic institutions."

Meanwhile the case has been continued until Jan. 10 to give Judge Stelk the opportunity to get the views of other lawyers as to whether or not the city has a right to take a nonsuit.

CONVICTED BOYS' MOTHERS BEG TO BE KILLED

"You have taken my boy away from me, kill me, kill me," shouted three women in Polish just before they fainted yesterday in Judge Kavanagh's court when their sons were sent to the Pontiac reformatory on indeterminate terms of from one year to life.

The boys were convicted of robbery with a revolver by a jury. Judge Kavanagh refused to grant them a new trial and sent them to the reformatory. The mothers, after making an unavailing plea through an interpreter, fainted as their boys were led from the courtroom to be taken to jail.

"The innocent members of the families must always suffer in these cases," said the judge. "But the law must be enforced and guilty criminals punished."

Dr. Pinkston
Makes Shoes to Fit Your Feet
OR
Feet to Fit Your Shoes

Dr. Pinkston has originated and designed several different style shoes on the triple combination last for perfect and imperfect feet. It matters not whether your bunions are large or small, or whether there are no bunions at all. He made his shoes two widths narrower in the heel, one width narrower in the arch, and two widths wider through the ball of the foot than any other shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel prevents the shoe from slipping up and down. The narrow arch keeps the foot from sliding forward. The broad ball gives perfect comfort and freedom to the toes. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend entirely upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot. Most people have the mistaken idea that to have the feet comfortably dressed it requires an unsightly shoe. Dr. Pinkston's shoes are truly stylish shoes, and not anatomic shoes, nor have they a stiff, heavy, clumsy, broad toe, flat heels, such as are recommended for foot comfort.

Foot troubles affect the body in many different ways: The feet swell, burn, ache and have sharp pains under the heels; the ball of the foot is sore and feels as if walking on marbles. Ankles become weak, legs cramp, and knees stiffen when ascending stairs. Pains are produced in the hips, small of the back, shoulders and neck. Poor circulation, inability to walk with comfort.

Dr. Pinkston has solved the foot problem. He can relieve you of all of your foot troubles and cure nine-tenths, regardless of the nature or condition of the ailment. He was forced to originate and design a comfortable, dressy shoe for ladies. His motto is not only to cure foot troubles, but to prevent them and to keep the feet well after they have been cured, and that is just what Dr. Pinkston's shoes do.

Dr. Pinkston has an exclusive shoe shop of ready to wear and made to measure shoes in connection with his foot specialty work.

An early visit will convince you that he has the shoe you have long been looking for.

ASSEMBLY OPENS WEDNESDAY WITH SPEAKER FIGHT

Shanahan Claims Support of 58 of 90 G. O. P. Members.

The Illinois general assembly meets Wednesday noon at Springfield in its Fifty-first biennial session. As usual the speakership of the house is the undetermined quantity in the problem of organization of the legislature.

Friends of Speaker David E. Shanahan express the utmost confidence that he will be renominated by the Republican house caucus that will be held in the Leland hotel, beginning at 8 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Shanahan managers now claim that fifty-eight of the ninety Republican members of the house are committed to Mr. Shanahan's candidacy. To secure the caucus nomination requires forty-six votes, a majority of the ninety Republicans who will sit in it.

League Also Confident.

Mr. Shanahan is opposed most strenuously by the Anti-Saloon league of Illinois. The expectation of the league, as expressed yesterday, is that the league will be able to name its candidate for speaker in the Republican caucus and that Shanahan will have not to exceed forty-two votes at the maximum.

The Anti-Saloon league has called a conference of the dry forces at Springfield for tomorrow afternoon.

The identity of the candidate upon whom the league will center its support in the last analysis has not been determined, or at least has not been disclosed publicly. At least twelve candidates figure as real possibilities for the ultimate indorsement of the headquarters committee of the Anti-Saloon league. The twelve, most of whom are active in getting the support of representatives in their own particular sections of the downstate are:

Brewer of Whiteside, Boyd of Henry, Bancroft of Cumberland, Ellis of Kane, Flagg of Madison, Hicks of Winnebago, Meents of Iroquois, Perkins of Logan, Pace of McDonough, Rowe of McLean, Sonnemann of Macoupin, and Watson of Hardin. Persistent report is that Tice of Menard will be a candidate. He has said that he is out of it.

Five Active Candidates.

In the foregoing list Boyd, Flagg, Perkins, Pace, and Watson are in the open as announced contenders and will have their respective headquarters open at Springfield tomorrow morning. There are substantial indications that Meents of Iroquois will figure strongly in the final heat of the race.

Boyd, who is from the northwestern section of the state, has announced that he will go into the caucus, regardless of the action of the Anti-Saloon league and is to be recognized as a candidate until there is a decision. Flagg, who is from the East St. Louis country, was the first of the field to get into the going and has made a campaign that started immediately after the primaries. Perkins is understood to have the support of some of the central Illinois members, particularly in the Bloomington and Decatur district. Pace announced his candidacy last week and is understood to have the backing of the Republicans of the military tract counties. Watson will reach Springfield as the first choice of the southern Illinois drys.

Showdown Due Tuesday.

The indications yesterday were that the showdown will come in Tuesday night's caucus upon the proposition of whether or no there is to be a secret ballot rather than a roll call of the Republican members and a viva voce vote. The secret ballot system is the time honored custom that has governed every Republican caucus in thirty years, the old-timers say, but the chances are more than good that the dry leaders will attempt to force a roll call and a record vote as the first test in the speakership fight.

All sorts of possibilities are involved in the row that may be precipitated. Col. Frank L. Smith, the Republican state chairman, will preside over the preliminary organization of the caucus. It is indicated by conservatives in each camp that an agreement as to procedure is likely to be reached through conferences that will start tomorrow at the state capital and be concluded before the caucus meets.

Democrats on the Alert.

The Democrats are overlooking no bets. The political hope is rampant in the Democratic organization headquarters that a situation can be created through a Republican smashup whereby Representative Michael L. Igoe of the Hyde Park district can be elected speaker. He is certain to be elected minority leader at the Democratic house caucus that is now called by State Chairman Ernest Hoover of Taylorville for Tuesday night at the St. Nicholas hotel. It is probable that he will be unopposed for the minority leadership.

The Republican senators will caucus Tuesday night at the Leland and the Democratic senators will agree to their program the same night at the St. Nicholas. The bulk of the Cook county members will depart for Springfield Tuesday morning. The advance guard will depart this morning, including Speaker Shanahan and several of his friends. Early arrivals from downstate, particularly the speakedship possibilities, are due to reach Springfield late this afternoon.

WORLD'S WILD BEAST TRAFFIC IS TAKEN AWAY FROM GERMANS

NEW YORK.—It's the "right lower exit" for German agencies which virtually controlled the wild animal market prior to the war.

"We are through with them for all time," Dr. W. T. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoölogical park, said. "While I do not speak for the executive committee, I feel certain that German agents never again will supply animals for the New York zoo."

To take the place of the Hagenbecks and other German wild animal companies the World's Zoölogical Trading company was organized recently in London. It will have agents in every part of the world. It is the result of a suggestion by Dr. Hornaday.

This new trading company will deliver animals direct to its agencies, one of which will be in New York City. The Duke of Bedford, G. Tyrwhitt-Drake, mayor of Maidstone, and Dr. P. Chalmers Mitchell, secretary of the London Zoölogical society, are officers of the company.

A shipment of giraffes, lions, tigers, leopards, elands, ostriches, zebras, and hoodoos will be received in New York and Philadelphia in the early summer from the new company's agent at Pretoria, South Africa.

COLUMBUS BOATS FIND NEW FRIENDS

The wave of indignation, that started when the south park commissioners voted to destroy the Columbus caravals, has caught the Knights of Columbus and the Italian society, and several important business men in its fervor. The two societies are going to fight to have the ships preserved.

According to the park commissioners, the expense of keeping the ships is so great they cannot maintain them longer. One of the ships, the Nina, is resting on the bottom of the Jackson park harbor, and the others are in wretched condition.

"If these ships were dry docked for the rest of the winter and then rebuilt next summer we would have three of America's most historic relics," said Daniel F. Crilly, yesterday. Mr. Crilly was president of the park board at the time the ships were turned over to Chicago by the World's Fair association. "It would be a small expense, and if once properly repaired they would last forever."

Oak Park Plans to Open High School at Night

Plans for the establishment of a night high school in Oak Park will be discussed at a meeting of representatives of Oak Park civic organizations and school trustees to be held in the Lowell grammar school, Lake street and Forest avenue, Oak Park, next Thursday night. It will be necessary to have the legislature make changes in the school law.

LEWIS TO FORE IN DEMOCRATIC MAYORALTY RACE

Regulars Consider Making Senator Their Candidate for Place.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis yet may become the harmony Democratic candidate for mayor of Chicago. Negotiations that have passed the tentative stage and are getting close to something definite have been in progress for forty-eight hours. The Democratic executive committee did not meet yesterday, as had been arranged, and the way is wide open, it was said by a real insider, for "something doing on Lewis." Senator Lewis is expected to arrive in Chicago tomorrow or Tuesday morning at the latest.

One of the theories extant yesterday was that the regular organization has become doubtful that the renomination of Mayor Thompson can be forced in the Republican primaries. It is no secret that the Democratic leaders have been insistent that County Clerk Sweitzer shall be the regular Democratic candidate upon the single theory that Thompson is to be the Republican nominee.

Switch in Sentiment.

There has been a switch in this feeling since New Year's day. It has emphasized the sudden strength of the Lewis boom and it will not be strange to the inside politicians if the regular organization goes through with Senator Lewis.

"The regulars might be with Lewis," one of them said last night. "Why not?

"Lewis can lick Thompson without a tremor, if it is between them, and it will be between them, because Lewis won't run if Dunne is a candidate. Lewis won't run if he believes that Carter Harrison would stick in the race as an independent. Regular support of Lewis would eliminate Hoyne. If Lewis says he is a candidate it is a political cinch that everybody who can deliver a precinct inside the Democratic party is going along with Lewis. He won't start until that is a sure thing."

Liability to Organization.

And this was his reason for the foregoing:

"What good is a mayor to the organization, one way or the other? He is a liability and never an asset, unless you make an exception of Fred Busse. If we can't nominate and elect an organization candidate, let's forget it. That's all there is to the Democratic factional scrap and if there's nothing to fight about, why worry? Lewis can be nominated and elected. Nobody in real business wants to be mayor with the city busted to go. If Lewis wants the job, why not? He can give the old town some real publicity and God knows that she needs a few kind words after all that has been said and done in the last four years."

Republican conferences looking toward a harmony agreement as between the Brundage and Deneen forces will be resumed tomorrow.

G.O.P. Women's Committee to Meet Here Wednesday

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—A program covering a wide range of political interests, including reconstruction problems, educational questions, and the general status of women, will be outlined by Mrs. Medill McCormick, chairman of the Republican women's national executive committee, at the meeting she has called for Wednesday, Jan. 8, at the Congress hotel in Chicago. On the following day Chairman Hays of the Republican national committee will meet with the women's committee, which in turn will meet with the national committee Jan. 10.

CITES HEROISM OF CHICAGOAN DEAD IN RUSSIA

The following letter has been received by Dr. and Mrs. Charles Hill, 6630 Kimbark avenue, in regard to their son, Lieut. Claude B. Hill of the Three Hundred and Tenth engineers, on the Archangel front, who was drowned under fire:

"Oct. 28.—Dear Mr. Hill: Capt. McArdle is not able to send out any mail, due to the winter conditions here, so he has requested me to write you.

"Lieut. Hill and his platoon went to Seltsoe, on the Dvina river, in September. The troops there were under constant shell fire for eleven days. For work done then Lieut. Hill was recommended for the D. S. O.

"On Oct. 8 he was ordered by the commander of forces at Seltsoe to bring in a tug deserted by its Russian captain and crew. He rowed out under fire and managed to get the tug under way, but was held up by a sand bar when only half way across the Dvina. He got under way at 2 a. m. and at 4 a. m. abandoned the tug in an effort to get ashore before daylight, as he was under fire.

"His rowboat was smashed during the night, so he made the attempt to wade ashore. In doing this he and three men were drowned. Although a search was made, his body and those of his men have never been recovered.

"The whole attempt was a very gallant one, for which he deserves the D. S. O. Al of the work he did after going to the front has received the highest praise.

"ROBERT C. JOHNSON,

"First Lieutenant Engineers, U. S. A., Adjutant. Headquarters Three Hundred and Tenth Engineers, A. N. R. E. F., Archangel, Siberia."

Negro Shot by Private Cop in Stockyards Race Row

Samuel Bogan, a Negro, living at 5040 South Dearborn street, was shot through the right arm by Lovell A. Wilbur, chief of police in the yards of Armour & Co., yesterday. He was one of a crowd of Negroes who had surrounded Wilbur and threatened him at Forty-second street and Packers avenue.

A Wonderful Story
Powdered Coal as a Fuel

To the People of Chicago:

How would you like to see a smokeless, sootless, dirtless Chicago?

How would you like to enjoy clean linen, clean curtains, clean homes, clean offices, clean stores?

How would you like to have your homes and flats evenly, delightfully, healthily warmed at all times; not roasting hot one hour and too cold for comfort the next hour? It sounds too good to be true but it is made possible by a remarkable invention—the Pruden Syncronator, for firing powdered coal as fuel.

This invention and its possibilities present one of the most wonderful stories ever written. It interests every man and woman in Chicago. You should read every word of this story.

THE PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR
—AFTER 100 YEARS RESEARCH

FOR OVER A CENTURY fuel engineers have known that powdered coal was the ideal fuel for efficiency, economy and convenience. For over a century engineers, inventors, fuel experts and broad-minded men have worked to solve the problem of how to fire powdered coal successfully.

Edison worked on the problem for a long time and Commodore Vanderbilt is said to have spent a large fortune on the solution of this difficulty.

It remained for a Chicago inventor to discover the successful method of firing powdered coal. This inventor, Mr. Harry B. Pruden, took a suggestion from the gas engine carbureter and developed from it the PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR, which is fast revolutionizing fuel conditions. It has already been applied in many great industrial plants where it is effecting miraculous economies in fuel, labor and money while giving much greater efficiency.

Now, Mr. Pruden is offering a convenient PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR, suitable for heating apartment buildings, theatres, clubs, churches, schools, large homes and small office and factory buildings.

Later, Mr. Pruden will present a "PONY SYNCRONATOR" suitable for small homes, bungalows, cottages, etc.

Efficient, Economical, Labor-Saving

There are many reasons why the PRUDEN POWDERED COAL SYNCRONATOR should be used universally. It positively banishes ALL SMOKE, soot and the wasting of precious heat values from coal, because every atom of the powdered coal, and all the heat-producing gases generated by the coal, are consumed by this process. It is estimated by fuel experts that from FORTY TO SIXTY PER CENT of the fuel consumed the usual way is wasted because it either goes up the chimney in smoke or unconsumed gases or goes out in partly consumed coal in cinders, slag, clinkers, etc., in the ashes.

In other words, this 40% to 60% of the coal you buy, and which is now wasted, is consumed by the Pruden Syncronator firing powdered coal.

Instead of getting heat from only 40% to 60% of your fuel, you get ALL THE HEAT from EVERY OUNCE OF COAL YOU BUY, the only loss being the indestructible ash which is found in all coal. This loss runs only a few pounds to the ton.

The powdered coal, fed into the firing chamber by the PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR, is all consumed, burning like gas with an even, dependable, uniform flame of intense heat. The heat is absolutely steady, can be regulated as you regulate gas in your gas stove, and requires no attention save the occasional replenishing of the supply of powdered coal in the hopper of the unit.

Self-Stoking and Self-Regulating

A PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR fire is lighted like you light a gas jet, just by turning on the flow and igniting it. There is no coal to shovel, as the coal is automatically fed by compressed air; there is no regulating to do save the setting of the thermostat, which regulates the flow automatically, increasing it when the heat drops below a certain degree and decreasing it when the desired heat degree is exceeded.

There is no shaking down of the furnace; no slicing or raking of the fire pot; no building up of a fire with kindling; no mass of gas-laden ashes to remove; no clinkers, cinders ,slag to remove, just a few pounds of fine ash to take out once in a while.

It is easy to handle, easy to start, easy to regulate, easy to operate, effecting a tremendous economy in labor and giving the janitor all the long, laborious hours he formerly had to devote to keeping up the fires, for necessary work around the building.

There is no unsightly pile of filthy coal in your basement, as the powdered coal is delivered INTO YOUR BASEMENT in steel barrels which are easily handled with a convenient overhead trolley hoist (which we install) making it easy for anyone to replenish the fuel supply. The coal is always hermetically sealed until the barrel is placed on the hopper of the PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR.

Why Powdered Coal Firing Is Best

To understand why powdered coal firing with a PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR is the ideal method of burning this precious fuel, it is necessary to understand the process by which coal is converted into heat, which is called CARBURIZATION.

Coal burns by heating, which releases the gases of which the coal is composed and igniting these gases by combining them with the oxygen in the air.

To effect complete carburization it is necessary for the air to reach all the coal surface. In a cubic inch of coal just six square inches of surface are exposed to the air. That same cubic inch of coal, pulverized by the Pruden process, exposes approximately 1872 square inches of surface to the air, increasing its effectiveness THREE HUNDRED PER CENT and insuring COMPLETE CARBURIZATION when fired by the PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR, which mixes the powdered coal so thoroughly with air that every atom of the coal is surrounded by air when entering the combustion chamber.

When the powdered coal flows into the firing chamber it looks like black smoke, or black gas. It burns just like gas or vaporized oil. It is as easily controlled and as easily lighted. It fills the firing chamber full of intensely hot flames, showing that all the gases generated are thoroughly burned.

In this way there is complete combustion, as against 40 to 60% combustion by old methods of firing; there is NO WASTE because all the coal and gases are burned in producing heat and none goes from the chimney in smoke (smoke is unconsumed coal and gases) and there is no waste in unconsumed coal in cinders, slag, clinkers, etc.

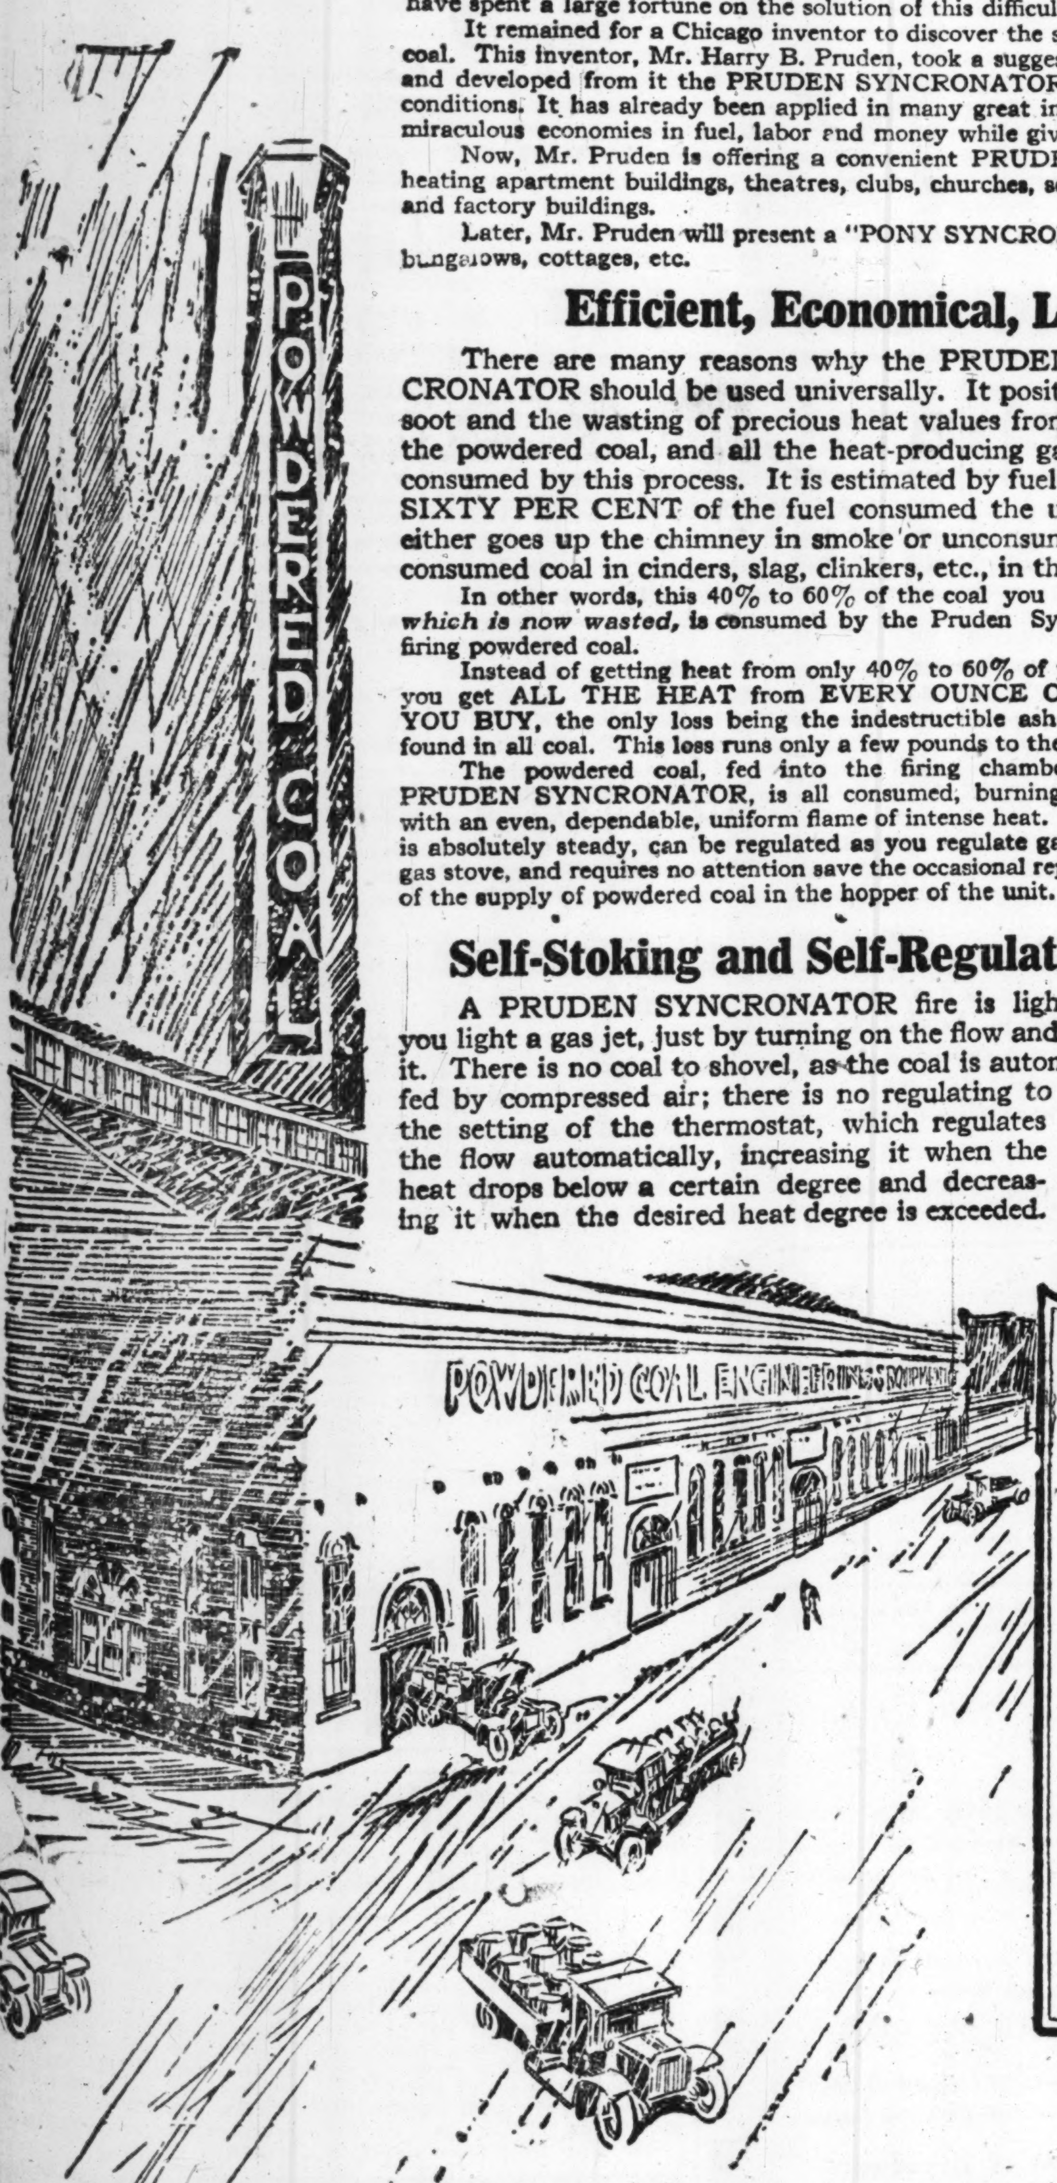
Cheaper To Operate, Burns Less Fuel

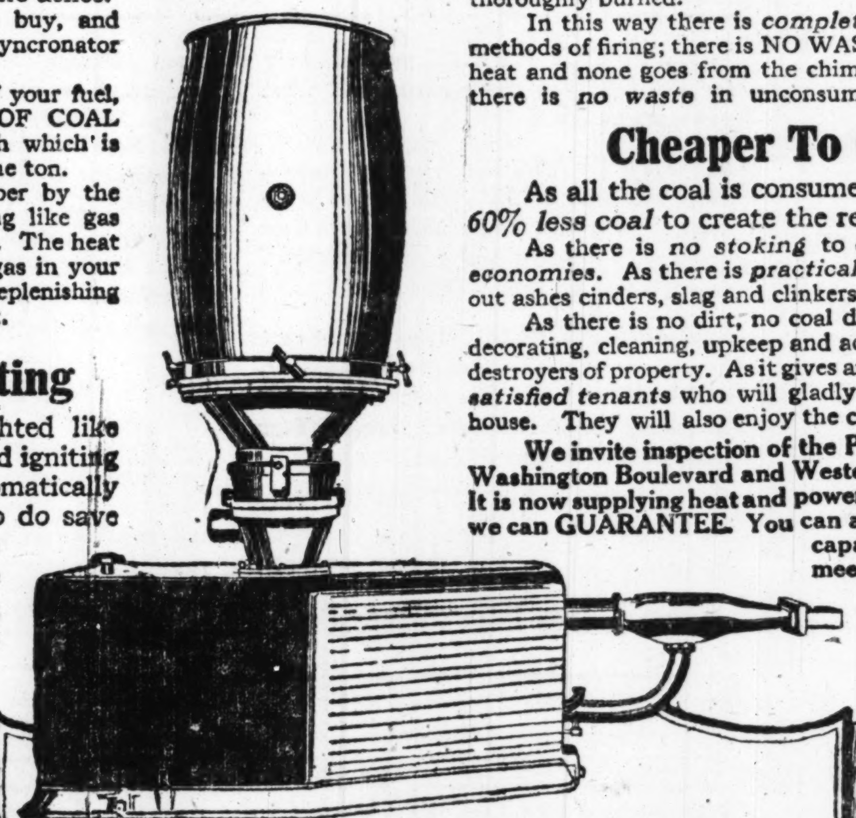
As all the coal is consumed in producing heat it takes therefore from 40 to 60% less coal to create the required amount of heat.

As there is no stoking to do, it reduces the cost of operating, which means labor economies. As there is practically no ash to carry out it reduces the expense of carting out ashes cinders, slag and clinkers to a minimum.

As there is no dirt, no coal dust, no smoke or soot it saves money in the costs of redecorating, cleaning, upkeep and adds to the life of the property, for smoke and dirt are great destroyers of property. As it gives an even, delightful, healthful heat AT ALL TIMES it means satisfied tenants who will gladly pay a premium for a "PRUDENIZED" apartment or house. They will also enjoy the clean, sootless atmosphere of such a building.

We invite inspection of the PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR in operation in our plant at Washington Boulevard and Western Avenue. This is the unit now offered for general use. It is now supplying heat and power for our great factory and is the best proof of the efficiency we can GUARANTEE. You can also visit our great coal pulverizing plant, with a present capacity of 500 tons a day, and which will be increased to meet requirements when necessary. We cordially invite every owner of a flat building in Chicago to see what we are doing and find out what efficiency, economy and satisfaction this method of firing coal is giving.





This Pruden Syncronator is for Apartment Buildings, Factories, Office Buildings, Large Homes, Churches, Clubs, Etc.

This is the small size PRUDEN SYNCRONATOR for firing powdered coal as fuel. It is suited for apartment buildings, large homes, small office or factory buildings, churches, clubs, schools, etc. This unit can be installed ready for use in about 12 to 18 hours right in your own heating plant. WE GUARANTEE that it will give complete satisfaction, insuring an even, delightful, reliable heat, effecting signal economy in fuel costs, labor costs, costs of removing ashes and cinders and insuring freedom from smoke, soot, dirt, dust. WE GUARANTEE your supply of powdered coal AT ALL TIMES. We deliver the coal right in your basement in hermetically sealed steel barrels by our motor truck delivery system, insuring you at all times a plentiful supply of the best fuel. Investigation is invited. Come and see this unit in operation heating our great factory plant.

HAYS TO ARRIVE THIS WEEK FOR G. O. P. MEETING

National Committee Gathering Expected to Be Important One.

Republican National Chairman Will H. Hays will arrive in Chicago Tuesday or Wednesday as the advance agent of the gathering of the clans that will attend upon the session of the Republican national committee, beginning Friday morning at the Congress Hotel.

Chairman Hays, according to inside gossip last night, will be in Chicago with a full supply of information concerning the organization of the Republican presidential campaign of 1920. It will be information that has come to him, as the head of the party machinery, through closely informed sources of information in Washington, as well as by the heart to heart route that leads intimately to individuals who are to figure most conspicuously in the 1920 Republican developments.

Knows Roosevelt Plans.

No one doubts, for instance, that Chairman Hays will reach Chicago perfectly informed as to what may be the suggestions or the intentions of Col. Roosevelt, with respect to the formulation of party policies or the mapping out of the earlier arrangements that can be accomplished at this time through the national committee, looking forward to the 1920 contest.

The session of the national committee is taking on particular interest, inasmuch as many states under the direct primary system will be naming their national convention delegates just a year from now. Political leaders who are always figured as important factors in the presidential political game already are in the field, looking over possibilities, chances, and inside angles of the national convention that will sit one year from next June.

Women Will Meet.

The first development of the round-up of Republican leaders will be the session on Wednesday of the women's advisory committee, of which Mrs. Medill McCormick is the chairman. This committee, appointed by Chairman Hays last fall, has announced the policy of working directly through the national committee in organizing the Republican party in the states where the women possess full privilege in participating in the presidential campaign.

The extent to which the national committee will go in suggesting the party policy at this time will not be indicated until something in the way of a definite statement is made by Chairman Hays when he gets to Chicago.

Session Like Convention.

It is said to be probable that the national committee session, called originally as a means of creating a harmonious and "get together" spirit throughout the actively organized Republicans of the nation, will develop into a conference that will have all of the attributes of a national convention and might do everything but nominate actually the candidates for president and vice president.

Barber at 73 Expects to Shave Public at 100

NEW YORK—Louis Crerker, 73, a barber, living in Brooklyn, after pleading guilty yesterday to the theft of $4,004.94 from his wife's estate, asked Judge Mulqueen in general sessions to be permitted to make restitution at $3 a week.

Assistant District Attorney Rorke said the prisoner would have to live to be more than 100 years old to square his debt at that rate. To this Crerker replied that he fully expected to pass the century mark, as all his ancestors for five generations had done so.

"I have good health and expect to work at my trade as a barber until I die," Crerker added, but the court, apparently not impressed by the idea of a centenarian shaving the general public, sent Crerker to the Tombs.

SCOTCH WOMAN MAKES U. S. FLAG FOR YANKS' TOMB

Letter Tells of Tribute Paid to Victims of Tuscania.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—How an 80 year old Scottish woman, who had lost three boys in the war, made the American flag which was used at the burial of seventy-two Tuscania victims, was described by Private John Fleming, 2851 Peralta street, Oakland, who is in Letterman General hospital with a contingent of American wounded.

Members of the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Aerial squadron, tossed up on the rocks off a small village on the Irish coast, collected their dead for burial, and then found that they had no flag to use at the ceremony. The aged woman sat up all night and manufactured out of red, white, and blue materials the emblem used at the burial of the American men.

"We tried to get the flag the old Scottish woman made for us," says Fleming. "We wanted it for a souvenir. But the villagers wouldn't part with it, and when we left the town for France it was flying from the staff on the little building they used as a town hall."

Fleming was a member of the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth squadron and went through Chateau Thierry, the Argonne, and Verdun battles.

California for Profits Now!

Health and Happiness mid Sunshine and Flowers —a substantial yearly income–come when you are ready

No other man in California knows better how to force California's richest soil, California's unequalled growing climate and California's most profitable crop to produce wealth for you

Every big, broad gauged man who has made a success of his life's work can make a still bigger success by sharing the profits with others—and just such a man is A. G. Nehrhood, Field Manager and Director of the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles, California.

California is the horticulturist's paradise—it produces the world's most profitable crops of nuts, fruits and vegetables.

For fourteen years Mr. Nehrhood has studied ALL of California's most profitable crops—and each year he has become more and more convinced as a result of his experience that the quickest, safest, surest and biggest money maker is the Paper Shell Almond.

Mr. Nehrhood, who is today perhaps the foremost horticulturist, as well as the leading authority on Almond growing on the Pacific Coast, was a farmer's boy from Minnesota, and has all his life specialized in the growing of crops for a profit.

At the age of 15 years he saved his father's apple crops by putting straw on top of the frozen ground and snow around the trees, preventing the early spring growth of the trees, thus retarding the early blossoms which in previous years had been killed by frosts.

Still seeking further knowledge in horticulture, he was attracted to the Pacific Coast. He stopped four years in Idaho, where he successfully grew cherries and peaches.

Raised over 800,000 trees of different varieties

Seeking for a longer growing season, less severe climatic changes, a more prolific soil and more profitable crops, fourteen years ago Mr. Nehrhood was irresistibly drawn to California, where he attended the University of California, absorbing all the horticultural knowledge obtainable from this famous institution.

Never following any set rules, gathering all the practical knowledge and experience of others—always seeking to further develop and improve—each year Mr. Nehrhood has traveled in excess of 8,000 miles visiting the orchards of the most prominent State and County Horticulturists.

Entering into the nursery business at Los Angeles, he grew over 800,000 trees of different varieties, selling the young trees to the leading orchardists and horticulturists on the Pacific Coast. He planted and raised nearly 2,000 acres of orchards in Los Angeles County.

Then he went to one of the most famous fruit districts in California, Riverside County, where he planted nearly 1,500 acres in Almonds, Olives and Peaches. Later he was selected by two large corporations to carry on an intensive study of Almond culture, and as a result of a lifetime of studying and demonstrating practical horticulture, Mr. Nehrhood decided on Paso Robles, California, as the place and Paper Shell Almonds as the crop producing the biggest money for the orchard owner. For additional information, send for our book, "Inside Information."

The United States grows only about one-sixth the amount of Almonds it consumes—and of this one-sixth nearly 99% is produced in California.

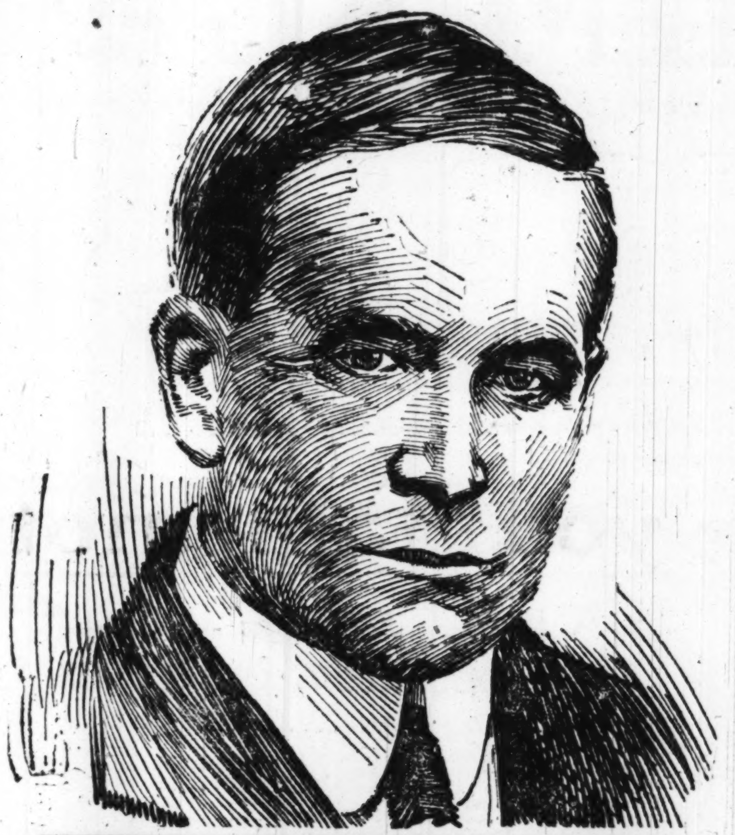
The Almond crop from your orchard will be sold through the California Almond Growers Exchange, if you wish. The demand is so great that for some years the entire Almond crop has been sold each season by the Exchange in less than one hour.

Your Almond Orchard will be near Paso Robles. 'Way back in 1904 the Almonds from Paso Robles took First Prize at the St. Louis World's Fair.

W. T. Clarke, of the University of California, on a recent visit to Paso Robles, stated: "Petaluma is known all over the World for its Chickens, the Riverside District for its Oranges and Paso Robles will be known for its Almonds."

The price of Almonds has steadily advanced since 1900. In that year the growers received right on the ground 6c per lb.; in 1915 they sold their crop for 13c per lb.; 1916 for 16c per lb.; 1917 for 19.9c per lb., and last year, 1918, for 25½c per lb. No other fruit or vegetable or cereal holds this price advance record.

Take Wheat as an illustration. Wheat is a staple; it brought a higher price last year than for many years. For the 1918 harvest the Government fixed the price at $2.25 per bushel. The average yield per acre is 20 bushels; 20 bushels at 60 lbs. to the bushel weighs 1,200 lbs. At $2.25 per bushel for wheat, this is less than 4 cents per lb.



G.A.Nehrhood

Why an Almond Orchard produces biggest profits

Mr. Nehrhood selected our land near Paso Robles as the "Cream of all Almond Growing Land," where every condition is perfect—where adjacent almond orchards have been producing for 35 years without a single crop failure—where the lime and potash necessary for almond growing are put in the soil by nature, and which would cost $2,000 per acre at fertilizer prices if put in by man—where Mr. Nehrhood has tested the climatic conditions by the use of Government self-registering thermometers over a long period of time.

One year old Almond trees will be planted in your orchard. Almond trees begin to bear the third year after transplanting—the trees in Mr. Nehrhood's orchards at this age are more than 15 feet high. In California, you know, the trees actually grow ten months in the year, whereas in Michigan, for example, trees only grow 4 or 5 months annually.

Almonds, unlike many fruits, do not have to be picked and marketed when ripe to prevent loss. Almonds are not perishable—they can be picked during a period of several weeks and stored indefinitely. See our booklet, "Inside Information," on this subject.

What does this mean to you

Simply this: Mr. Nehrhood is an active Director, also Field Manager, of the Associated Almond Growers, and by simply investing $100 at the start you can own a Paper Shell Almond Orchard, planted, cultivated and the crop harvested under the direct supervision of Mr. Nehrhood.

Why did Mr. Nehrhood select Paper Shell Almonds when onion seed nets $400 to $500 per acre?—when pears in this locality produce a crop of ten tons per acre, deducting $10 per ton expense for raising, bringing a net profit of $30 per ton or $300 per acre?

Why Paper Shell Almonds when as high as 8 to 10 tons of Prunes can be grown per acre, which weigh from 4 to 5 tons when dried, and prunes this year brought the grower $165 per ton? Picking, curing and cultivating cost was 2c per lb., leaving the grower $145 net profit per ton, or $580 per acre. Why not oranges, lemons, other fruits or vegetables—all big payers?

Why Paper Shell Almonds? All other crops carefully considered—and no one knows them better than Mr. Nehrhood—he has proved that the Paper Shell Almond is the biggest, safest money maker for many reasons.

Many times more profitable than the best wheat farm

A young Almond Orchard produces an average yield of 2,000 to 2,200 lbs. per acre—nearly twice the average yield of wheat—and last year Almonds sold for 25½c per lb.

Figure this out for yourself. If wheat brought Almond prices, that is, 25½c per lb., wheat would sell for $15.30 per bushel instead of $2.25.

Then, instead of 1,200 lbs. of wheat average yield per acre, suppose like the Almond it produced 2,000 lbs. per acre, which would bring the wheat farmer over $500 per acre instead of a gross return of $42.50. The Almond production mentioned here is not the maximum—some older orchards last season netted their owners nearly $700 per acre.

The Law of Supply and Demand rules the price of every commodity. Wheat can be grown on hundreds of thousands of acres in many states—Paper Shell Almonds can be grown in a very limited area only. Send for our booklet for more facts regarding this.

And get this: Over 75% of the Almond Orchards around Paso Robles planted belong to men and women who are Almond raisers and are planting new Almond Orchards from their profits.

Easy payments—we share one-half the Cost

Almost every one wants to live in California some day. You can live in California when you get ready—you can have a princely income each year—and while your income grows larger you and your family can be enjoying to the fullest Health, Wealth and Happiness.

Ask any friends who know California—and they will tell you that Paso Robles is the Garden Spot—that there is continual sunshine, free from fogs, no extremes in heat or cold, no sultry, humid days, no hot nights, no sunstrokes, no ice or snow. Paso Robles has a $25,000 Municipal Bath House and a $500,000 Hotel. It is on the El Camino Real or King's Highway—an hour's ride to the ocean or the mountains—and on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railway, about midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

If you enjoy motoring, golfing, fishing, hunting, tennis—if you love to live in the open—Paso Robles will be your choice.

California is no longer simply a playground for the idle rich. All we have told you is within your easy reach. Your initial investment is only $100. If you wish, you can arrange for the balance on easy installments—and we will pay one-half of this balance from the profits earned by your Almond Orchard. Again we say, California and all its pleasures, as well as a substantial yearly income, is not out of your reach—if you will but act now.

Do your own investigating. Get our booklet, "Inside Information." Satisfy yourself that the men in our Association are the kind of men you would trust and with whom you would be proud to be associated. We invite—we urge investigation.

The number of 10-Acre Almond Orchards we can offer for sale is necessarily limited because of the limited area of land we own which is best suited for Almond culture.

You can be one of the fortunate owners—if you will send the Coupon today—get our booklet—investigate and decide. In sending Coupon, do not hesitate to ask any questions you may wish.

SAILORS WATCH BULL FIGHTING NEAR GIBRALTAR

Writer Describes Battle Staged for Seamen on Leave.

BY TEDDY WICK.

ALGECIRAS, Spain, Dec. 23.—This little town—a miracle of African and Spanish beauty—confronts the Rock of Gibraltar, which rises in lonely solemnity across the blue waters of Gibraltar bay.

Because Gibraltar is now one of the busiest naval bases on the Mediterranean, Algeciras is reaping such a profit as it never dreamed of before. For Gibraltar is a fortified town and has few amusements, a lack of which Algeciras has been quick to supply. Its white bull ring, dazzling the eye from far out in the bay, and the white Casino, which nestles close to the edge of the water, are its chief attractions.

All See Fights.

The baiting of splendid black bulls may not be a pleasant sight to watch but the pleasantness of it is beside the point. It is distinctly not a sport to be watched with American eyes and American notions of spot. But there is probably no naval officer attached to the base of Gibraltar who has not seen at least one bull fight in this Algeciras ring.

Many of them see only one fight. Some of them see only part of one fight. Some see many fights. But those who cannot enter into the spirit of the Spanish crowd, those who cannot learn to view the spectacle with Spanish eyes, soon learn to stay away.

Like Opera Singers.

This week has been fair week in Algeciras and the two premier bull fighters of Spain, Belmonte, and Gallito have appeared on alternate days. There is the same dignity about their names throughout Spain which clings to the names of Caruso and De Reszke in another realm. They are not the parallels of Cobb and Mathewson, for bull fighting has a dignity which does not attach to baseball. Today the papers in Spain are filled with columns of criticism of Gallito's work in the ring here yesterday afternoon. The death of every one of his three bulls and the delicate skirmishing antecedent to their deaths will be discussed for weks in the coffee houses which surround the old sun baked plaza of Algeciras.

Seat yourself shortly after 5 o'clock on the shady side of the ring. When Belmonte or Gallito are on, you will pay seven pesetas, or about $1.50 for your seat. On the way up the dark narrow stairs to the top of the ring whence you descend to such seat as you may choose, buy a cushion for five centavos. You will need it just as you need a cushion in the bleachers at a baseball game.

No Rush to Begin.

Once seated, you may buy wine, lottery tickets, shrimps, beer, water, sweets or vermouth. You are at the mercy of hawkers with red sashes about their corduroys. Somebody who has seen a bull fight before tells you that it is the custom to cut the vocal cords of horses used in the ring before they are brought in. But nobody apparently ever has cut the vocal cords of the hawkers who beset you from every side.

The spectacle is billed to start at 5 o'clock. At 5:30, a military band straggles in and takes its seats. At 6, two men with a hose start to wet down the sand of the arena. At 6:15, the president and his party enter the president's box. At 6:16, the doors opening into the arena from the opposite side of the ring are opened, and the matadors, the picadors mounted on scrawny horses and heavily padded and armored, and the three mule teams gaudily bedecked, cross the ring in a gorgeous feast of color to salute the president.

Mules Leave.

The matadors are given their red cloaks. The mounted picadors take station at one side of the ring. The mule teams dash out of the ring. The bugler sounds the bull call. A man opens a small heavy gate across the arena, glares for a moment into the darkness beyond it, and leaps aside, as the first bull dashes past him into the glare of the sunlit ring with a burst of fury impossible to describe. Its actual appearance strikes across one's senses like poison turning the blood cold in one's veins.

Dazed by the sunlight and the rioit of color in the seats, the confused bull—a great black animal with a great spread of horns and a strengthy breadth of hip—dashes wildly about the ring, carried by the terrific impetus of his rush.

Rushes at Matador.

Across the ring he sees the figure of a matador and charges in another terrific rush, only to bring up with a snort as the matador steps easily behind the barrier with flourish of his red cloak.

The crowd begins to murmur approval Here is a bull worth watching. The animal turns and sweeps the arena with his eyes. Across it, three picadors wait on their scrawny horses. The horses' right eyes are covered with a black blindfold drawn diagonally down over their heads.

The bull circles and the crowd begins rising to its feet. He approaches the first horse suspiciously. Thirty feet away, he suddenly dips his great head with a snort and charges, sending horse and picador sprawling into a heap. Maddened by the thrust of the picador's lance, he gores the struggling horse repeatedly until it lies feebly kicking with its blood spurting in streams, the crowd howing its applause and the picador, helped by a half-dozen hands, scrambling in all his padded armor to safety beyond the barrier.

Fight Is On.

Drawing off from his victim, the bull sights the lone figure of a matador, standing with his red cloak in the center of the ring and stamping with impatience.

He dips his head and charges again, charges full into the red cloak, only to find that the matador behind has stepped aside in the nick of time.

He brings up suddenly, turns, and charges again.

Fooled a second time, he repeats. He charges the red rag time and again, rushing with lowered head under the very nose of the daring matador. A dozen charges and the bull stops and gazes at the foolish red rag with his flanks heaving and his nostrils distended. The matador gives him a look of scorn, turns his back, and walks contemptuously away, with the crowd screaming its tribute to his daring and skill.

Salutes the President.

When three or four or five or even six horses have been fed to the bull, the bugle blows for the darts. The matador, who has been chosen for this difficult and nice piece of business, is handed two darts—short barbed prongs of steel with gaudy ribbons fluttering from them—makes his brief salute to the president, tosses his cap aside, and walks out to face the bull.

When the bull has been worked about by the fluttering of red cloaks into a favorable position with respect to the sun, the matador rises on his toes, lifting his darts high above his head.

Suddenly he begins running toward the bull, gathering speed as he runs. The bull, confronted by this new and lithe foe, lowers his head to charge. Straight at the bull's lowered head the matador dashes, his followers closing up behind him to lure the bull off in case of accident.

Leaps Aside.

In a flash, the darts are hurled into the bull's withers and the matador, now over his very horns, leaps aside. It happens in the twinkling of an eye. When it is done, the matador walks slowly away after his second pair of darts, scanning the crowd which is cheering him. He is not afraid of the bull's following him. The bull, maddened by the pain of the darts, is throwing himself wildly about in an effort to shake off this new form of torture.

The matador who is selected to put the finishing touch to the bull is handed his rapier—a long sword of glittering steel—and, confronting the president, dedicates the bull he is about to kill.

Then, with a flourish, his cap is tossed aside and he strides out into the arena.

By this time the bull has been wearied. His long tongue, dripping froth, hangs from his open mouth. But he still has fight left in him. Though his withers are wet with blood from the darts that decorate him, he is not at all to be trusted.

Almost Lies Down.

With his followers hovering near in case of accident, the matador confronts the bull alone.

He wraps his red cloak over his rapier and dangles it in front of the bull's lowered head. The bull makes a short lunge at it. The matador drops on one knee and dangles his red cloth again. He whirls, slapping the bull's flank as it charges. He leans forward and lays his hand between the bull's horns. He all but lies down before it.

The crowd is generous in its applause at this display of skill. It continues for possibly ten minutes. Then the supreme moment comes.

Falls Upon Bull.

Standing erect on his toes at a distance of six feet squarely in front of the bull, the matador dangles his flag low with one hand to keep the bull's head lowered, and with the other he holds his rapier pointing at the bull's shoulders and aiming his eye along its glittering edge. It is his aim to drive his rapier down between the bull's shoulder blades and into its heart.

The crowd is breathlessly silent. Suddenly the matador falls upon the bull. His long blade may go home into the bull's heart. More likely it runs into the bull only half way to the hilt. Even mere likely it strikes the bone of the shoulder blade, and by its elasticity is hurled ten or twenty feet away. If it actually goes in hilt deep, you may be sure that you have seen a very exceptional feat, and that somebody will later cut off the bull's tail as a trophy for the matador.

ROMANCE

Boy of 18 and Bride of 14 Overcome Obstacles.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A youthful romance, slightly interrupted by parents and the police, was resumed by Mr. and Mrs. Francis McKay. They eloped to Elkton, Md., and were married, but neglected to tell their parents. The husband is 18 and his bride 14. She was Miss Edna Harris.

With school books under her arm, Miss Harris left home and met McKay a block away. Upon their return from Elkton the couple started housekeeping.

The girl's father learned of their whereabouts and caused their arrest. The bride was sent to the house of detention, while McKay was held at the police station. He was given a hearing before Magistrate Harris. When he produced the marriage certificate he was dismissed by the magistrate.

BARTENDER FOR ALD. KENNA FINED FOR SALE TO BOY

George Rosenbaum, formerly a bartender employed in the saloon owned by Ald. Michael Kenna, 307 South Clark street, was found guilty of selling liquor to minors and fined $20 by Judge Frank Graham yesterday. A similar charge against Ald. Kenna was dismissed by the judge.

Ald. Kenna was charged by C. L. Carter, a Juvenile court investigator, with having sold liquor to John Clossen, 17 years old, on the day the armistice was signed.

Rosenbaum, testifying in behalf of his former employer, said Ald. Kenna had cautioned him many times against selling liquor to boys under age.

He said the bar was crowded the day of the armistice and that he was unable to see all persons who were purchasing liquor and that Clossen might have purchased the liquor.

HANGS SELF IN INSANE ALYLUM.

Ludzik Hruby, 37 years old, committed suicide in the Chicago State hospital for the insane at Dunning Friday night by hanging himself. Hruby was admitted to the hospital Dec. 5. He was a paralytic.

JOHN WAS RIGHT ABOUT GETTING IN TROUBLE, ANYWAY

John O'Neill is an old "seafaring man" and as such once in a while he gets nervous hanging around the home port. In such cases he must have a bit of a drink and there is always trouble in the offing when he breezes along with a full cargo aboard.

O'Neill was before United States Commissioner Mason yesterday charged with having split a portion of his booze with some sailors out in West Madison street.

"You see, it was this 'ere way," O'Neill said. "I was up at Milwaukee at a soldiers' home—you know I was a sailor back in the Spanish-American war—and I wants a drink, so I goes down to Milwaukee and I gets plenty. Then they sends me back and the officers at the home takes away all of my clothes and gives me a kind of a kimono looking affair to wear. Well, I gets nervous again and I starts down on the street car, me in my kimono, and they puts me off. Well, there's a graveyard there, so I goes in and I sleeps there for eight nights."

"Ah, yes, that was another time," started O'Neill again. "You see, my poor old mother had died and my four children had been laid away. I was just all broken up. I started out to get a drink."

The tears welled up in O'Neill's eyes and he swabbed them with a handkerchief.

"When did your mother die?" the commissioner asked sympathetically.

"Well, your honor, it was five years ago," O'Neill said. "You see, I'm an old seafaring man and sometimes I gets nervous and out I goes and always I gets into trouble."

"Held for trial under $1,000 bonds," the commissioner announced.

HELD FOR KILLING BORDER.

Stanislaw Rumshus of 10623 South State street was held to the grand jury by a coroner's jury yesterday for killing Nicholas O. Schultz, a boarder, New Year's Eve in a fight over Mrs. Barbara Rumshus.

100 SMOOTH HAIR CUTS FOR $1.00

SAVE $49.00 ON HAIR CUTS WITH NEW DUPLEX STROPPING ATTACHMENT

$2.00 Duplex Hair Cutter and Stropper Complete Outfit for Only $1.00

PATENTED OCT. 8, 1918 PRICE TO INTRODUCE ONLY $1.00

WORTH $5.00
COSTS $1.00

We have felt for some time that if the thousands of users of the Duplex Automatic Hair Cutter could strop and sharpen their own cutting blades, the Duplex would be more satisfactory. After considerable experimental work we now have a perfect stropping attachment, whereby anyone can put all four cutting edges in proper shape in a minute. We have found that at least one hundred perfect hair cuts can be obtained from these blades by proper stropping.

100 HAIR CUTS AT THE BARBER'S COST........................ $50.00
100 HAIR CUTS WITH A DUPLEX COST........................ $1.00
SAVING........................ $49.00

Isn't that worth while? Besides the cash saving there are many other advantages. You can cut your hair in less than five minutes any time you want to instead of wasting hours at the barber shop. No danger of catching scurvy, dandruff, or other diseases. Mothers can cut their children's hair. And you are sure of a smooth, even hair cut at a cost of one cent, instead of paying from 35c to 50c for one that is likely to be uneven and jagged.

You Can't Go Wrong With a Duplex—The Slanting Teeth Won't Let You.

The regular price of the Duplex Hair Cutter with stropping attachment is $2.00. TESTIMONY ALL IN AT TRIAL OF FIVE SOCIALISTS

Jury Expected to Get the Case Tuesday After Arguments.

Eleven hours of argument starting tomorrow morning await the jury hearing the espionage act charges against Victor L. Berger, Milwaukee congressman-elect, and his four codefendants in Judge Landis' court. Late yesterday afternoon both the government and defendants rested their cases. Judge Landis then allowed each side five and one-half hours for arguments, and announced to the jury that it would have the case in its hands by Tuesday afternoon.

United States Attorney Charles F. Clyne will open the arguments tomorrow. He will be followed by Seymour Stedman, William Cunnea, and Henry Cochems for the defense. Joseph B. Fleming, first assistant United States attorney, will make the closing speech for the prosecution. The case has been on trial since Dec. 9.

Attitude of Berger.

Yesterday's session was given over to examination of Berger, who finished his three days of testimony in his own defense, and minor rebuttal attacks by witnesses introduced by the government. The Socialist congressman-elect's testimony that he had adopted a strictly pro-American attitude throughout the war was offset by evidence given by Walter Wyrick, former city and news editor of the Milwaukee Leader and now in the United States navy.

"In 1917 Berger came storming into the makeup department and, applying an oath to a United Press accredited correspondent, said he 'had been bought by the English,'" Wyrick said. "He ordered an article by the correspondent 'killed.'"

"Don't you know that a lot of war stuff was colored and that George Creel, head of the American bureau of public information, sent out a lying story on July 4?" Henry Cochems, Berger's personal counsel, asked in cross examining Wyrick, while the government attorneys made violent protest. Before the witness could answer, Judge Landis held the question to be improper.

Testify About Desertions.

In rebuttal of testimony given by Berger and Sheriff E. T. Melms of Milwaukee that there "had been no desertions" there—this in proof of the statement that the Socialist anti-war propaganda had not affected the enlistment service—Albert Beecroft, chief clerk in the adjutant general's office at Madison, Wis., testified that there had been 1,004 deserters listed in Milwaukee and thirty-three from the draft district over which Melms had presided. Berger then took the stand again to deny any knowledge of this, as well as to say he did not remember "killing" the war dispatch Wyrick testified to.

John H. Alcock, former acting chief of police, was called as a rebuttal witness by the defense to contradict testimony given by Hinton G. Clabaugh, former head of the federal bureau of investigation, who said that anti-draft "stickers" had "caused an incipient riot" at the Auditorium peace meeting held in May, 1917.

Private Is Emissary at Peace Conference

AYER, Mass.—Private M. J. Cassavetes, secretary and treasurer of the Pan-Epirus society, was discharged at Camp Devens on a special order from Washington, issued in "exceptional circumstances," to permit him to attend the peace conference at Versailles. He will sail soon for Europe to represent his society, which numbers 50,000, in an effort to obtain independence for Epirus.

He has been on duty at the camp surgeon's office.

STABLE BOY

Ebert, Leader of Germany's Socialist Government, Worked in a Barn.

PALO ALTO, Cal.—Thirty-five years ago Fredderick Ebert and William Seppich were boyhood chums in Germany and worked together in the livery stable of Seppich's father in Heidelberg. Today Ebert is the principal figure of Germany and Seppich is a barber of Palo Alto. Seppich found time between shaves to give a brief biographical sketch of his boyhood pal.

"Fred always was a hard worker," he said. "I clearly remember how, when we were working for my father, Fred would stay on the job and clean out the barn while I fooled around with the horses. That was before 1883. Later he became editor of a German paper, became a leader in the Socialist movement, and finally landed in the president's chair. But, at that, I wouldn't trade places with Fred for a minute. He's still holding down pretty much the same old job—cleaning out the stable. But I doubt if he can make as big a success of it as he did when he was cleaning out my daddy's barn. "Next!" said Seppich.

CHICAGO TROOPS TRIUMPH IN WAR TOLD BY OFFICERS

The Chicago troops on the western front were highly praised by Lieut. Arthur Broche of the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry, who spoke before the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel Sherman yesterday afternoon. Lieut. Broche, who is here on leave, was wounded while leading his troops.

His story of how the slightly trained Chicago soldiers held the kaiser's best fighters, selected from all along the entire battle line to "give the Yanks a lesson" and finally beat back their opponents at Argonne wood, held the attention of the club members for almost an hour.

"We were undoubtedly the laughing stock of the German soldiers," he said. "They knew of our meager training and expected to do away with us easily. German agents knew that many American divisions were made up chiefly of national guardsmen, but of the seventeen national guard divisions on this part of the front, not one ever lost any ground. Out of my own company there are but two men left today. All the companies of the regiment suffered almost as badly. The One Hundred and Twenty-ninth and One Hundred and Thirtieth were similarly crippled."

Lieut. Broche characterized the Chicago soldiers as ideal in that they were obedient and followed out orders without hesitation or questioning.

Joseph M. Coffey, chairman of the entertainment committee for the club, has been appointed to represent the organization before the legislature at Springfield in an appeal for the appointment of Lieut. Jack Kennedy on the boxing commission should the legislation favor such a body.

POSED AS HERO; SEIZED BY U. S.

ALBANY, N. Y.—James G. Morton, who posed here for two weeks as a wounded sergeant of the famous Sixty-ninth regiment of New York and was gladly welcomed by patriotic Albanians, was arrested as a deserter and impostor by a representative of the department of justice.

He spoke at theaters and other gatherings for the Red Cross drive and had just been announced as one of the speakers at a Red Cross street meeting when he was taken into custody. In his talks he told how he had been wounded in France shortly after his brother had been shot dead beside him, and he extolled the work of the Red Cross. He carried a cane and walked with a limp.

It is charged he is a deserter from a Long Island camp; that he never got to France. He was turned over to Lieut. Gates at the Watervliet arsenal.

SOLD TO POOR.

Oliver Cromwell ordered many cargoes of coal to be brought into England tax free, stored by the city companies in the summer, and sold to the poor in the winter.

HOW CHICAGOAN MET DEATH TOLD BY COMMANDER

Killed by a Machine Gun in the Capture of Juvigny.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zajicek of 1415 West Eighteenth street, have received a letter from Lieut. Robert L. Bass of the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry, which discloses the manner in which their son, Private Oscar Zajicek, met his death. He was a member of Lieut. Bass' command, Company L.

"The third battalion of our regiment," the letter reads, "had been ordered to take the town of Juvigny at all costs. It took it. It was upon the entry of Company L into Juvigny that your son paid the supreme price of devotion to his country's cause. He was killed by machine gun fire.

Buried by Roadside.

"He was buried by Regimental Chaplain Hood just south of Juvigny, between the narrow gauge railroad and the town, on the right side of the road. There are five graves in this group, all bearing upon their crosses the name and identification tag of the one buried there."

Private James A. White, Ninety-second Aero squadron, who was killed in an airplane accident, was the son of Richard Steele of 8501 Crandon avenue, South Chicago. He was formerly employed at the plant of the American Steel company.

Private William Frederick Shannon, Headquarters troop, Fourth army corps, was reported as missing in action since Sept. 12 in a war department telegram received Nov. 19 by the mother, Mrs. Cora E. Shannon of 2929 Cottage Grove avenue. Last Friday, however, they received a postal card from him, dated Dec. 13, in which he wrote that he was now with the army of occupation at Trier, Germany.

Dies of Pneumonia.

Private William Lindor, died of pneumonia, was with the supply company, Eighty-second field artillery, stationed at El Paso. He was the son of Mrs& J. E. Lindor of 3742 South Ashland avenue.

First Lieut. Walter R. Scanlan, wounded, is attached to the base hospital, One Hundred and Eighth ammunition train. He was formerly a practicing dentist here. His father, James J. Scanlan, lives at 3644 Ellis park.

Sergt. Joseph Clayton Eberly, died of pneumonia, was with the quartermaster's corps at the flying field at Sacramento, Cal. He was formerly with the wholesale establishment of Marshall Field & Co. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Eberly, live at 3435 West Congress street.

SAYS FEW YANKS WED IN FRANCE

NEW YORK.—Here's good news for the girls in the middle west, especially Kansas and Missouri, where the Thirty-fifth division was made up: Tom Walsh of Youngstown, O., is willing to stake his reputation on it that very few members of the Thirty-fifth division have taken unto themselves wives who "parley Français." Mr. Walsh served as a Knights of Columbus secretary over there.

"Not a thing to it," the secretary said. "If the French girls counted on plucking husbands from our expeditionary force, they haven't started yet."

Two Cavalry Regiments Revisit Waterloo Field

LONDON.—Two of the cavalry regiments—namely: the First Royal dragoons and the Tenth Royal hussars—which took part in the battle of Waterloo, had the pleasant experience of riding over the battlefield recently on their way to the German frontier.

BRITIGANWOOD ADDITION

Located Principally Between Ardmore and Thorndale Avenues and Between the North Channel and North Central Park Avenue

Highly Restricted—Beautifully Improved—Well Located

Our great sale of Britiganwood property which closed on December 8th resulted in the purchase of over $300,000 of this excellent property by Chicago people. The demand for property in this section was so great, however, that many persons who wanted particular pieces of property (such as corners for large flat buildings, lots with east fronts or south fronts), left reservations with us to hold until spring. We therefore decided to open up to the public IMMEDIATELY the first addition to Britiganwood, which runs from Ardmore to Thorndale Aves. This property is identical in character with the other portions of Britiganwood and is now offered at

Months ago we predicted that there would be a big real estate boom in Chicago, and our prediction is going to be fulfilled, starting with the first signs of spring. Already the Chicago Real Estate Board is moving toward a universal increase in rents of from ten to fifteen per cent. This great city of ten thousand industries will begin the greatest expansion in its history even before the close of this winter. Nothing is more certain than the increase in the values of well located Chicago real estate.

BRITIGANWOOD THE GREATEST NORTH SIDE PROPERTY

Britiganwood, of which the first addition to Britiganwood is a part (geographically) is without a question full of great profits to every lot owner. This great property is large enough to allow the creation of its own atmosphere and to govern its own development and future values. It is highly restricted. It is improved beautifully. It is being peopled with the better element of the middle class. Its buildings will always command extraordinarily high rents. Its schools will be beautiful and modern. Its stores and shops and theaters and banks will be fashioned after those of the Wilson Avenue district. It is typically North Side in character, in location, in improvements, in development, in beauty and in value.

THE MAN WHO BUYS TODAY WILL MAKE MONEY

This organization has made money for six thousand clients who have purchased property from us. The record of Britiganwood will be more brilliant in profits, more staple in values, more beautiful in its final development than any North Side property we have ever handled. We want you to see it whether you buy today or not. We want you to come out, no matter what the condition of the weather may be and judge of the value of this investment for yourself. Don't let bad weather scare you out, as we have every facility for making the trip a comfortable and a pleasant one for you. It is the biggest opportunity for sure profits that you will have for a long time.

HOW TO GET THERE

To get to this property, take a Through Route Kedzie Avenue car north and ride to the end of the line (Kedzie and Foster Avenues), where you will meet our automobile to take you over the property. No matter what the condition of the weather is we will be on hand to meet you. If you prefer to have us call for you with an automobile, telephone Monticello 4098 or Randolph 7400 and ask for the Sales Manager.

CITY'S PATIENCE AND CAR SERVICE BOTH GO TO ZERO

Discomforts of Usual Traffic Become Real Peril.

It is marvelous where they hide 'em.

"Not a car in sight"—the phrase is as familiar as the paper on the wall and it fits any corner at any hour—rush hours preferred.

Five minutes here, ten minutes there, twenty minutes at another point, a shuddering population looks up and down vistas of empty blocks and moans between chattering teeth, "Not a car in sight!"

The romping street cars play a jubilant game of hide-and-seek with the people of this town, and they win right along.

To be specific, you should have stood watch at State and Ohio streets yesterday morning at 11:25 o'clock, which is not a rush hour, and seen the cars not go by. Turning north, toward the residential section, you looked into a bank of smoke that made Birmingham and Sheffield seem like the sun-kissed shores of some fairy isle. Looking south you saw the same, but thicker. Four blocks away the spires of the Holy Name were faintly visible. But no street cars. They had found a better hiding place—the little wags!

And Time Goes By.

Five, eight, ten minutes passed.

Meanwhile women waiting on the corner shivered and shook and pinched their faces into the well known lines of Chicago worry as they thought of the marketing for Sunday. Two anxious travelers, weighted with suitcases did feats of grand and lofty profanity. The temperature by official count was 2 below zero. At 6 a. m., when the working people had had to take them, it was 11 below. In the preceding twenty-four hours there had been twenty-one deaths from pneumonia. That also is official.

But, lo—there is a rumble up the street—a rumble and a roar, like the speaking of distant drumfire.

They come! They come!

They also go.

Like the darkey's celebrated train, they didn't even hesitate. They come in fours. Three brush by. The fourth stops. It is packed to the steps; but through the good nature of some jackies two of the dozen women in the street manage to squeeze on.

Fades Into the Smoke.

The car disappears in the smoke haze, trailing blue banners of jackies' pants. The jackies are hanging on by fingers and toes. Unlike Farragut, they won't have to be lashed to the mast when they go into action. They can fly from it.

The taxi at a dollar or two, motor bus at 10 cents. That's the option.

The lessons of history have not been lost on the street car company.

"Why don't they eat cake, then?" said Marie Antoinette when they told her the people had no bread.

Conductor Sees "Solution."

That is not fancy. A peppery passenger aimed barbed queries at a conductor when at last he had sardined himself on to a car that had coyly consented to dally at a corner. The conductor registered 5 cents and no contrition, merely remarking equably, "Gee, friend, what you want is an auto."

Day and night it is the same. Choose another hour—11:05 at night. The place is State street and Jackson boulevard. A northbound car emerges out of ten minutes of silence.

Prompted by whims that only a motorman can fathom, or gripped, perhaps, by the greed for gold, the car halts. The people pile on. Huddled in a seat is a young woman—emphatically not of the theater crowd—making strange noises in her throat. The men gaze curiously at her. So do women, but not so curiously, and one woman whispers, "Why, she's crying!"

Sick with Cold.

Another woman bends down and asks a question. The girl chatters weakly, "I-I waited so long I'm—I'm sick with co-co-cold."

The car gets as far as State and Randolph—nearly. There two wheels of a stranded wagon impede one rail. Fifteen or twenty motionless minutes are accumulated for the wallet of time. There are leisurely conferences between conductor and motorman, then the foretokens of an advance. A man passenger, who has been in the street comes back into the car and says to the huddled, dumb audience of passengers, "With a little backing and switching they could have cleared that place in three minutes."

The car reaches Kinzie street. The conductor has a new idea, and cries with gusto, "Far north as we go. Take next car in the rear."

The patient sheep pile out, but there "ain't no next car in the rear"—at least not in sight.

A Few More Minutes.

In several minutes one comes galumphing over the bridge, halts amid the ice hummocks at Kinzie street, and the sheep hoist themselves into their new home.

These methods are typical.

The companies try to regulate balled-up traffic by "switching back" after delays. Sometimes they dump you at North State and Kinzie going north and at State and Randolph going south. That is one of the finer shadings of their favorite game. They play it best in zero weather.

These delays, impositions, brutal crowdings, and stupid blunderings have ceased to be merely disgusting, as they are for nine months of the year, and now become a real peril to life, limbs, lungs, and lights.

One Man Dies.

Poor Joseph Clancy, aged 28, died at St. Bernard's hospital Thursday afternoon as a consequence of injuries suffered when he was "brushed off" the footstep of an indecently crowded Halsted street car. Clancy was young and thought he could manage it—that hanging on by fingers and toes like a jackie. But he could not. With properly directed car service he would be alive today.

They are brushed off by heavy trucks as the cars go billowing over too narrow bridges. They fight their way—no, not fight, for there is no fight in sheep—but cdowd and crush their way in and out of the infrequent cars, to the destruction of raiment and manners. They stand on the weary corners, marking time with chills and congestions, and linking arms with pneumonia. With desperation in their eyes, anxiety in their hearts and an ache in every bone, they surge toward the infrequent car already crowded to the limits of decency of the commonest kind. Those at the end of the waiting crowd gain a footing on the steps and cling to the car by the slippery hand rails.

Working Girls Suffer.

Two girls are among the clingers. They have worked since 9. It is 6 now. Their lunch was at 1. They want their supper. But neither they nor some of the men even can long cling on in this piercing weather. So they drop off and foot it the rest of the way home, or wait twenty minutes for another chance. A twenty minute wait apropos of nohhing that a painstaking observer can fathom! Then a short ride, ending abruptly with "All out! Take the next car in the rear! All out!"

In twenty-five years first a million, then a million and a half, then two million, and now two million, eight hundred thousand men and women endure this kind of thing twice a day every day except Sunday. It is a miracle of heaven that for womankind we haven't bred solely a race of shrill neurotics by these hardships we suffer to be imposed upon them.

Wears Out Nerves.

Delays in the routine affairs of life—that's what wears out the nerves and spirits of men and women, and there never was a town where a little inclement weather was made so complete an excuse for the most exasperating of all delays—delays in your going to business and your coming home—as it is in Chicago.

Why?

Write your own editorial. You know as much about it as anybody. You know your own misery.

A PLAINT OF POLITENESS

"I am cursed with good manners," says a writer in Judge.

"I cannot grab for food. I cannot take the choice morsel of a dish. I instinctively choose the most uncomfortable seat. I make way for others at the ticket office. I let every one push ahead of me to secure the remaining seats of a subway coach. I suffer when forced to take a proffered seat.

"I do not interfere with the conversation of shopgirls behind the counter. I wait. I accept invitations from persons desirous of showing off their homes or their cash in restaurants. I listen patiently to platitudes of the young, or to the discoverers of Oscar Wilde and Bernard Shaw.

"I agree that men are vainer than women. I smile upon annoying children. I admire the costuming of all the women I know. Unless hysterical I never inquire of my love where he has been, whither going, or whom he has seen. I give every one the preference of liberty. I lose opportunities.

"I am cursed with good manners."

COMMISSION IS GOING TO RUSSIA FOR RED CROSS

Will Make Survey to Determine Policy in Siberia.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4.—To determine the future policy of the American Red Cross in Siberia George W. Simmons of St. Louis, a major in the Red Cross, will sail with a staff of four from San Francisco for Vladivostok on Monday.

Maj. Simmons, who for a year and a half has been manager of the southwestern division of the Red Cross, said that the American Red Cross went into Siberia at the request of the American government, acting for allied governments, to give emergency military relief to the Czecho-Slovaks fighting their way out of Russia. The work consisted of clothing and feeding units opposing the Bolsheviki and caring for refugees.

Will Make Survey.

Whether this emergency has ended so far as the Red Cross is concerned will be determined by a survey of conditions which may take three months If the work is to be continued its extent will be decided upon by the commission.

Maj. Simmons said that when the Czecho-Slovak question arose an emergency Red Cross mission was arranged for by cable with Dr. Teusler of the St. John's hospital in Tokio as its head. Five or six other Americans, including Bishop Tucker of the Episcopal church, accompanied him. The mission did splendid work, Maj. Simmons said.

Vast stocks of clothing and medicine and a little food have been shipped from the United States. This was to meet conditions until the allies could take over the work. The Red Cross has expended $6,000,000 to date in this mission, Maj. Simmons said.

Six Hospitals Established.

From Vladivostok to west of the Ural mountains, where the battle line between the Bolsheviki and the Czecho-Slovak with loyal Russians and other allied contingents is now located, the Trans-Siberian railroad is open, and along this railroad six Red Cross hospitals have been established. It is from these that help has been given to the adherents of the Omsk government, the present government of Siberia, the military units, and Serbian, Armenian, and other refugees.

Maj. Simmons said before leaving St. Louis that he goes to Siberia first as assistant to Dr. Teusler and second to survey the field.

HUGE HOSPITAL IS SUGGESTED FOR CAMP CUSTER

BATTLE CREEK, Mich.—The use of the west end of Camp Custer as a permanent army hospital has been suggested. It is declared the buildings of the camp are so laid out that the cantonment might serve for two separate and complete military establishments. Between the two parts of the cantonment is located a large tract of vacant land.

The western portion of the camp is declared to be ideally situated for the location of an enormous military hospital and it is here that much of the reconstruction and other surgical and medical work for the wounded from overseas to be brought to the camp will be done. Many of the hospital structures here are of a semi-permanent character, which could be made permanent at small additional cost, it is declared.

The camp has an expensive and excellent water system and is supplied with pure water. It has a large and efficient electrical plant and its own railroad and switching yards. There are excellent paved highways and an interurban spur. Both parts of the camp are served by all of these.

THEY'VE TAKEN THE SQUIRT OUT OF GRAPE FRUIT

Announcement that the efforts of the United States department of agriculture to achieve a nonsquirting grapefruit have met with success will be hailed with pleasure by many who have braved the acetic dangers of the product at the risk of smarting eyes and embarrassment, often acute to others, as well as those delving into the citric depths.

The elimination of the squirt from the shaddock effectually domesticates that fruit and makes it sufficiently gentle to attract the most timid. The main trouble with the juicy edible in the past has been the deadly accuracy of its aim when it was sufficiently irritated to explode.

Often the unsuspecting eyes of the one partaking or of those who sat nearby were penetrated with marksmanship that seldom failed. To complicate matters, the yellow citrus was invariably silent and uncommunicative as to its fell designs. It would lull suspicious caution to rest and thus betray the unwary into a feeling of false security, to be rudely shattered by sudden attack.

While the grapefruit has many imitators among those table offerings which boast baffling uncertainty in conduct, none has been able to surpass it for sheer Teutonic deviltry. Its instinctively treacherous methods of warfare are comparable with those of the submarine that strikes when least suspected.

Although the olive and dill pickle have also developed tricks which frequently lead to unpleasantness, these are mild in comparison with the vicious traits of the ungentle shaddock. The perfection of the gas mask suggested relief from the stinging squirt, but, happily, the discovery by the department of agriculture that, by crossing the grapefruit with a tangerine, the peril is obviated settles the matter more satisfactorily.

CHANDLER

GREATEST OF ALL SIXES

Chandler is Back to $1795

THAT'S the word on the street today. It's good news to the car-using public.

With this $300 Reduction

Chandler leads in price, now as always, because it is a basic policy of the Chandler Company to build a really fine car and price it as closely as it can be priced. The great Chandler plant, the millions of capital employed in Chandler production, are back of that statement. They exist because of that policy.

Chandler is the greatest of sixes.

Cars come and go. Types of motors, too. Chandler lives and grows, and every season multiplies its friends.

On the splendid Chandler chassis, famous for its marvelous motor, are mounted most attractive styles of body, distinguished in design, luxuriously comfortable, handsomely finished and upholstered.

Touring Car

The big, roomy Chandler Touring Car, seating seven in perfect comfort, leads the line. In grace and beauty of design, it holds pre-eminence.

Four-Passenger Roadster

The Chandler Roadster, seating four, continues to hold its favor with a big public. Chandler design has solved the problem of the close-coupled seating arrangement without the sacrifice of beauty of body lines.

Dispatch Car

The Chandler Dispatch Car, seating four, is all that its name implies. A car to "go get there" in. Snappy, fast—with just a touch of raciness in its make-up.

Convertible Sedan and Coupe

In the four-door Convertible Sedan, seating seven, and the four-passenger Convertible Coupe, Chandler offers the very finest development of the all-season type of car. Beautifully built cars, both of them. With windows closed they offer snug protection against snow or rain or cold. With windows lowered or removed, they are quite as open to the sunshine and soft warm air of pleasant days as is any other type of car. Thousands are buying Chandler sedans and coupes now, and enjoying their delightful riding comfort.

And Chandler is Back to $1795

In choosing your new car you will consider the Chandler. Let us show you now why Chandler is the greatest of sixes. Come, decide for yourself.

A Great Economy Because of Extra Wear

"After a trip to Kilauea, the active volcano of Hawaii, my Neolin-soled shoes were the only ones not absolutely ruined. Many in our party wore hob-nailed boots," said Miss Jean P. Lane of Seattle, Washington.

The sharp jagged lava of Kilauea cuts an ordinary sole to pieces quickly. That Neolin Soles stood the test but emphasizes their toughness and durability. These qualities are built into them by a scientific process. Women—and men and children, too—who are hard on shoes should buy them with Neolin Soles. They come in many styles and, because of the extra wear they give, are a great economy.

And any repairman will re-sole your worn shoes with Neolin Soles, which are flexible and waterproof as well as long-wearing. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels, guaranteed to outwear all other heels.

KANSAS GROCERS SEEK BOARD TO SUPERVISE TRADE

Want State to Put Stores on a National Bank Basis.

TOPEKA, Kas.—Putting the corner grocery store almost on the same plane as a bank, limiting the number and providing for an examination of the prospective grocer on his knowlegge of the business has precipitated one of the biggest fights Kansas has had in the legislature in many years.

The state retailers' association is standing sponsor for the plan to license the grocers of the state and the anti-organization grocers, with some within the organization, aided by a lot of folks who are opposed to regulations of any kind on any thing, are fighting the plan. The two crowds have stirred up a fuss that seems likely to overshadow anything else the legislature may have to consider during the session.

Want State Board.

Axel Johnson, president of the retailers, is the active fighter for the law to create a state grocer board of three members, one representing the grocers, one the general public, and one the state board of health. This board would conduct an examination of all the present grocers in business as to their financial responsibility and sanitation and give them instructions in the paths they should follow. But when a man wanted to start a new grocery then the board would have a real examination.

Under the law authorizing the establishment of national banks the controller of the currency may refuse a charter when he believes there isn't sufficient business for another national bank in the community. The same rule applies to state banks in Kansas and the state bank commissioner may refuse a charter to a bank where he does not believe the business will justify a new bank. The law creating the grocery board gives it the same plenary powers to refuse to permit the opening of a new grocery.

Must Show Necessity.

One of the things the bill specifically provides for is that the prospective grocer must make a conclusive showing to the board on the absolute necessity of the new grocery being opened and if this showing is good then the board will proceed to examine into his fitness to open the business. The inquiry will be conducted to learn the knowledge of the grocer regarding stocks of goods, credits, sanitation and to discover the prospect's fitness for the business, his experience and financial responsibility. Then the license may be issued and the store can be opened.

To Protect Grocers.

"The object of the law," says a statement issued by the retailers, "is to protect the legitimate grocer from the man who starts up a business, runs a little while and then fails. It is also for the protection of the public as the prices of most goods should be less with well regulated business because the public will not have to pay the debts of the fly by nights who attempt the business."

The grocers disclaim any intention of conducting any inquiry into the knowledge of a man in the mixing of sand with sugar or the tinkering with the scales or similar matters as these are all now carefully regulated by laws and watched over by state and local inspectors.

INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The indications are that when the Seventy-first general assembly of Indiana convenes next Thursday the start of a conflict between the Republican state organization and the Legislative Council of Indiana Women will begin. The trouble comes as a result of the women not being willing to have the suffrage amendment sidetracked for the purpose of putting through platform measures, as pledged by the G. O. P. at the recent election.

Under the Indiana constitution two amendments or sets of amendments cannot be pending at the same time—hence the difficulty. Under the Beardsley amendment for equal suffrage, as passed by the last session of the state legislature, the women gained what they believed was a great victory. It is necessary that this same amendment be readopted by the coming legislature before it can be submitted to the people to vote upon.

Clash With Women.

But here is where the rub comes in, and the women will not go down without a fight, according to their leaders. The Republicans in their state convention declared for constitutional amendments for the budget system, classification of property for taxation, for the appointment of the clerk of the Supreme court and state superintendent of public instruction by the governor, and authorizing him to veto any item of the appropriation bills.

These matters constitute an important part of the Republican platform program, and in order that these amendments may be started by the coming legislature it will be necessary to reject the equal suffrage amendment as passed by the last session of the general assembly. The plan as suggested by Gov. Goodrich and other leaders is to reject the suffrage amendment and to readopt it along with the resolution carrying out the platform measures.

Oppose Plan.

This would set the suffrage movement back two years, and they are opposed to the plan, believing that the suffrage movement is of far more importance at this time than the other proposed amendments. Mrs. Edward Franklin White, president of the council, insists that the Beardsley amendment could be passed by the coming legislature and submitted for a vote of the people at the next election.

The proposed bill for a new oil inspection department was completed this week, the last of a series of Republican measures to come before the legislature. As a result of the controversies connected with the oil inspection department as it has existed in the past, and the legal tangle in which it is involved owing to federal court decisions, the new bill is regarded as one of the most important to be brought up for consideration. The measure was prepared by a legislative committee composed of Senator Estes Duncan of Cloverdale, and Representative F. M. Hamilton of South Bend, who were assisted by J. H. Edwards of Mitchell. All the other Republican platform bills have been printed.

HIGHER THAN ANY FILM STAR

Miss Clifford's Flight Was Something More than Oratorical

Miss Ruth Clifford

After an air journey at Venice, Cal., Miss Ruth Clifford has begged the scenario editor to write a film with the action in the clouds. Miss Clifford was taken to a height of 6,000 feet and liked it so well she wants to be filmed up there. Miss Clifford thinks that a film star ought to shine up there.

MINNESOTA

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—As the day for the convening of the legislature approaches the more apparent it becomes that the subject of good roads building in Minnesota will be one of the most important to come before that body. With the farming communities unusually prosperous because of the high prices obtained for crops and live stock and with the prospect that extensive public works may be required to keep labor employed after the return of the soldiers, it is believed the sentiment of all classes is ripe for entry upon an ambitious road program.

From influential quarters it is being urged that the legislature reënact the so-called "Elwell law" with such modifications as may be necessary as to make it fit in with the existing opportunity to procure government coöperation in the construction of highways.

Law Was Repealed.

Under this act, called for its author, Senator J. T. Elwell, some 1,100 miles of road were built, many counties taking advantage of its provisions. Due to the fear of inhabitants of some counties that they would be overburdened with debt and would not be correspondingly benefited, the law was repealed several years ago.

For road building purposes the constitutional unit in Minnesota is the county. The Elwell law provided that approved road projects undertaken under its terms should be paid for, half by the state, one-fourth by the county, and one-fourth by benefiting individuals. Counties were authorized to sell bonds and payments might be spread over a term of years.

Under a modified Elwell bill for the coming session it is set forth that the state and counties could avail themselves of federal aid. For such roads as the government might approve, in conjunction with state or local authorities, the government would pay half, the state one-fourth, and the county and individuals one-eighth each. It would be optional with counties whether they should take advantage of such coöperation.

Would Cost $7.

It is estimated that for a good hard road costing $10,000 a mile, if built with government coöperation, the first cost to the owner of 160 acres would be about $53 in taxes if assessments were spread over a zone three miles wide. If payment were made in ten equal installments, the cost per year, including interest charges, would be approximately $7. Advocates of good roads insist that no landowner could spend $7 to better purpose for his own material welfare and comfort.

MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Mich.—Action of Henry Ford's attorneys in filing petitions leading up to a recount of the vote that elected Truman H. Newberry United States senator attracted almost as much attention in Michigan the last week as did the opening of the 1919 legislature.

The petitions asked the United States federal District court in the western district of Michigan to order the city clerks of Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Cadillac and other towns to preserve the ballots cast at the last election.

Will Contest Election.

This step was taken because Ford intends to contest the seat of Senator-elect Newberry, and there is now no state law compelling election officials to save ballots after a specified time—and that period has passed.

Charges of general fraud are made in the petition against practically all of western Michigan and upper peninsula election officials. Thousands of votes cast for Ford were not counted for him, it is charged, or were counted for Newberry instead of Ford. So general are these charges that prominent Republicans in Grand Rapids are openly expressing indignation at the charges, which, they maintain, are preposterous on their face.

United States Senator-elect Newberry is named as a co-respondent with the city and county cclerks. It was said that similar petitions would be filed in the United States court in the eastern district in the near future.

Where Ford Lost.

It is noticeable that most of the fraud charges and most of the county and city officials affected are in counties and cities expected to go for Ford, but which did not do so, notably Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo. Apparently in counties and cities carried by Ford there was no fraud or irregularity.

Commander Newberry, it is said, is eager to have the whole question of the senatorial election brought out in the limelight. Whether this can best be done by permitting the Ford forces to have their way unopposed or whether the facts can be best developed by a vigorous defense that will bring everything into court, is the question to be decided. Some of Newberry's supporters are openly in favor of taking action at once to defend Republicans of western Michigan from charges of crookedness.

From present indications the recount fight promises to equal the fall campaign in bitterness.

WISCONSIN

MADISON, Wis.—The legislature of Wisconsin will meet on Wednesday next, in the session which will have more vital problems before it than any previous legislature in the state's history.

The reconstruction period of the state will be of first importance, and most of the legislative problems of the session, which is likely to last six months, will hang upon this major problem. Such minor points as the reorganization of the national guard, either in the form of an authorized body of troops under federal supervision, or as state troops like the state constabulary of Pennsylvania, with essential modifications to meet differing conditions between Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, is only one of these many problems.

Labor a Problem.

Not the least important will be the problem of foreign language in the state schools and the matter of state support for these schools.

And then the problem of labor, of the providing employment for disabled soldiers, the reinstating of the able-bodied returning soldiers if work is slack, and the problems of women's work in factories will all have a reconstruction phase, due to the developments of the war year.

Women have so far delved into the usual fields of men's work that it is difficult to tell where to draw the line in many industries, and revision of the state labor laws relating to women will be taken up.

The presence of seventeen Socialists, the largest number the Reds have ever had in the capitol, will bring out many unusual legislative proposals, it is expected, though the Socialist program is not yet divulged. And back of all the actual work of the legislature will be the stalking shadow of coming elections, and the jockeying for position of rival candidates for public office.

WAR ORPHANS OF FRANCE ADOPTED BY SCHOOLBOYS

Many Rooms Have 'Brother' or 'Sister' War Victim.

When the school boys and girls of Illinois grow up and go to Europe for travel, they will find in France thousands of young men and women of their own ages who will greet them as brothers and sisters. For there are now in Illinois and many other states of this country tens of thousands of school children who are contributing their pennies and dimes to the maintenance of French orphans of war who have lost their father and breadwinner in battle. In Chicago alone there are about 50,000 school children who have, through their schoolrooms, "adopted" these orphans.

Under the auspices of the fatherless children of France committee, there is now a school drive throughout the country, for the purpose of securing the adoption of as many as possible of the fatherless children in France who need support. One of the features of the "Friday afternoon exercises" of the average school room these days is the reading of the charming letters which come from the orphans in France who have been adopted as little foster sisters and brothers of the American school children. For these letters tell of many things interesting and new to the American child, with their stories of life in little French villages, of the schools of France, and of the personal life of some of the children who have seen, perhaps, their own home devastated by the enemy.

To "adopt" a French orphan, send a check or money order for $3 monthly, $9 quarterly or $36.50 yearly to David R. Forgan, treasurer, room 741 Fine Arts building, Chicago. Mrs. Walter S. Brewster is chairman of the Chicago committee of the fatherless children of France.

MAY HAVE CHILD IF SHE DOES NOT GO TO GERMANY

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—If Mrs. Fritz Schmidt, formerly of Munich, Germany, now of Narberth, abandons her plan to return to Germany "as soon as things clear up," she may keep her 2 year old daughter. Judge Swartz so decided at Norristown in the habeas corpus proceedings between husband and wife over the custody of the child.

Mrs. Schmidt, who came to America in January, 1914, accused her husband of "running around" with other women, and exhibited letters which she said she found in his desk and waste basket from "affinities." The husband, in turn, said Mrs. Schmidt was not mentally fit to keep their child, but physicians at the State hospital at Norristown denied this.

Hun Officers Organize to Protect Interests

AMSTERDAM.—Capt. Erich von Salzmann, who acted as military "expert" of the Vossische Zeitung, has called a meeting of all Prussian officers, officers' wives, and officers' widows for discussion of the situation of the military caste. Salzmann's appeal asserts that the caste, in accordance with its traditions, has acknowledged "accomplished facts," but, having now the right, like other citizens, to assert its political views, must, like them, organize for the purpose.

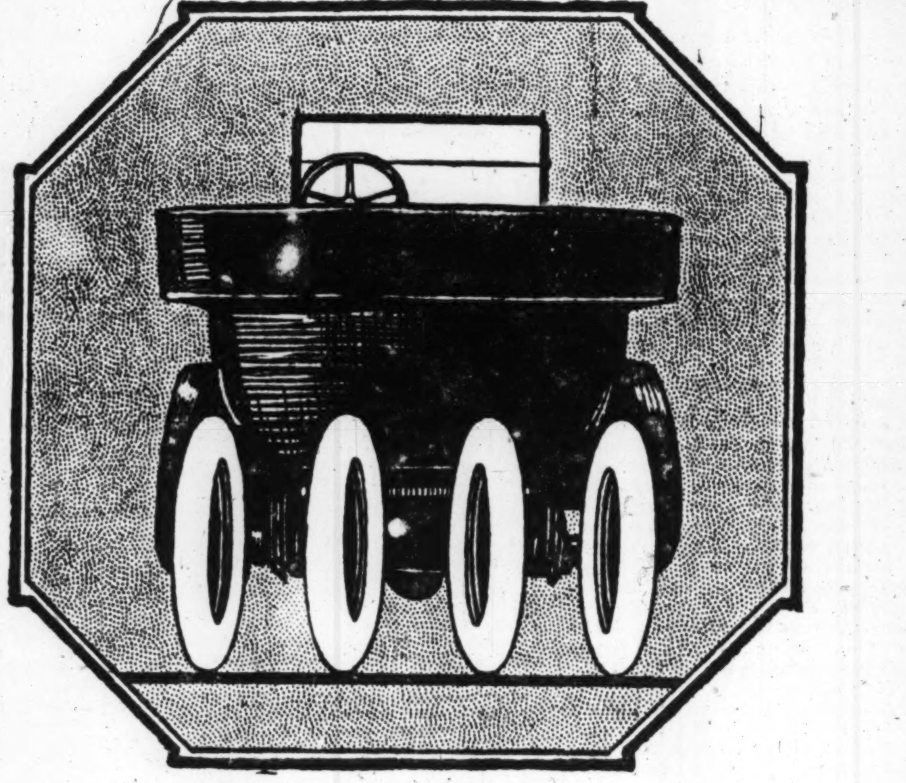
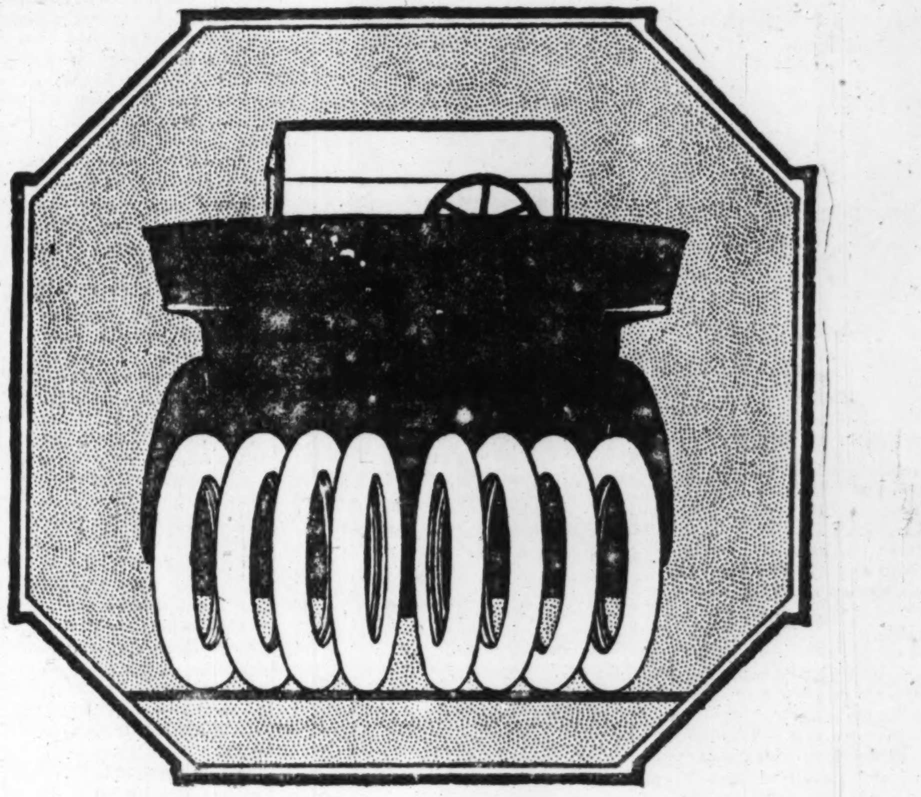
The Franklin CAR





How Many Tires Does Your Car Need To Go 10,000 Miles?

THE above question goes straight to the root of one of the largest items of motoring expenditure. For tires cost money—how much money depends largely on whether your car is or is not easy on tires.

The average car (on the right) heavy, or rigidly built, or both—to go 10,000 miles, needs an extra set of tires, or eight tires in all.

The Franklin Car (on the left) to go the same distance—and further—needs only the four tires on the car, or half as many as the other.

There could be no clearer illustration of the splendid economy of the Franklin—America's First Light Weight Fine Car; nor a more direct indictment of unnecessary motor car weight.

Heavy Weight Pounds Out Tires

It is excess weight that prevents the average heavy and rigid car from equaling the publicly-known Franklin tire-mileage. The action of the weight of an automobile on its tires is similar to a hammer blow—and the heavier the hammer, the harder and more destructive the blow. Heavy weight pounds out tires prematurely. And the heavy car owner, accustomed to paying for tire-mileage he doesn't get, accepts it as part of the game—until he meets a Franklin owner.

For Franklin owners in every part of the country, get a consistent delivery of 10,000 miles and more to the set of tires.

The reason lies in the sixteen-year old Franklin principle of Scientific Light Weight and Flexible Construction. The Franklin weighs 2445 pounds—the right weight for a full-size five passenger car. Moreover, it carries the minimum unsprung weight—weight below the springs, that contributes to the pound and shock tires must meet.

Franklin Flexible Construction—full elliptic springs, instead of the usual compromise type; chassis frame of tough, resilient ash instead of unyielding steel—is still another reason why tires on the Franklin get every opportunity to deliver the full mileage that is in them. This flexible construction reduces road-shocks on tires. There are no torque bars or strut rods to cause the rigidity that leaves tires unprotected.

Light Weight Also Means Gasoline Economy

These facts of Franklin construction affect the whole performance of the car. Because of Scientific Light Weight, because of Flexible Construction, the Franklin is not only economical in tires, but also gives a day-by-day delivery to its owners of 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline instead of the usual 10, besides remarkable riding-comfort and ease of handling.

Think of these things—and decide that any car that combines fineness with motoring economy such as this, is worth your immediate inspection.

For, any way you look at it, your motoring satisfaction in 1919 is going to depend on whether or not you have a car that will give you efficient transportation, with the utmost comfort, safety and reliability—at the least expense.

COLD TO DEPART; LEAVES TRAIL OF DEATH, INJURIES

One Man Fatally Frozen; Chill Decreases the Influenza.

THE FORECAST.

Cloudy and not so cold today, with possibly light snow; Monday unsettled, with rising temperature.

Ten below zero weather visited death and many accidents upon Chicago and suburbs yesterday.

W. W. Willmarth, 65 years old, a pioneer citizen of Glencoe, was frozen to death in Glencoe yesterday morning. The body was discovered lying in the street at Lincoln avenue and Green Bay road at 7:15 o'clock.

For many years Mr. Willmarth, who leaves a widow and two children, had lived at 324 South avenue, Glencoe. Dr. Frederick Fielding, family physician, said that Mr. Willmarth had been frozen to death.

Two Indirect Cases.

Two deaths which the coroner's office attributed indirectly to the cold were reported last night.

C. F. Johnson, a cement worker, walked into a saloon at 2000 West Fifty-ninth street and sat down. He died a few moments later, supposedly of heart disease superinduced by the cold. He was 54 years old and lived at 1647 East Seventieth street.

Frank Calabano, a laborer, 8100 Ellis avenue, was found dead on the Illinois Central tracks at Seventy-ninth street. He had been struck by a train. Calabano was 37 years old and was employed as a laborer on the tracks. Snow and ice may have prevented him from getting out of the way of a train.

Tony Kodak, 1746 South Union street, was burned to death in his home, which caught fire from an overheated stove.

Disease Is Decreased.

The cold wave, on the other hand, has done some good. Influenza and pneumonia cases are on the decrease, says Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commisioner. In twenty-four hours there have been reported 136 new cases of influenza and twenty deaths; fifty-five new cases of pneumonia, with twenty-one deaths. There were in the same time 121 deaths from all causes.

Investigators from the department of health took up the trail of the cold street car, the cold elevated train, and the cold flat yesterday. Dr. Robertson said that he had had many complaints of cold elevated trains and threatened suits unless the company kept the cars warm.

"I am willing to be fair with the companies," he said. "I realize that this is exceptionally cold weather, but I think the company can do better. One of my employés reported a reading of 23 degrees on a car of the Ravenswood branch.

Relief Is Promised.

"I have talked with the president of the company and he has promised relief. He said that the sudden and intense cold put a weight on the system that was hard to handle."

During the day nearly two hundred complaints were received at the city hall from apartment dwellers who complained that they were getting insufficient heat.

A health inspector went to the home of Mrs. W. Y. Atkins, 6161 South Michigan avenue. Mrs. Atkins had complained that her daughter, 6 years old, Elizabeth Jean, had been ill of pneumonia for five weeks and that there was little or no heat. Dr. Robertson threatened to cause the arrest of the agent. The investigator found the thermometer registered at 55 degrees.

"While this is not exactly comfortable," said Dr. Robertson, "it isn't freezing, and the family can get along until we see that the landlord does better."

Fixes "Arctic Colony."

Repairmen and cleaners attacked the heating apparatus yesterday in the home of the "Arctic Colony," at Clay and Fremont streets, to the accompaniment of applause of the assembled families. Ten families, with fifteen children, there had been without heat at all, they reported, since before Christmas.

Tenants said that the apartment was owned by Mrs. B. E. Kellner, 2141 Sedgwick street.

BUCKET OF COAL ROUTS ROBBERS WITH REVOLVERS

If holdup men come around and annoy you by show of guns, simply pour a bucket of coal over their heads. Joseph Herson, a grocer, 1410 North St. Louis avenue, tried that scheme last night and it worked.

He has been in business in the same spot ever since 1886. Holdups have occurred all around him, but never until last night had he looked into the business end of a gun. A rather short man, with a limp, entered as if to purchase something.

Mrs. Herson offered to wait on him. A tall, slender man followed and the two drew guns. Mrs. Hendrickson, a patron, living near by, entered a moment later and screamed. Then Mrs. Herson screamed. Mr. Herson arrived with a bucket of coal.

He threw the whole bucketful at the bandits. One of them shot once, at Herson. Both women screamed and continued to scream. The bandits made hasty exit and escaped.

When the police came a search was made for a bullet hole. None was found, which leads the police to believe that the bandits, possibly timorous, had used blank cartridges to insure themselves against committing mur-

THE ROYAL ROAD

Another Girl Seeking Film Eminence Runs Away.

Violet Nabel

There seems to be a conviction in the juvenile mind that to achieve eminence in the profession of motion picture acting one must first run away from home. In the event these lines should reach the eye of 15 year old Violet Nabel, who left the parental roof at 1020 East Sixty-third street Dec. 28, we quote her mother, Mrs. Herman Nabel:

"Tell Violet through THE TRIBUNE that if she'll only come back to us we not only will not spank her but will send her to any motion picture acting school she may choose. And when she is graduated she may continue in the profession."

Violet is said to resemble a popular screen star and her ambition is to emulate her success. She had $25 when she left home and she told her 7 year old sister, Georgiana, that she would not "return until I make good." The parents have notified the police, but they have obtained no trace of Violet.

CLEAN OFF WALKS!

Police Chief Orders That Ice Be Removed So Danger of Death or Injury May Be Averted.

CLEAN your sidewalks. It may save lives or permanent injury to persons, and, furthermore, Chief of Police Garrity has said that it must be done. More than fifty serious accidents, due to falling on the ice, have been reported since the cold wave struck Chicago.

Skulls, arms, legs, and hips have been fractured in falls. A few persons may die as a result, others become cripples for life. If you can't get the ice off right away, put on ashes, sand, or salt. There is grave peril in icy sidewalks.

Mrs. Anna L. Murphy of 6007 Rhodes avenue, a police matron, formerly chief matron, sprained ankle and injured ligaments of leg.

Mrs. Mary Schultz, 75 years old, 2370 North Leavitt street, skull fractured.

Robert Tompkins, 606 West Madison street, dislocated shoulder.

Michael Tokorny, 5316 Roscoe street, fracture of right hip.

Policeman Thomas Leyhen, 3035 South Michigan avenue, fracture of right knee.

Mrs. Martha Murphy, 4615 West Huron street, right leg fractured.

Mack David, 4707 Calumet avenue, right leg fractured.

Mrs. Mary Kraus, 72, 3216 North Clark street, right leg broken.

Policeman John McCann, 1400 Indiana avenue, right ankle fractured.

MAYOR ASKS FOR WRITTEN 'KICKS' ON CAR SERVICE

Mayor Thompson welcomes complaints about inadequate street car service. The mayor has had prepared several thousand complaint cards and car users are asked to fill these out and mail them to the mayor's office.

The cards, the first of which were issued yesterday, are slightly larger than a postal.

"Coöperate with the mayor by giving information which will force adequate street car service or justify a forfeiture of the companies' franchises," part of the card read.

"The traction ordinances provide that the companies shall furnish adequate and first class street railway service in all respects. Point out time and place where such service is not furnished by filling out blank on this card and return to me."

Corporation Counsel Ettelson asked the city council committee on finance yesterday for an appropriation of $25,000 to carry on the city's fight against the public utilities commission allowing the surface and elevated lines to charge higher fares. The city has suits against the surface and elevated lines now pending, both in the courts and before the public utilities commission.

Found Dead in His Room, Alcoholism, Says Coroner

Robert Carter was found dead in his room at 1009 East Seventy-fifth street yesterday. Acute alcoholism appeared to be the cause, according to the coroner's office.

POLITICAL SCENT TRAILS $50,000 EXTRA LEGAL FEE

Accounting of City Law Official Secured by Committee.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The city urgently needed money last spring. A bankers' committee tendered $1,750,000. It was accepted. Just at that point the council finance committee gave the corporation counsel $50,000 to consummate the loan—for extra legal and financial work.

The finance committee called upon Corporation Counsel Ettelson yesterday for an accounting.

"You and Levy Mayer both promised that this money would be spent exclusively in connection with that loan," stated Ald. Schwartz, "and some of us don't believe that was done. Was it?"

"Principally," replied Ettelson.

"Was the money spent for that purpose?" asked Ald. Capitain later.

"He has explained," said Ald. A. A. McCormick, "that he used the $50,000 to supplement his office appropriation."

Employed for Purpose.

"The persons were employed for that purpose," replied Ettelson, "but they also worked on other things."

From the monthly expenditures out of this fund it appears there was more work on the loan the month before the last primary than at any other time. Note also the expenditures the month before election in the following little table:

July	$2,296.02	October	$7,796.67
August	7,074.83	November	8,215.48
September	14,825.23	December	6,749.84

The bankers last fall loaned the committee $4,000,000 more, but that does not appear to have caused so much extra work.

"What was this extra work?" asked Ald. McCormick of Chairman Richert.

"The only extra work that I know of was what Hornstein (assistant corporation counsel) and I did," Richert replied. "That was preparing a new voucher form."

Who Got the Money?

Hornstein did not get any extra money, according to the list complied by the committee staff. But who did get the money, which is nearly all gone, cannot be desciphered without more information. "Arthur Josette" is credited with $289.48. Of course, the name is Arthur Josetti, Thompson ward leader, whose name has been upon the pay roll a number of times as real estate expert.

Another beneficiary was "Ben Routhous" for an even $50. There is a Ben Rothouse in the Second ward, with a saloon at 3700 State street, who is said to have a Platonic interest in politics occasionally. Perhaps he is the man who got the $50. So, one can not be sure of the names without their addresses and private occupations as a means of checking.

The name of Morris Greenspan is set opposite $241.78. Ettelson was asked if Greenspan had not been in the saloon business, to which he replied: "No, he's in the tire business over here on Washington street." Greenspan is another name which has appeared as a real estate expert and as owner of various wagons hired by the city.

Realty Experting Slow?

It may be that work was slack in the real estate experting business and some of the faithful were put in on the $50,000 pie.

"Isn't Otto Cederwall the city storekeeper who kept the city store for a long time after it had been abolished?" was asked of Ettelson.

"Cederwall is a very capable man," he answered.

Cedarwall received $300. Thomas Devereaux got only $200. He is now contesting Benny Mitchell's election to the legislature. A. Erickson, a former member of the legislature, a Thompson leader, has been paid $2,291.63. David Alexander, who probably is the same who was an assistant corporation counsel, cashed vouchers for $1,023.05. Chester C. Cleveland, son of the former first assistant corporation counsel, got $275, while William Mulvihill, who is probably the same man as the Thompson candidate for alderman in the Seventh ward last year, only got $153.53. Another recipient probably is a relative of a Thompson committeeman in a west side ward, and others have names similar to a number of prominent employés of the city. In a word, it appears that to borrow the $1,750,000 it was necessary to employ fifteen special counsels and 122 "law clerks and investigators."

Needed Lots of Talent.

One lawyer was paid at the rate of $2,000 a year, another at $2,400, a third at $3,500, two at $3,600 each, one at $4,000, seven at $5,000 each, one at $6,000, and one at $7,500, in addition to the bankers' lawyer, Levy Mayer, and the city's corporation counsel, Samuel Ettelson, and the existing law department.

H. Starr was the man who received $1,718.75 at the top rate of $7,500 a year. At the $6,000 rate George P. Foster cashed in for $2,000. The finance committee's list indicates that L. M. McGill was a law clerk and investigator and a special counsel at the rate of $5,000 yearly for each job. As a law clerk and investigator he drew $208.33 and as a lawyer $1,458.31. C. S. Knudson also had the happy combination of two jobs, two titles with a salary rate of $5,000 a year attached to each, but his dip into the fund totaled only $778.50.

Clerk Hire Analysis.

There were three "law clerks and investigators" who received pay at the rate of $5,000 a year. One was at $4,000, another at $3,600, another at $3,000, eight at $2,400, one at $2,000, fifteen at $1,800, one at $1,620, five at $1,500, one at $1,320, fifty-seven at $1,200, four at $1,100, a dozen at $1,000, two each at $960 and $720, and still eight others whose rate of compensation the staff has not been able to determine.

Perhaps this 137 employés did not examine every dollar the banks supplied, because Mr. Ettelson explains they also did other work, but then the job is not finished. Ettelson told the committee several times that court proceedings are still pending.

Needs More Money.

He asserted and reasserted that he thought his office should have $400,000 this year. It only had $389,000 last year, including the $50,000 for the 137 "dollar polishers." The committee and Ettelson discussed this subject for nearly two hours.

"It's a crime the way city business is transacted," said Ettelson at one point.

"I beg the privilege of agreeing with you," commented Ald. McCormick. The former was talking about a small appropriation and the latter about the way appropriations are spent.

WAGE BOOSTS

Those Asked by City Hall Employes Total $4,466,200.

CITY employés, including those who belong to union labor organizations, want their salaries boosted $4,466,200 this year. The city council committee on finance, which is making up the annual appropriation bill, will begin tomorrow to consider the requests for more pay.

Following are the increases asked:

Unions	$ 495,960
Clerks	317,150
Individuals	13,284
Engineers	139,220
Employés whose annual compensation is above $1,800	462,586
Firemen	734,500
Policemen	2,303,500
Total	$4,466,200

The committee is considering each request. If allowed the sums needed to grant them will be added to the budget to be presented to the legislature to show that the city must have financial relief to meet its obligations.

Without the increases asked for the budget now totals $33,301,000, an increase of $8,028,117 over last year's appropriation bill.

Girl Attends Marriage of Man She Calls Betrayer

One of those present yesterday at the Church of the Five Holy Martyrs, West Forty-first street and South Kedzie avenue, when Roman Skrzinasz of 3125 West Thirty-eighth place was married to Miss Stephana Zich, was Miss Bronislawa Kopec of 2254 West Nineteenth street.

Miss Kopec previously had told Judge Gemmill that Skrzinasz was the father of her child. She was referred to the Associated Charities, which told her to go to the Rev. Joseph Kruszka, pastor of the church. His assistant performed the ceremony. Mr. Kruszka said he assumed full responsibility for the marriage after an investigation.

Miss Kopec left the church in company with the bride and bridegroom.

$8,000 Worth of Morphine Taken from Pullman Berth

Two suitcases containing 120 cans of morphine sulphate valued at $8,000 were found by special officers of the Pullman company in a berth on the Overland Limited train yesterday morning just before the train left the Northwestern depot. The owners of the drug escaped. The morphine was turned over to L. G. Nutt, supervising agent of the federal narcotics bureau. He declared it appeared to be part of a large quantity of the drugs smuggled into Chicago recently by a "syndicate," at whose head was a man known to the authorities as "Bobbie."

LOOP EXPLOSION SHAKES UP RUSH HOUR CROWDS

Clark Street Landmark Partly Wrecked; 1 Man May Die.

One man was entombed and probably fatally burned and scores of persons severely shaken up yesterday afternoon in an explosion of the heating plant in the basement of the Arcade building, a five story loop landmark at 32 South Clark street.

It was the rush hour—5 o'clock—and the building, which houses a cafeteria, a restaurant, hotel, gymnasium, and saloon, was filled with people. Men and women were catapulted about by the force of the explosion and the excitement bordered upon hysteria until the arrival of the fire department. The building was partly wrecked.

Fire Follows Blast.

The alarm was sounded by H. Ekstrom, proprietor of the Electrical Repair shop, two doors east of the Arcade. He was waiting on a customer when the explosion occurred. Both were knocked down. When the firemen arrived they found a fire in the rear of the building. After extinguishing it they entered the basement.

David Barrett, 68 years old, who had acted as assistant fireman for four days, was found buried under bricks and plastering. He was unconscious from scalds and burns. Charles J. O'Connor, the engineer, said he believed it was caused by a water pipe freezing. The heating plant was wrecked. An investigation has been started.

Foods Splatter Walls.

All the tables and the lunch counter in the Pixley & Ehler restaurant, on the first floor of the Arcade, were occupied. Each table has a complement of catsup bottles. These, with orders of ham and eggs, custard pie, and gravy dishes, were skyrocketed to the ceiling and walls. When the fire department arrived the diners, waitresses, and restaurant interior were well splashed. Streams of ruddy hue were streaming down the walls.

Three waitresses, the manager, and a cook were knocked down. Miss Anna Dugene, one of the waitresses, was serving a gentleman an order of pork and beans when the floor bulged and she fell across the table into his arms.

Cafeteria Crowds Routed.

There were 150 guests in the Arcade cafeteria on the second floor when the back wall started swaying and the flooring in the rear rose up. Dishes crashed to the floor, while the guests and forty waitresses and cooks dashed out of the door and down the stairs to the street.

A score of men were exercising in the gymnasium of Howard Carr on the third floor. As the elevator was impaired they were compelled to use the stairway, some reaching the subzero atmosphere of the street in running trunks, others in regulation gym costume.

Women in Dishabille.

Several women guests of the Chicago hotel fled to the street in dishabille. A. J. Dreilman, owner of the saloon in the building, was serving a drink when the wall behind the bar fell in. He escaped by jumping over the bar.

Lieut. Luke J. Garrick of the central police station, last night assigned Detective Sergeants Davidson and Oeschner to investigate the explosion and fix the responsibility.

Butcher Shops Open 8 A. M. to 6 P. M. Now

Beginning tomorrow morning butcher shops are to be open only between the hours of 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., with the exception that they will not close until 9 o'clock Saturday nights. A decision to this effect was reached yesterday by the Master Butchers' association.

NIGHT SCHOOL

Thirty-three Evening Study Gatherings Open Terms Tomorrow Night.

THIRTY-THREE evening schools are to be opened tomorrow night. Primarily the object of the night schools is to teach the English language and American ideals to foreign born adults and to give workers the fundamentals of education.

These are to be conducted under direction of William M. Roberts, assistant superintendent of schools, in the following Chicago schools:

North side: Burley, Franklin, Waller, Senn, Lane high and technical only; northwest side: Burr, Goethe, Stowe, Washingon, Wells, Tuley and Schurz; west side: Jackson, Komensky, Burns, Hammond, Herzl, Medill, Austin, Crane, and Harrison; south side: Armour, Seward, Phillips, Englewood, Sullivan, Tilden, Bowen, and Fenger.

Circulars have been printed in eleven languages telling of the value of the work.

OFFICER'S WIFE, WHO CONFESSED SIN, A MOTHER

Mrs. Madeline H. Schwabacher's baby arrived yesterday and it's a boy. Only after a Caesarian operation performed by Dr. H. P. Hurley and Dr. Max Thorek at the American hospital was the mite of humanity laid in the young mother's arms.

Lieut. Herbert J. Schwabacher, son of one of the wealthiest families in Peoria, overseas, sued for divorce last fall. A letter from the girl wife was copied into the petition. The letter told him of the coming of the baby and said:

"The sin I committed was a human sin. And, dear boy, was committed with a purpose. My life was lonesome and dreary; I had no one of my own. I never expected to see again the man I love. I wanted something to fill up my life when I would be alone in the world. I guess I was too good a girl to realize the sin of it."

When the baby boy, nine and a half pounds, was placed in her arms yesterday by a nurse the mother smiled weakly and gave it a bit of a hug. Then she closed her eyes and slept.

Edwin Balmer New Head of Midland Authors' Society

War aftermaths formed the principal topic last night at the annual banquet of the Society of Midland Authors in St. Hubert's grill. Sergt. Harold Baldwin of the Canadian forces, author of "Holding the Line," told of experiences at the front. Ralph B. Dennis, who spent thirteen months in Russia in the midst of the Bolshevik uprisings, described the chaos that that movement brought.

Edwin Balmer, author of "Ruth of the U. S. A.," now running in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, was elected president. John Stahl was chosen treasurer, and Alice Guerstenberg, secretary.

Brand Whitlock, ambassador to Belgium; Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, honorary president; and Emerson Hough, retiring president, who were unable to be present, sent letters of regret.

Favors Bar on Licenses to Ticket Scalping Theaters

Charges that their managers have been in collusion with ticket scalpers may cause all but two of the large loop theaters to lose their licenses, according to Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Breen.

Mr. Breen is preparing a report of evidence gathered in reference to ticket scalping. He stated yesterday that he would recommend that the licenses already held up be held up permanently, except two theaters which he would not name. Against these, he said, the evidence was not conclusive.

He will probably make his report to Corporation Counsel Ettelson Monday.

LISTEN! CAN THE SLANG! IT CRABS OUR LANGUAGE!

Chicago Woman's Club Hears Address on Pure Speech.

"Better speech, the use of perfect English, eventually will result in the Americanization of the conglomerates of which the nation consists," said Mrs. Katherine Knowles Robbins, chairman of the American speech commitee of the Chicago Woman's club yesterday.

"Americans of every extraction should become fluent in the use of proper diction," she continued. "With this nation cemented——"

The entry of a shuffling messenger boy interrupted her remarks. He removed his cigaret, leaned against the wall and drawled:

"Who's goin' ter sign dis 'ere?"

"With this nation cemented by the greatest war ——"

"Gee whiz," soliloquized the intruder audibly, "I gotta get a move on."

Common Tongue to Bind.

"With this nation cemented by the greatest war in history it is opportune to bind our citizens of all extractions by the use of the common tongue." Mrs. Robbins finished the sentence and hesitated while the wants of the boy were satisfied.

"It's a big task," sighed one of the women.

In its campaign for better speech and purer Americanism, the committee is putting out conspicuous posters, contributed by local artists and students of the Chicago high schools. No fight is being made on intelligent slang, according to Mrs. Robbins, but senseless jargon and overworked words are to be under a ban. "Ain't," "uh huh," and "this here" are relegated to the waste basket. Efforts are being made to eliminate the too frequent use of the following: Dope, line, sure, ya, yeh, and nope.

Slang Weakens Language.

"People should be made to see," said Mrs. Robbins, "that they are merely killing their power to speak fluently by the use of slang. Even our American college boy is in striking contrast to the Englishman, who says, 'have you dined?' while our college man slurs his language 'Yu et yet?'" Reports from the schools in the city indicate that widespread interest in the better speech movement is being given. Some of the high schools have adopted the system of error boxes, where often the teachers find criticisms of their own language."

Hinky Dink's Bartender Fined for Sale to Minor

Hinky Dink, known in the city hall as Ald. Michael Kenna of the First ward, yesterday appeared with his bartender, George Rosenbaum, before Judge Graham to answer a charge of selling liquor to John Crossen, a minor, living at 5801 South Paulina street. It was charged two sailors were waiting outside the saloon to take the liquor. After a conference among attorneys, the case was compromised, the bartender being fined $20 and the charge against the alderman dismissed.

File Appeal for Dear to United States Court

Attorneys Thomas E. Swanson and Charles C. Williams have filed a petition for an appeal in the case of Earl Dear to the United States Supreme court. The petition sets forth that the indictment under which Dear was convicted is illegal in that the foreman of the grand jury that returned the indictment was not properly sworn. It also charges that Dear was not given reasonable time in which to procure counsel and prepare his defense as is granted by law.

CITY'S PATIENCE AND CAR SERVICE BOTH GO TO ZERO

Discomforts of Usual Traffic Become Real Peril.

BY A STRAPHANGER.

It is marvelous where they hide 'em.

"Not a car in sight"—the phrase is as familiar as the paper on the wall and it fits any corner at any hour—rush hours preferred.

Five minutes here, ten minutes there, twenty minutes at another point, a shuddering population looks up and down vistas of empty blocks and moans between chattering teeth, "Not a car in sight!"

The romping street cars play a jubilant game of hide-and-seek with the people of this town, and they win right along.

To be specific, you should have stood watch at State and Ohio streets yesterday morning at 11:25 o'clock, which is not a rush hour, and seen the cars not go by. Turning north, toward the residential section, you looked into a bank of smoke that made Birmingham and Sheffield seem like the sun-kissed shores of some fairy isle. Looking south you saw the same, but thicker. Four blocks away the spires of the Holy Name were faintly visible. But no street cars. They had found a better hiding place—the little wags!

And Time Goes By.

Five, eight, ten minutes passed.

Meanwhile women waiting on the corner shivered and shook and pinched their faces into the well known lines of Chicago worry as they thought of the marketing for Sunday. Two anxious travelers, weighted with suitcases, did feats of grand and lofty profanity. The temperature by official count was 2 below zero. At 6 a. m., when the working people had had to take them, it was 11 below. In the preceding twenty-four hours there had been twenty-one deaths from pneumonia. That also is official.

But, lo—there is a rumble up the street—a rumble and a roar, like the speaking of distant drumfire.

They come! They come!

They also go.

Like the darkey's celebrated train they didn't even hesitate. They come in fours. Three brush by. The fourth stops. It is packed to the steps, but through the good nature of some jackies two of the dozen women in the street manage to squeeze on.

Fades Into the Smoke.

The car disappears in the smoke haze, trailing blue banners of jackies' pants. The jackies are hanging on by fingers and toes. Unlike Farragut, they won't have to be lashed to the mast when they go into action. They can fly from it.

The taxi at a dollar or two, motor bus at 10 cents. That's the option.

The lessons of history have not been lost on the street car company.

"Why don't they eat cake, then?" said Marie Antoinette when they told her the people had no bread.

So why walk? Dig for a dollar and find a taxi.

Conductor Sees "Solution."

That is not fancy. A peppery passenger aimed barbed queries at a conductor when at last he had sardined himself on to a car that had coyly consented to dally at a corner. The conductor registered 5-cents and no contrition, merely remarking equably, "Gee, friend, what you want is an auto."

Day and night it is the same. Choose another hour—11:05 at night. The place is State street and Jackson boulevard. A northbound car emerges out of ten minutes of silence.

Prompted by whims that only a motorman can fathom, or gripped, perhaps, by the greed for gold, the car halts. The people pile on. Huddled in a seat is a young woman—emphatically not of the theater crowd—making strange noises in her throat. The men gaze curiously at her. So do women, but not so curiously, and one woman whispers, "Why, she's crying!"

Sick with Cold.

Another woman bends down and asks a question. The girl chatters weakly, "I-I waited so long I'm—I'm sick with co-co-cold."

The car gets as far as State and Randolph—nearly. There two wheels of a stranded wagon impede one rail. Fifteen or twenty motionless minutes are accumulated for the wallet of time. There are leisurely conferences between conductor and motorman, then the foretokens of an advance. A man passenger, who has been in the street comes back into the car and says to the huddled, dumb audience of passengers, "With a little backing and switching they could have cleared that place in three minutes."

The car reaches Kinzie street. The conductor has a new idea, and cries with gusto, "Far north as we go. Take next car in the rear."

The patient sheep pile out, but there "ain't no next car in the rear"—at least not in sight.

A Few More Minutes.

In several minutes one comes galumphing over the bridge, halts amid the ice hummocks at Kinzie street, and the sheep hoist themselves into their new home.

These methods are typical.

The companies try to regulate balled up traffic by "switching back" after delays. Sometimes they dump you at North State and Kinzie going north and at State and Randolph going south. That is one of the finer shadings of their favorite game. They play it best in zero weather.

These delays, impositions, brutal crowdings, and stupid blunderings have ceased to be merely disgusting, as they are for nine months of the year, and now become a real peril to life, limbs, and lungs.

One Man Dies.

Poor Joseph Clancy, aged 28, died at St. Bernard's hospital Thursday afternoon as a consequence of injuries suffered when he was "brushed off" the footstep of an indecently crowded Halsted street car. Clancy was young and thought he could manage it—that hanging on by fingers and toes like a jackie. But he could not. With properly directed car service he would be alive today.

They are brushed off by heavy trucks as the cars go billowing over too narrow bridges. They fight their way—no, not fight, for there is no fight in sheep—but cdowd and erush their way in and out of the infrequent cars, to the destruction of raiment and manners. They stand on the weary corners, marking time with chills and congestions, and linking arms with pneumonia. With desperation in their eyes, anxiety in their hearts and an ache in every bone, they surge toward the infrequent car already crowded to the limits of decency of the commonest kind. Those at the end of the waiting crowd gain a footing on the steps and cling to the car by the slippery hand rails.

Working Girls Suffer.

Two girls are among the clingers. They have worked since 9. It is 6 now. Their lunch was at 1. They want their supper. But neither they nor some of the men even can long cling on in this piercing weather. So they drop off and foot it the rest of the way home, or wait twenty minutes for another chance. A twenty minute wait apropos of nohhing that a painstaking observer can fathom! Then a short ride, ending abruptly with "All out! Take the next car in the rear! All out!"

In twenty-five years first a million, then a million and a half, then two million, and now two million, eight hundred thousand men and women endure this kind of thing twice a day every day except Sunday. It is a miracle of heaven that for womankind we haven't bred solely a race of shrill neurotics by these hardships we suffer to be imposed upon them.

Wears Out Nerves.

Delays in the routine affairs of life—that's what wears out the nerves and spirits of men and women, and there never was a town where a little inclement weather was made so complete an excuse for the most exasperating of all delays—delays in your going to business and your coming home—as it is in Chicago.

Why?

Write your own editorial. You know as much about it as anybody. You know your own misery.

GOMPERS SAYS U. S. MUST HALT JOBLESS PERIL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Discussing reconstruction problems before the senate committee on education and labor today, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the people of the United States would not countenance a condition of industrial stagnation after the war. He said he had discussed with many men of affairs since the signing of the armistice the question of industrial stagnation and they took issue with the assertion made in some quarters that hours of labor must be increased and that wages must come down.

"There can be no repetition in the United States of the same conditions that prevailed in 1893 and 1894, when men and women were hungry for the want of employment," he added.

The problem to be met at this time, he said, is as great as the problem of winning the war. He paid high tribute to the service of workingmen throughout the country during the war and said the same could be said of employers.

Oak Park Plans to Open High School at Night

Plans for the establishment of a night high school in Oak Park will be discussed at a meeting of representatives of Oak Park civic organizations and school trustees to be held in the Lowell grammar school, Lake street and Forest avenue, Oak Park, next Thursday night. It will be necessary to have the legislature make changes in the school law.

LEWIS TO FORE IN DEMOCRATIC MAYORALTY RACE

Regulars Consider Making Senator Their Candidate for Place.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis yet may become the harmony Democratic candidate for mayor of Chicago. Negotiations have been in progress for forty-eight hours. The Democratic executive committee did not meet yesterday, as had been arranged, and the way is wide open, as was said by an insider, for "something doing on Lewis." Senator Lewis is expected to arrive in Chicago tomorrow or Tuesday morning.

One of the theories extant yesterday was that the regular organization has become doubtful that the renomination of Mayor Thompson can be forced in the Republican primaries. Sullivan leaders have been insistent that County Clerk Sweitzer shall be the regular Democratic candidate upon the single theory that Thompson is to be the Republican nominee.

Switch in Sentiment.

There has been a switch in this feeling since New Year's day. It has emphasized the sudden strength of the Lewis talk and it may be the regular organization will go through with Senator Lewis.

"The regulars might be with Lewis," one of them said last night. "Why not?

"Lewis can lick Thompson without a tremor, if it is between them, and it will be between them, because Lewis won't run if Dunne is a candidate. Lewis won't run if he believes that Carter Harrison would stick in the race as an independent. Regular support of Lewis would eliminate Hoyne. If Lewis says he is a candidate it is a political cinch that everybody who can deliver a precinct inside the Democratic party is going along with Lewis. He won't start until that is a sure thing."

Liability to Organization.

And this was his reason for the foregoing:

"What good is a mayor to the organization, one way or the other? He is a liability and never an asset, unless you make an exception of Fred Busse. If we can't nominate and elect an organization candidate, let's forget it. That's all there is to the Democratic factional scrap and if there's nothing to fight about, why worry? Lewis can be nominated and elected. Nobody in real business wants to be mayor with the city busted to go. If Lewis wants the job, why not? He can give the old town some real publicity and God knows that she needs a few kind words after all that has been said and done in the last four years."

Republican conferences looking toward a harmony agreement as between the Brundage and Deneen forces will be resumed tomorrow.

Matinee Today for Men in Uniform at Princess

Soldiers and sailors are invited today to a matinee at the Princess theater, Clark street, between Jackson boulevard and Van Buren street. They will be the guests of the entire company playing "She Walks in Her Sleep." The invitation is extended to every man in the national uniform, particularly the men returning from overseas service, officers and enlisted men alike. A uniform will be a pass to any part of the house. The first four rows of seats will be reserved for officers until curtain time, 2:30 p. m.

DRAFT HOUSING CODE TO SOLVE STATE PROBLEM

Experts Plan Law to Guard the Public Welfare.

A "state housing code" for Illinois is being drafted by Lawrence Veiller of New York City, secretary of the American Housing association; Charles B. Ball of Chicago, of the Chicago department of health, and State Senator Harold C. Kessinger of Aurora.

The bill will be modeled upon the Michigan code passed two years ago. The Michigan law includes Detroit, and all other cities above 10,000 population.

The bill will be the most modern presented so far in any state legislature, and more stringent than the bill introduced two years ago by Senator Kessinger.

"The amount of the lot that can be builded upon, plumbing, at least one outside window for every room, including bathrooms, are features of the proposed code," Senator Kessinger said. "All classes of buildings, single, double, and apartment dwelling houses, will be included. Only jails, state institutions, lodging houses, and hotels are exempted.

Illinois Behind on Law.

"Illinois is far behind other progressive northern states in this legislation. New York passed a code twenty-five years ago, and recently Indiana, Minnesota, and Michigan have put such laws upon their statute books. Gov. Harding of Iowa recently called in 300 representative citizens from every county of the state to confer upon the housing situation, and a bill has been drafted and will be presented at the next session of the Iowa legislature.

"Housing reform was one of the principal planks in the platform of the Lloyd George party, which only a few days ago won a tremendous victory at the English polls.

Guard Against Disease.

"The finding of 14,000 unreported cases of tuberculosis in one of Chicago's most congested districts and the present influenza epidemic, point to the need of a 'housing code' for Illinois.

COLUMBUS BOATS FIND NEW FRIENDS

The wave of indignation, that started when the south park commissioners voted to destroy the Columbus caravals, has caught the Knights of Columbus and the Italian society, and several important business men in its fervor. The two societies are going to fight to have the ships preserved.

According to the park commissioners, the expense of keeping the ships is so great they cannot maintain them longer. One of the ships, the Nina, is resting on the bottom of the Jackson park harbor, and the others are in wretched condition.

"If these ships were dry docked for the rest of the winter and then rebuilt next summer we would have three of America's most historic relics," said Daniel F. Crilly, yesterday. Mr. Crilly was president of the park board at the time the ships were turned over to Chicago by the World's Fair association. "It would be a small expense, and if once properly repaired they would last forever."

HAYS TO ARRIVE THIS WEEK FOR G. O. P. MEETING

National Committee Gathering Expected to Be Important One.

Republican National Chairman Will H. Hays will arrive in Chicago Tuesday or Wednesday as the advance agent of the gathering of the clans that will attend upon the session of the Republican national committee, beginning Friday morning at the Congress Hotel.

Chairman Hays, according to inside gossip last night, will be in Chicago with a full supply of information concerning the organization of the Republican presidential campaign of 1920.

No one doubts that Chairman Hays will reach Chicago perfectly informed as to what may be the suggestions or the intentions of Col. Roosevelt with respect to the formulation of party policies or the mapping out of the earlier arrangements that can be accomplished at this time through the national committee, looking forward to the 1920 contest.

Women Will Meet.

The first development of the round-up of Republican leaders will be the session on Wednesday of the women's advisory committee, of which Mrs. Medill McCormick is the chairman. This committee, appointed by Chairman Hays last fall, has announced the policy of working directly through the national committee in organizing the Republican party in the states where the women possess full privilege in participating in the presidential campaign.

Annual Dinner Postponed by Old Time Printers

The annual banquet of the Old Time Printers' association has been postponed to Saturday, Feb. 1, as the principal speaker, Col. Robert R. McCormick, is to be given a dinner on Jan. 18, the date previously announced, by his college alumni. Opie Read, president of the Press club, has been invited to act as toastmaster. The banquet is the thirty-fourth to be given by the Old Time Printers' association, which was formed in 1885 and consists of printers and newspaper men who have seen twenty-five years or more of continuous service with the publishing industry in Chicago.

William A. Cahill is president; W. Fred Barnard, chairman of the banquet committe, and William J. Hartman and William J. Hack vice chairmen. The speakers' committee is headed by Bernard J. Muljaney, and includes John M. Ryan, Thomas E. Sullivan, William C. Hollister, and Senator Elect Medill McCormick.

The dinner will be given in the gold room at the Congress hotel and more than 1,000 guests are expected.

RELIEF IN JERUSALEM.

LABOR PARTY'S GUIDING BODY IS SELECTED

The executive committee of fifteen which is to guide the destinies of the new Independent Labor party of Cook county, ordered selected by a committee of three at the party convention last Sunday, has been named. It includes two women and a Negro. The secretary-treasurer of the party also has been named by this committee. He is Morton L. Johnson, chairman of the central labor board of the electrical industries. The committee is as follows:

Charles Dold,
C. A. Sample,
William H. Boyer,
W. A. Neer,
Christian M. Madsen,
W. S. Deuel,
John Kikulski,
I. Glassman,
Margaret Haley,
Hugh Crambert,
John De Young,
Agnes Nestor,
Albert Peterson,
John Riley,
John Fitzpatrick,
E. N. Nockels.

The convention which will nominate candidates for all city offices will meet next Sunday at Hodcarriers' hall, 823 West Harrison street.

Western Union messenger boys, while they abandoned their plan of starting a strike last Friday, still nurse grievances. A delegation called at the headquarters of the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday to arrange for the formation of a union. They assert the company threatens to reduce their pay.

H. F. COOPER, UNDERWEAR MAN, WEDS.

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—Announcement was made here today of the marriage of Henry F. Cooper, founder of the Cooper Underwear company of this city and one of the most influential men in the textile business of America, to Miss Bertie E. Hardy, daughter of W. L. Hardy of St. Louis, at the latter's home on Thursday.

ASSEMBLY OPENS WEDNESDAY WITH SPEAKER FIGHT

Shanahan Claims Support of 58 of 90 G. O. P. Members.

The Illinois general assembly meets Wednesday noon at Springfield in its Fifty-first biennial session. As usual the speakership of the house is the undetermined quantity in the problem of organization of the legislature.

Friends of Speaker David E. Shanahan express the utmost confidence that he will be renominated by the Republican house caucus that will be held in the Leland hotel, beginning at 8 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Shanahan managers now claim that fifty-eight of the ninety Republican members of the house are committed to Mr. Shanahan's candidacy. To secure the caucus nomination requires forty-six votes, a majority of the ninety Republicans who will sit in it.

League Also Confident.

Mr. Shanahan is opposed most strenuously by the Anti-Saloon league of Illinois. The expectation of the league, as expressed yesterday, is that the league will be able to name its candidate for speaker in the Republican caucus and that Shanahan will have not to exceed forty-two votes at the maximum.

The Anti-Saloon league has called a conference of the dry forces at Springfield for tomorrow afternoon.

Fails to Name Choice.

The identity of the candidate upon whom the league will center its support in the last analysis has not been determined, or at least has not been disclosed publicly. At least twelve candidates figure as real possibilities for the ultimate indorsement of the headquarters committee of the Anti-Saloon league. The twelve, most of whom are active in getting the support of representatives in their own particular sections of the downstate are:

Brewer of Whiteside, Boyd of Henry, Bancroft of Cumberland, Ellis of Kane, Flagg of Madison, Hicks of Winnebago, Meents of Iroquois, Perkins of Logan, Pace of McDonough, Rowe of McLean, Sonnemann of Macoupin, and Watson of Hardin. Persistent report is that Tice of Menard will be a candidate. He has said that he is out of it.

Police Co-operation with Coroner Ordered

Coroner Peter Hoffman yesterday conferred with Chief of Police Garrity on the need for greater coöperation of the police department in coroner's cases. The chief promised that all patrolmen will receive instruction in obtaining necessary details for the use of coroner's juries.

CHANNON FAMILY SERVICE RECORD ANSWERS STELK

Father of Red Cross Driver Proves His Americanism.

The Channon family—father and daughter—paid its respects in no uncertain terms yesterday to Judge Stelk, who has impugned the Americanism of Miss Elizabeth Channon, Red Cross emergency driver.

The now famous controversy as to whether two emergency drivers should have satisfied the dignity of the law and Judge Stelk by appearing in his court also brought a statement from the jurist.

"Judge Stelk seems to be stretching things rather far when he impugns the Americanism of my daughter, who in all weathers for the last year has been driving her car to aid Red Cross work," said James H. Channon, the father. "If the laws are being made a joke of, as Judge Stelk claims, he might have selected a far more flagrant case as an example than one in which proper and complete explanations were made to him. If is a touchy and rather precarious 'dignity,' it seems to me, that is offended so easily.

Gives Family Record.

"And so far as '100 per cent Americanism,' as Judge Stelk phrases it, is concerned, with my daughter defying the weather to help her country at home and my son-in-law, Jerome P. Bowes Jr., now with the army of occupation in Germany after being gassed at Chateau Thierry, I hardly feel the Channon family need fear comparison of its Americanism with that of the president of the Illinois Staats Zeitung company."

"I did not try to avoid doing my full duty," said Miss Elizabeth Channon, the "culprit." "A year ago I was summoned for illegally parking my car. I was in the wrong then, took my medicine, went to court, and paid my fine. This time I had tried to aid wounded soldiers arriving here on trains and used my car as an ambulance. The train was late and my car was parked an hour and twenty minutes after 4 o'clock. When Mrs. Springer and I were summoned we were told not to appear by our superior officers, as the affair could be explained. We only obeyed."

Stelk Issues Statement.

Judge Stelk's statement, telling of his talk with Miss Florence Spofford, head of the emergency drivers of the Red Cross, said:

"She came to see me privately and asked that I excuse the two women from appearing in court. I retorted that in view of the fact that they had not come upon the first summons and had stated they did not have to appear because they had influence, I did not think they were showing the right attitude; that 100 per cent Americanism required recognition and obedience to the laws, the courts, and the institutions enforcing them, and that if they would come into open court and make their explanations that would undoubtedly end the controversy.

Denies Use of "Culprits."

"It is absolutely untrue that I classed the defendants as 'culprits' or that I employed any harsh or abusive terms in reference to them. I appreciate full well, as any right thinking citizen must, the exemplary services and sacrifices rendered by a large number of people connected with the Red Cross, as well as with other patriotic institutions."

Meanwhile the case has been continued until Jan. 10 to give Judge Stelk the opportunity to get the views of other lawyers as to whether or not the city has a right to take a nonsuit.

NAVY WINS

Girl Becomes Bride of Aviation Lieutenant.

Lieut and Mrs. Arthur Hugh Bunker
PHOTOS BY MOFFETT

One of the prettiest brides north shore society has seen in some time was Miss Frances Wilkinson, who was married yesterday afternoon to Lieut. Arthur Hugh Bunker, U. S. N. R. The service was read in the First Baptist church of Evanston and was followed by a large reception at the Evanston Country club.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lawrence Wilkinson of Evanston, and a granddaughter of Col. and Mrs. B. N. Ensloe of Nashville, Tenn. She attended school in Washington and made her debut there last year. Lieut. Bunker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Raymond Bunker of Yonkers, N. Y.

The bride's gown was of ivory white satin, made with a court train that was lined with pale pink chiffon. Her tulle veil was held in place by a Russian cap of rose point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Jocelyn Allan of Winnipeg, Canada, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Katharine Bunker, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Catharine Woodman, Miss Elizabeth Williams, Miss Ethelwyn Hinckley, Miss Dorothy Mason, and Miss Harriet Hopkins, all of Evanston.

The attendants wore frocks of blue and orchid tulle and large brown velvet picture hats, trimmed with wreaths of orchid hued roses.

Ellsworth Bunker acted as best man for his brother and the ushers were Ensign C. Benner, Lieut. Herman Underhill of New York City, Lieut. Robert H. Sayre III. of Wilkesbarre, Pa., Capt. Walter Stockton, and Lieut. Jack McAuley of Evanston, and Capt. J. Keeley of Chicago.

Lieut. Bunker, who is in the naval aviation service, has taken his bride to Washington to live for the present.

SEVEN INJURED WHEN TRAINS ON I. C. CRASH

Seven persons were injured, one of them severely, when a through train on the Illinois Central railroad struck the rear end of a suburban passenger train standing at the Twenty-second street station at 8 a. m. yesterday.

The injured, all of whom are employés of the railroad, are:

Frank Randinelli of 631 South Clark street.

Frank Cavello of 1441 Spruce street.

Gussetti Satino of 1005 South State street.

Carmino Tacelli of 631 South Clark street.

Salvatore Gellino of 608 Federal street.

Nick Mauro of 821 South State street.

Recetta Giacona of 2837 Princeton avenue.

Engineer Henry Wells of the through train said that a heavy fog prevented him from seeing the suburban train until he was within 100 feet of the rear coach.

New York Pastor to Act on Lincoln Center Call Today

New York, Jan. 4.—Whether he will accept a call to serve with the Abraham Lincoln center, Chicago, will be announced by the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, Unitarian, at tomorrow morning's service in the church at Thirty-fourth street and Park avenue. The call to the Chicago institution is threefold, in that Mr. Holmes has been asked to act as pastor of the center, director of settlement activities, and editor of the center's weekly religious paper, Unity.

It became known to members of the New York Unitarian Congregation that Mr. Holmes was likely to accept unless the Church of the Messiah ceased to continue along the conventional lines of a Unitarian denomination, and became a social center, with social, educational, and humanitarian activities akin to those of a settlement, as well as an organization for spiritual inspiration.

Launch Ship Named After T. E. Wilson's Children

Chester, Pa., Jan. 4.—The Edellyn, first of the Delaware river 1919 fleet of cargo carriers, was launched today at the yard of the Sun Shipbuilding company.

The sponsor was Miss Helen Wilson of Chicago, who was chosen for the honor by Charles M. Schwab before he retired as director general of the Emergency Fleet corporation. Miss Wilson is a daughter of Thomas E. Wilson, the Chicago packer. The name Edellyn is derived from Edward and Helen, the names of Mr. Wilson's two children.

The Edellyn is 12,500 deadweight tons. It is a sister ship of the Marica and South Bend, recently launched.

BOXING DOCTOR'S DIFFER ON BILL TO REVIVE ILLINOIS SPORT

ARGUE WHETHER DECISION BOUTS IMPROVE SPORT

Handicap Seen in Efforts of Too Many Authors to Gain Honor.

BY RAY PEARSON.

When the Illinois state legislature convenes at Springfield numerous bills designed to legalize boxing will be ready for introduction.

It is quite natural that this should happen, in view of the fact that the glove sport has been raised to a much higher plane than it formerly occupied, due to its adoption in army and navy camps during the world war. Also lovers of boxing, particularly the fans in Chicago, are hankering for a peek at contests such as are permitted in nearly every other big city in the country.

In previous years the fact that there have been numerous bills has, according to one state senator with whom I discussed the matter, worked as a handicap, rather than to the advantage of those who favor legalized boxing in Illinois.

Save the Child, Daddy.

The efforts of many state senators and representatives to "grab off the honor" that would go to the "daddy" of a successful boxing measure has been the cause of too many bills being offered or introduced at Springfield. He added that lawmakers naturally aren't fond of "wading through" a mass of legislative stuff with all sorts of different angles.

The effort made last session to pass a boxing bill has not been forgotten by those who are in favor of the sport, for the measure known as the committee bill was defeated by a single vote. That shows how close the fans of this state came to having boxing two years ago. This bill, the only one given serious consideration, was a measure in which an effort was made to incorporate all the good points of all the bills combined. It was drawn up at a meeting in Chicago at which were present several state senators, representatives, and newspaper men. The bills which made boxing legal in Wisconsin and New York were "gone over" thoroughly and some of the clauses in those measures found a place in the committee measure.

Opinions of Experts Differ.

But the bill which it is hoped will bring back the sport on a legal plane probably will not be the only one presented at Springfield. Judging by the action already taken by those who want boxing, some sort of an effort to "get together" will again have to be made to bring success.

For instance, there is a point on which there seems to be a great difference of opinion. One body of men, known as the Manly Arts league, is in favor of a law that will permit six round contests to a decision. There are others who oppose this scheme. They are in favor of a bill like that in operation in Wisconsin, which allows ten round no-decision contests. There is the conflict.

Ten Rounds in Wisconsin.

Ten round no decision contests have proved successful in the Badger state, at least the state commission and the fans in Milwaukee and other cities in Wisconsin say so, and that is a point those in favor of this sort of milling do not fail to emphasize. They also point to the fact that if six round decision bouts are held, it will be almost impossible to get a champion to perform in Illinois, because no champion would take a chance on losing his title in such a short bout. There is truth in this contention.

Another claim is made that newspaper decisions are satisfactory in other states where no decisions are given.

Decisions Induce Action.

The argument of those favoring six round decision bouts is that the contests are so short that the contestants must fight every second in order to win the decision. This, they contend, would prevent stalling in the early rounds and whirlwind finishes, which they contend are common occurrences in ten round no decision bouts.

Now, take your choice.

FRANKIE BRITT FREED BY JUDGE

Boston, Mass., Jan. 4.—Judge Albert F. Hayden of the Roxbury district court refused today to issue a warrant charging manslaughter against Frank Pacheco of New Bedford, a boxer known as Young Frankie Britt, who engaged in a bout with Terry McGovern of Philadelphia Monday night, in which the latter was fatally injured. Britt, who had been held in $2,000 bond by the police, was immediately released.

Judge Hayden said no evidence of brutality had been presented. McGovern's death was ascribed by the medical examiner to a hemorrhage in the head that might have occurred from an injury on some previous occasion. McGovern was known in private life as Francis di Leo.

$416 a Minute, Leonard's Pay in Dundee Battle

New York, Jan. 4.—[Special.]—Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, is to receive slightly more than $416 per minute for his eight round bout with Johnny Dundee, his Italian challenger. It is said the titleholder has been guaranteed $10,000, with a privilege of accepting a percentage of the receipts. For the twenty-four minutes of actual boxing which the eight rounds will produce this sum averages a fraction more than $416.

This sum will probably surpass any Leonard has earned in the ring since gaining the crown from Freddie Welsh.

Dundee, it is said, will receive a flat guarantee of $5,000, with percentage privileges similar to Leonard's.

KID GLEASON AND HIS WAYS

New White Sox Manager Rough or a Diplomat, as Exigencies of Occasion Require.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

No doubt the vision of a razor strop being wielded by a strong arm came to many members of Chicago's White Sox when they read that Charles A. Comiskey had appointed "Kid" Gleason manager of the team, for there are several players of the south side squad who retain memories of Gleason and his razor strop.

Kid Gleason

All of them who were with the team in 1913 must remember the razor strop, for it was an important factor in conditioning the men while they were training in California. Jim Callahan was manager and handled the first squad up at Oakland, sending Gleason with some eighteen husky recruits and a few veterans down to Pasadena. At the latter place the boys were quartered in one big bungalow on the back lawn of the hotel, instead of in the hotel proper. Consequently Gleason had his entire squad in compact quarters under his watchful eye.

He believed in hard work and immediately announced 7:30 a. m. as the rising hour.

"Now, you know, 7:30 means 7:30," warned the "Kid" as he ordered the fellows to bed on the first night in camp.

Promptly at 7:30 the next morning every man was awakened by loud pounding on the various bedroom doors.

GLEASON ON JOB EARLY.

About 7:40 came the "Kid" from his room, all dressed ready for breakfast. He looked into the first room he came to and saw Jack Fournier, at that time a swarthy recruit, still under the covers. In another room he found another taking an extra nap, and in the next room still another one or two.

Back he went to his own room, procured his heavy leather strop, and sallied forth. From Fournier's room came the sound of a solid slap that sounded like leather meeting flesh. It was followed by a howl and a scramble. A moment later a similar sound came from the second room, and then it was repeated in a third and a fourth room.

Of course, all of it was taken as a bit of good natured roughness, but still there was a "sting" to it.

ALL UP THE SECOND MORNING.

On the second morning the call came at 7:30. Ten minutes later out of his room came Gleason with the razor strop, only to find that Jack Fournier and nearly all the others were all dressed ahead of him, though still rubbing their sleepy eyes. From then on the razor strop hung on its hook, but it had the effect of the old fashioned schoolmaster's rod hanging behind the desk.

While Gleason was the roughest of the rough, he also possesses the biggest and kindest of hearts and was noted for his fair and square ways. This was exemplified best in an incident at the Sox park once when Gleason had a row with the late "Silk" O'Loughlin.

It was a Sunday game, with a big crowd and O'Loughlin umpiring behind the plate. About the seventh inning came a close play at home, O'Loughlin calling out a Sox runner. Gleason ran from third base coaching line protesting so vigorously that he was ordered off the field. His protesting set the crowd into an uproar against "Silk," as the decision cost the Sox a victory.

SHADOW FOLLOWS TO DRESSING ROOM.

When the game ended irate fans leaped out of the stand and ran from the bleachers, surrounding O'Loughlin in a threatening manner. A throng awaited him under the stand as he made his way to his dressing room.

No one noticed it, not even O'Loughlin, but hiding behind one of the concrete pillars was a sturdy fellow, who fell in behind the endangered umpire and followed him clear to the door of his dressing room.

It was Gleason, who knew his antics had aroused the crowd, and he was there to protect O'Loughlin if any overexcited fan started anything.

One evening, in Cleveland, Callahan, then manager, suggested a show to Gleason and the reporters. Just then one of the pitchers slated to work next day wandered out in front of the hotel as if in a mood for adventure.

PITCHER FALLS FOR PINOCHLE.

"I can beat you in a game of pinochle," challenged Gleason, addressing the big pitcher, who was especially fond of that game.

The challenge was accepted and the pair went inside, Gleason first turning to Callahan and saying, "Go on to your old show. I'd rather beat this guy playing cards."

"Do you know the 'Kid' didn't want to play cards at all," said Callahan as the party went to the show. "Especially when he hates pinochle. You see, he just wanted to stick with that fellow, so there'd be no chance of his 'slipping' tonight and not being at his best to pitch tomorrow."

CHAMPION AUGIE DEFENDS TITLE FROM MAUPOME

It hardly would be possible to furnish a better card than Champion Augie Kieckhefer and Pierre Maupome of Milwaukee to open the professional billiard season for 1919. These players will meet tomorrow and the two following nights at Guyon's Paradise, 132 N. Crawford avenue, to decide possession of the Brunswick trophy, emblematic of the world's three cushion championship.

Kieckhefer won the title from Alfredo De Oro on Feb. 8 last year and since has defended it against R. L. Cannefax, P. Maupome, Charley Otis, Charley McCourt, and Cannefax. His six successive wins are the most scored by any player since the championship was inaugurated in 1907.

Maupome is one of the most spectacular players in the history of the angle game and his feat of winning the championship of the Interstate league for two successive years stamps him as one of the greatest players of the present day. The Mexican expert has made two previous attempts to win the emblem, his first being in April, 1916, when he was defeated by Charley Ellis of Pittsburgh, 150 to 143. It looked like a cinch for Maupome when he took the opening block, 50 to 23, but Ellis outplayed him in the next two blocks.

Maupome tried again last April and was defeated by Champion Kieckhefer, 150 to 145, this being the closest finish Kieckhefer has had since he won the title. Maupome took a slight lead on the first night, but the champion took a lead of three points in the second block and in a nerve trying finish won the third block.

Augie has played such fast billiards in his last two matches against McCourt and Cannefax, he is picked to win from Maupome, but the brilliant Mexican is a dangerous opponent, and when in scoring mood can count as fast as any player of ancient or modern times. It will be a crucial match for Augie, and if he can win he is picked eventually to win the emblem outright.

Murdered Man in St. Louis Not Fighter, Bob Devere

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4.—Hope held by police of identifying the mangled body of a murdered man found in a fashionable West End home yesterday morning as that of Bob Devere, widely known boxer, was shattered today. Arthur Sullivan, manager of Devere, and Billy Cole, lightweight boxer, viewed the unidentified body at a morgue and declared they did not believe it was Devere.

BENDER AWARDED TO PHILADELPHIA BY COMMISSION

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 4.—Pitcher Bender of the Philadelphia National league club, who is on the ineligible list, continues to belong to the Philadelphia club, despite the fact that the New York American league club claimed the player for $2,500 when Philadelphia asked for waivers on him. Such was the ruling of the national baseball commission today in disallowing Philadelphia's claim for $2,500 from New York.

The commission in its findings stated that subsequent to the New York claim Bender refused to report to the New York club and issued a statement to the effect that he would not apply for reinstatement. The commission, therefore, made the ruling, based on the following four points:

First, that a waiver request on a player should not be asked for at any time unless such player is in good standing.

Second, that Bender was on the ineligible list and had made no application to be reinstated.

Third, because he announced he would not report to the New York American league club.

Fourth, that no club should be required to pay for a player's release at any time when it does not secure his service.

The chairman of the commission, who decides the case, inasmuch as it was a dispute between a National and American league club, stated that in the correspondence on the case President Johnson of the American league agreed with the chairman, while President Heydler of the National league did not pass upon the question of the right of a major league club to cancel a waiver claim under the conditions set forth in this finding. President Heydler held that the New York club is liable to the purchase sum agreed upon should the player report to that club.

BALL MAGNATES LABOR ON DATES

French Lick, Ind., Jan. 4.—The schedule committee of the major leagues had not completed its work tonight, but probably will have finished before leaving tomorrow noon for the annual meeting of the national commission in Cincinnati on Monday, President Ban Johnson of the American league said.

Walter Johnson Recovers from Influenza Attack

Coffeyville, Kas., Jan. 4.—Walter Johnson, pitcher for the Washington Americans, who has been suffering from an attack of influenza at his farm near here, has now fully recovered.

FREAK HURLING STAYS IN GAME, UMP EVANS SAYS

Spitball and Other Deliveries Continue in Major Contests.

BY BILLY EVANS.
[American League Umpire.]

The freak pitching delivery has about come to stay in baseball. That may seem a rather strange statement, but it is true nevertheless. The spitball, which might be classed as the first of the new fangled methods of pitching, is still with us. There has been constant agitation for the abolition of the "spitter," but it usually proves to be mere winter chatter. With the spitball doing business, it is rather hard to attempt to eliminate the other freak methods of deceiving batsmen.

BILLY EVANS

Last season the American association sought to solve the freak pitching situation that had played such havoc with the batting by abolishing the spitball. No pitcher was allowed to come up to the mouth with the ball, as is customary with spitball pitchers, in preparing the ball for delivery.

Enforce Rule in A. A.

Just how successfully the scheme worked out I don't know. I have talked with several American association umpires, and they tell me the rule was rigidly enforced. I do know several association pitchers who joined the American league, after the close of their season, relied largely on the spitball for success in the Johnson organization.

There is Ray Keating, for instance, who joined the New York Americans. Perhaps Keating got by in the association with the fast one and the curve, but the moment he came back to the American league his best asset was the "spitter."

Russell Ford made the emery ball famous. Many other pitchers prolonged their careers through its use. The American league, realizing the emery ball must go, placed such a drastic penalty on the use that the emery ball proper is no longer included in the répertoire of American league pitchers.

Emery Ball in Disguise.

The emery ball, under various disguises, still flourishes, and I doubt if it ever will be eliminated from a pitcher's stock in trade. Through a roughening of a very small surface on a ball it is possible to make said ball do all kinds of funny maneuvers.

I noticed that whenever in a pinch a certain pitcher would get a lot of stuff on the all important ball he could make it "sail." As a rule, he wouldn't resort to such a delivery more than a dozen times in a game, but when he did the batsman was practically helpless. Undoubtedly had the pitcher believed baseball would be on tap in 1919 he would have never mentioned his secret.

Star Batter Strikes Out.

The day previous with the bases filled he had struck out one of the best hitters in the American league. None of the strikes had been called, because a base hit just about meant the old ball game, and the batsman took a healthy cut at all three. Never did I see three balls have a better break. I was positive the pitcher was getting the break through some unnatural means, but not classifying myself as a detective I didn't investigate.

On the bench the next day I spoke of the incident to the pitcher. He smiled, and here is what he said as nearly as I can remember it:

"Well, Bill, it will be all over in a couple of more days, so I'll show you how I get that break on the ball. Next summer I will probably be in France, so you won't have a chance to get back at me." Then he held up before my eyes the thumb on his right hand. Yes, he is a right handed pitcher. I will let you in on that much.

Nail a Perfect Saw.

The nail on that thumb of the right hand was made to resemble a perfect little saw. I could see at a glance that the passing of that thumb nail over the smooth surface of a new ball would produce a roughened surface of any size desired.

There is also another ball that caused damage to batting averages in the American league last season. I have always called it the "loaded ball."

Through the use of paraffin an oil rubbed into the palm of the glove, or merely through the use of tobacco, licorice juice, or plain saliva, the ball was moistened at the seams. Such moistening acted as a base. A pitcher then rubbed the ball into some dirt, which he managed to get on the palm of his glove. In a short while that seam would become thoroughly loaded, making it considerably heavier at a certain spot, which caused fancy dips.

Lee Fohl Reappointed as Cleveland Manager

Cleveland, O., Jan. 4.—James C. Dunn, president of the Cleveland American league club, today announced the reappointment of Lee Fohl as manager of the team for the coming season. Fohl was appointed manager in 1915.

Duffy Lewis Declares He Will Quite Baseball

Modesto, Cal., Jan. 4.—Duffy Lewis, star outfielder of the Boston Americans, is to quit baseball. Lewis, for the last year in charge of athletics at Mare Island, said he has decided to go into the automobile business.

FIRST GOLF IN DERBY HAT

Charles E. Willard Didn't Purpose to Make a Fool of Himself in Any of Those New Fangled Clothes.

BY JOE DAVIS.

CHARLES E. WILLARD, secretary of the Western Golf association in 1910, played his first game of golf in a derby hat on the course of the Essex County Country club of New Jersey. He refused to disgrace himself by donning the golfing togs of the 1902 model.

Two years before, when living at Lakewood, he used to drive on the road which bounded the course, and there he had seen the golfers plodding over the course in red jackets in the hot July sun, and he did not propose to make a fool of himself.

Trial on Nine Hole Course.

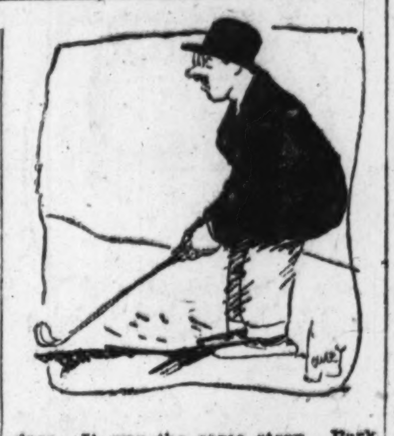
Willard was inveigled into his first game by Charley Marsh, a Scotchman, and Sam Jones of the Dupont Powder company. Willard at that time was with the Colt Firearms company and noted as a trapshooter.

They played over the nine hole course, and before the home hole had been reached Charley was going well enough not to disgrace his companions, and they adjourned to the regular course.

The deadly golfing germ found lodgment, and shortly afterward he removed to the vicinity of the course. When he was able to defeat Marsh and Jones he knew he was a regular golfer and longed for bigger game.

Park Shows His Prowess.

Veteran Willie Park was the club professional, and Charley arranged a date with him one morning at 9:30 o'clock. He was first to bat and took a handful of sand from the box and got away a fair ball. Park took a pinch of sand and with an iron put the ball on the corner of the green. This obviously was a fluke, thought the amateur, but when Park rolled off the second, third, and fourth holes in about par figures Charley knew he was playing over his head.



Relief was in sight as the fifth hole was 510 yards in length, and Charley was convinced that it was his starting place. It was the same story. Park was home in three and down in two more, Charley not recalling how many strokes it took him to reach the green. By this time he was convinced that in spite of his victories over a native-born Scot, he knew little about the game. He has been learning ever since, and while probably one of the best players of his years in the Chicago district, he long since has given up the idea of perfection.

Now Member of Three Clubs.

Willard has played courses all over the country, and one year won the second flight in the North and South championship at Pinehurst, defeating Hadfield of Milwaukee in the final.

The loss of a leg in a railroad accident some years ago curtailed his golfing activities, but it is worthy of note that the man who once scoffed at the red shirted players became sufficient enthusiast to hold memberships in Homewood, Midlothian, and South Shore clubs.

While his golf successes have been many, these pale in his estimation before those of his son Gale, who has made a great record with the aviation force in France, having been cited several times for gallantry.

POLK BADGET CASE RECALLED

"Paint Brush Kelley" Given Place as Factor in Noted "Ringing" Betting Coup of Years Ago.

BY WILLIAM H. DURHAM.

San Francisco, Jan. 4.—[Special.]—They were sitting around a champion's exhibition of billiards in the emporium of Eddie Graney, world famous referee, the other night, when Billy Manning, who enjoyed the distinction of being beaten by the famous Nonpareil, Jack Dempsey, just before that fistician left for Los Angeles, where he died three days after of influenza.

"Did you know that Paint Brush Kelley just passed away at the City and County hospital?" asked Manning of Kid Sullivan and Graney, who with Matt Tierney and Sheriff Tom Finn, had been closely observing the cue wizardry going on before them.

"Didn't know Paint Brush Kelley," said Graney, "much less that he was dead."

Arrives with Police Uniform.

"I knew the old horse artist," said Sullivan, whose interest in Battling Nelson gave the Dane his start by arranging for him the old battle at Emeryville with Canole many years ago. "He was in my saloon last week, borrowing his weekly five."

"Kelley was a New York policeman in his early days. Something happened after a while and Kelley left the force and became a painter.

"Well," continued Sullivan, "Kelley was painting the grandstand at Sheepshead Bay when he met G., a noted plunger. G. had just been ruled off the turf for life. He was trying to get back and, as usual, keeping his eye peeled for a chance to make a dollar.

"You are a pretty good painter," he said, by way of flattery.

"I can take brown mud and paint a horse green without having one hair stick to another," said Kelley.

"This gave G. an idea. Then one day G. was reinstated and Kelley quit his job. He showed up some time later with the G. string, in some sort of capacity, no one knew exactly what.

The "Mysterious Stranger."

"Years after that, I don't know how long, Frank Brownell and I blew into Lexington, both broke, and together we opened a poolroom on hope. They were running at Latonia then, and they ran so well for Brownell and me that in a few days we had a couple of grands in our pokes and a good play.

"I was just closing up one night after the sixth race at Emeryville when an old man I had never seen before eased himself through the door and in a trembling voice, with a wheeze in his breath that shook his long gray whiskers, asked for Brownell. Frank and he made medicine for a while off in a corner and then the old man wheezed himself out.

"I'm going up to Latonia tomorrow," Frank said to me, "and bet all we've got and can borrow on one horse. Get busy."

Pals were Pals Then.

"In those days men had no use for articles of partnership, and sporting pals never hired private detectives to watch each other. I got out and hustled, and the next morning Brownell went to Latonia with $8,000. He came back that evening with $56,000 and this story:

"'The man who came to see me was G. disguised. He owed me a favor and he told me he was going to pull off a hot one at Latonia; that Polk Badget would be a write your own ticket price and that he would win in a walk. He did and here I am.'

"It seems, however, that Brownell knew more than he told me, for he ran into Paint Brush Kelley at the track.

"Paint Brush Kelley" Appears.

"I never knew all about it until about two years ago when a bum came into my place and asked for a drink. I gave it to him. Then he said:

"'Can you give me a fiver so I can bed myself down for a week?'

"'Race track man, I see,' I replied. 'What's your moniker?'

"'Paint Brush Kelley,' he said. Then I recognized him.

"I asked him to tell me the details of the Polk Badget affair. You see, that saloon of mine came from Polk Badget's race, for when we made that killing I just hungered for the fogs of San Francisco and I never stopped until I ate them again.

Post Odds, Oh, Yes.

"'Ever hear of a horse called Post Odds?' asked Kelley.

"I certainly had heard of Post Odds ruled off, cursed and damned by every bookmaker that ever wrote a ticket. And one of the fastest horses in the world.

"'Well,' said Kelley, 'Polk Badget was Post Odds. He was a beautiful bay and a beautiful horse, but with a good bucket of paint and some blazes and stockings he was not to be recognized. Then we put him out several times and he always ran last when he did not fail to finish. That gave Polk Badget a bad name of course, and his price went higher and higher.

"In the meantime G. sent commissioners all over the country to bet in poolrooms when things were ripe. Finally Polk Badget was entered with a lot of dogs and maidens and his price was away up. Then G. touched off the fireworks. Fifteen minutes after the bets were paid off somebody leaked, but by that time Polk Badget was on a train en route to Lexington, and before morning he had utterly disappeared and Post Odds was flopping on some nice clean straw in a back street livery stable.'

$5 a Week Ever Since.

"I gave Kelley the five," concluded Sullivan, "and I have given him five every week ever since. I would have given him more, but that and plenty to drink was all he would take."

LARRY M'LEAN BADLY BURNED

Newark, N. J., Jan. 4.—Larry McLean, for years a National league catcher, is in a serious condition in a Newark hospital as a result of burns received in a Turkish bath when he lost consciousness after entering a room. He had been suffering from pneumonia and was in a weakened condition.

McLean, who is 34 years old, is a foreman at the Crucible Steel company's plant at Harrison.

Minors Seeking Reforms Meet 'Comish" Tomorrow

The committee representing the National Association of Minor leagues in their attempt to obtain reform measures in baseball law, will meet with the national commission Monday in Cincinnati. This committee is composed of President Hickey of the American association, President Tearney of the Three Eyes league, President Tinker of the Columbus club, and President Hanlon of Sioux City.

HERE'S NEW WAY TO BLOT $ SIGN FROM BASEBALL

Players May Help Cause by Demanding Portion of Purchase Price.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Looks as if baseball players would knock some of the dollar signs out of the professional sport. They can do it by following the lead of Dutch Leonard, who figured in a recent trade between the Boston and New York American league teams.

When Leonard read the announcement of the deal which transferred him from the Red Sox to the Yankees he did not overlook the closing sentence in the press report, which indicated that the New York club owners, in addition to the playing talent surrendered to the Boston club, agreed to hand over a substantial amount of coin "to boot." The husky southpaw immediately came back with the assertion that before he would sign a Yankee contract he would want part of the cash involved in the deal.

Maybe Coin Was Missing.

There may or may not have been any coin exchanged in that transaction between the New York and Boston clubs. Folks interested in baseball and those who chronicle its history have grown so accustomed to the use of the dollar sign that they do not consider a news story complete without it.

Consequently it may have been that the trade between Ruppert and Frazee was an even one.

Whatever the facts may be, Leonard followed a custom which, if it should become universal, would eliminate some of the "root of all evil" from professional baseball. If every player whose services were disposed of, or who figured in a swap in which money was used for part payment, should demand a considerable portion of the dollars involved, the club owners quickly would change their tactics.

Player Traffic Causes Friction.

There is no doubt that a lot of the friction in professional baseball could be eliminated if the traffic in playing talent could be reduced to a rational basis. It is essential to the sport, of course, that club owners be allowed to exchange players, because one manager may have a surplus of outfielders and a dearth of infielders, while another may be loaded up with infielders and need a good outfielder. It also is absolutely necessary for the major leagues to recruit their forces from the minors. Moreover, the player with ability must be allowed to advance in baseball as fast as his talent will permit.

But in recent years this traffic has been overdone and in many cases the dollar sign has been misused merely for advertising purposes.

Tell the Truth About It.

It would do away with much of the friction between club owners and players over salaries if all transactions in playing talent were conducted in the open—that is to say, if the actual facts and figures were given out or if no information at all was furnished, but all trades were made on an even basis with a fixed price on the release of a player for cash. In that event every one would know what happened and the bank roll would be far less conspicuous.

Oak Park Churches Form Boys' Basketball League

Ten churches in the village of Oak Park have organized the Junior Inter-Sunday School Basketball league. The teams will be coached and games will be supervised and promoted by physical directors from the Oak Park Young Men's Christian association.

The league will be divided into two sections, so arranged that each team will play two games with each other team. There will follow a game between the winning teams of each section.

For PLAYERS of WHIST by A. R. METCALFE

KNOWING the proper moment to shift the point of attack is part of the equipment of every good player. Prompt and fearless action is necessary at such times and wonderful results are sometimes produced.

A celebrated Baltimore player declared that a knowledge of when plans must be shifted was the chief difference between a good player and an expert.

A fine example is shown in the deal which follows:

THE HANDS.

North:
S.—10, 9, 5, 2.
H.—7.
C.—Q, 10, 5, 4, 2.
D.—A, 7, 5.

West:
S.—A, K, J, 7, 6.
H.—K, J, 8, 6.
C.—J, 8.
D.—6, 4.

East:
S.—4.
H.—9, 4, 3.
C.—A, 9, 6.
D.—K, Q, 10, 8, 3, 2.

South:
S.—Q, 8, 3.
H.—A, Q, 10, 5, 2.
C.—K, 7, 3.
D.—J, 9.

Score, 0-0. East dealt and bid one diamond, south one heart, west one spade, and north passed. East bid two diamonds, south passed, west bid two no trump, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	H7	H3	HA	[illegible]
2	4C	6C	KC	[illegible]
3	QC	9C	7C	[illegible]
4	2C	AC	3C	[illegible]
5	D5	H9	H10	[illegible]
6	DA	D2	D9	[illegible]
7	10C	D3	DJ	[illegible]
8	5C	D8	H2	[illegible]
9	2S	4S	3S	[illegible]
10	5S	D10	8S	[illegible]
11	D7	H4	H5	[illegible]
12	9S	DQ	QS	[illegible]
13	10S	DK	HQ	[illegible]

West secured seven tricks only.

North should have opened his club suit, as his singleton heart was unlikely to be of much use. That player gave a very good reason for his opening, however. This was that south was the better player of the pair and it was desirable to put the play of the deal into the south hand.

This confidence on the part of north was justified by what followed.

South knew from the opening lead that south could stop hearts at least twice. This meant that the diamond suit in dummy would make before west could establish his hearts. Salvation lay in the club suit, if anywhere, and south plunged heavily with the king of clubs at trick 2.

After that the declarer had no chance to make his contract.

Most players, holding the south hand, would have allowed west to win the first trick in hearts, and this would have given the declarer from nine to twelve tricks as the final result of the deal.

West would better have played the jack of hearts at trick 1, in the hope of coaxing another lead of hearts. It was vital from the declarer's point of view to get rid of the ace of diamonds before dummy lost the ace of clubs.

VARDON AND RAY POSTPONE VISIT

New York, Jan. 4.—[Special.]—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the noted English golfers, are not coming to America this year, despite various reports to the contrary, according to the correspondent of the London Times. This writer is authority that the English professionals have decided to remain at home during 1919 and aid in the revival of golf there, but they may make a visit to this country in 1920.

Plans had already been discussed for a meeting between Vardon and Francis Ouimet, who was anxious to again meet the English players, as it was upon their visit to this country that he sprang suddenly into fame as the defender of America's golf laurels.

Road Race from Milwaukee to Chicago Set for April 8

Local long distance runners will engage in a real endurance grind on April 8. The Logan Square Athletic club announces a team contest from Milwaukee to Chicago. Among those expected to start is Sidney Hatch.

Hatch is the runner who in 1916 ran from the Cream City to the loop, a distance of 96.4 miles, in 14:50:30, a reduction of nearly four hours in the time made by Albert Corey.

It is expected that Sid's teammate will be Schou Christensen, cousin of Christ Christensen. The Logan Square Athletic club will be represented by two teams, George Hankel with Jole Kowalski, Al Parker and Willie Tews.

It is conveniently located on the 2nd floor, Dearborn Street side, where there is an abundance of daylight and good air.

The corps of instructors for this season is especially strong, the professionals in charge being:

Phil Gaudin: Famous Onwentsia instructor, who next season goes to the Skokie Club.

Chester Horton: Late of the Evanston and Edgewater golf clubs, University Club of Washington, and San Antonio Country Club.

Ralph Healy: The West Baden professional, who in former years was associated with George O'Neill.

Willie Hunter: From St. Louis Country Club—a recent importation, with all the latest British ideas on golf instruction. "Chick" Evans says of him: "Hunter has been a Scotch Internationalist from 1907 to 1912; he came to St. Louis direct from Richmond Surrey, England. In 1901 Hunter had the record score of 71 in the open championship held at Muirfield, which I can say is one of the most difficult courses in the world, and the record gives Hunter the distinction of playing a record round of golf which has never been equaled in many attempts by the world's greatest golfers, Vardon, Ray, Duncan, Taylor, Braid, and others."

PHIL GAUDIN.
English Internationalist. 1905-13. Captain of the English Team, 1913.

Experienced golfers, as well as beginners, will find indoor golf decidedly valuable. A little training through the winter will enable you to perfect your stroke, stance, and swing for the balmy spring days.

Special attention given to women and beginners.

"TRIBUNE" SILVER SKATES DERBY AT HUMBOLDT PARK JAN. 26

RACE THROWN OPEN TO ALL COMERS; JUNIOR EVENT FOR YOUNGER BOYS

Park System Ponds Added to Playground Tourney Jan. 18 and 25.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Silver Skates Derby, held for the second time last winter, attracted the largest number of entrants, 183, ever entered for an amateur race. Therefore for the 1919 renewal, to be held at Humboldt park Jan. 26, all territorial and age restrictions have been removed in order that the Silver Skates Derby shall become in conditions as well as in fact the greatest amateur skating event in America.

The bars are down. Amateur speed merchants from any city in this country and Canada are invited to match their prowess on the steel blades against the best that Chicago can produce. There is no entry fee. There are no eligibility rules except amateurism. None is barred except former winners of the Silver Skates.

Solid Silver Skates as Prize.

To the winner goes the title of "Tribune Champion" and a pair of solid silver skates, which would have been the envy of the Hans Brinker of our boyhood days. Second prize will be nickel plated skates, and third prize solid bronze skates. If you wish to try for these valuable prizes sign at once the entry blank appearing upon this page.

In the large field which competed last year were many younger boys, who had no chance against the tried skaters of the championship class, but entered to gain racing experience. Recognizing the interest and ambition of these boys, THE TRIBUNE has decided to hold a secondary event, in which these boys will meet less finished opponents.

Derby for Junior Skaters.

Thus the Junior Silver Skates Derby will be raced for the first time in 1919 in conjunction with the Silver Skates Derby. Only boys under 18 years old will be eligible. Residence in Chicago or the states tributary to Chicago—namely, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan, and Indiana—is a necessary qualification. Come on, you boys from the farms and villages, and show the city breds what you can do. First prize will be a pair of silver plated skates, a replica in model and design of the skates awarded to the winner of the Silver Skates Derby. The distance of the final heat will be one mile.

Boys entering the Junior Silver Skates Derby also are eligible for the senior race, but are advised against competing in both events, owing to the wear and tear of battling through the heats necessary to insure a place in the finals. Entries for both events close Jan. 22 with Walter Eckersall, 342 Tribune building. In filling out the entry blank be sure to indicate whether you wish to enter the senior or junior event.

Former Winners in Service.

The first Silver Skates Derby, held in 1917, was won by Art Staff, who has since turned professional and holds his own with the best in his class. Sigurd (Brick) Larsen of the Norwegian Turners, won the ract last year. Staff has been at Great Lakes Naval Training station, but will be on hand for a mile exhibition race, while Larsen, now in the navy aboard ship, will appear against him if a leave can be secured.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Public Playground Skating tournament, in which there were 8,281 participants last winter, has been enlarged to take in representatives of the park playgrounds as well as those of the municipal ponds. Instead of entrants from sixty playgrounds, as last season, there will be eighty-nine grounds out for the championship buttons, medals, and shields. The number of contestants should near the 15,000 mark.

More Than 1,250 Prizes.

Think of it! Fifteen thousand boys and girls enjoying healthy outdoor exercise while preparing to win the more than 1,250 prizes awarded for speed over the ice.

The growth of this event also is notable. In 1916, 1,500 competed; in 1917 5,291 took part; and last year, 8,281.

This TRIBUNE tournament really marks the start of what ultimately will be a great Chicago playgrounds athletic league. For the first time, directors of city and park playgrounds have reached an agreement on eligibility rules and conditions. The inclusion of the park playgrounds in THE TRIBUNE's event accounts for the expected increase in the number of competitors.

Sectional Meets Before Finals.

The tourney will be conducted on the same general plan as heretofore except as the accession of the park playgrounds brings about changes in the detail. Preliminaries will be held in each public playground in the city under direction of the playground instructor. Winners of playground events will be presented with a TRIBUNE bronze button, and will be eligible to represent their playground in the sectional semi-finals to be held Jan. 18.

The first and second placed skaters in sectional events will receive TRIBUNE gold and silver buttons, respectively, and will be eligible to represent their section in the city championship finals on Jan. 25. The location for the finals will be decided later.

In the preliminaries two formal meets will be held on different days for each event, so as to give every skater an opportunity to try for these highest city skating honors. The director or instructor may use his own method of determining the winner, either by actual speed competition or by time trials.

Events and Prizes Named.

The nine events, special events, and prizes to be awarded follow:

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

WAKE MATRIMONIAL BUREAU.

THOUGH the Indiana-Arkansas team is still several yards from the goal line, Coach Lardner's plays are gaining so consistently that he believes it justifiable to try them out with other teams. Dropping the figure of speech, The Wake's Matrimonial Bureau is now open for business, and the same methods will be employed as have to date proven so effective in the Indiana-Arkansas fiasco.

Unmarried men and women between the ages of 14 and 86 are eligible to enter the bureau's lists, and all such are requested to read and digest the rules of the game, from which there will be no deviation. The appended application blank is primarily for males, a personal visit from whom is neither required nor desired. Females are asked to call at the bureau in person, but if unable to do so, they may also fill out and mail in the blank.

Remember, the Wake has undertaken to pair off and marry off all the eligibles in the middle west between now and the 31st of next December, so it is essential that a rapid pace be set and maintained throughout the year.

RULES.

1. Enlistment is for one year, but automatically terminates on the wedding day.

2. Entrants promise prompt, unquestioning obedience to the Bureau's orders.

3. Male entries are recorded on receipt of application blank, properly filled out and signed. Females may enter the same way provided they can give evidence of inability to apply in person. (The bureau's office hours are from 6 to 7 a. m.)

4. Each entrant is required to take an oath that he, or she, will not attempt to see the party picked out for him, or her, until they meet at the altar, nor to communicate with said party by mail, save through the censorship department of the bureau.

APPLICATION BLANK.

LONDAS THROWS JIM TURNER IN C. A. A. FEATURE

BY JOE DAVIS.

Jim Londas, so-called champion of Greece, won the feature bout of the wrestling program at the Chicago Athletic association last night, defeating Joe Turner of Chicago in 11:04.

Turner lacked the strength of his stocky opponent and was unable to keep his holds. At the end of seven minutes he got a head lock, but Londas wriggled out, and then, taking the initiative, threw the local man with a scissors on the head.

Joe Smith, featherweight, won in straight falls from Bird Budd, getting the first in 14:32 and the second in 5:40.

Pat Connolley downed Jim Brown of Detroit in 6:33 with a body scissors and bar arm hold.

Herman Koch took two falls of a comedy bout from Joe Wallace. This pair introduced new stuff. They were on the mat in the corner and as Koch crawled away Wallace emptied a bucket of water over him.

Sailors from the Great Lakes under Lieut. John Kennedy furnished the rest of the card.

Sergt. Ed Lewis, heavyweight wrestler, who has been some months in the army, paid a tribute to army training.

Pacific Coast League Opens Season April 8

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 4.—The Pacific Coast league will open its 1919 season on April 8, members of the board of directors announced today. The season will run twenty-eight weeks.

BOOST FOR WEST

Capt. Griffith, Former Drake Director, Named to Succeed Dr. Raycroft in Army Athletic Work.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 4.—Capt. John L. Griffith, former athletic director at Drake university here and since similarly engaged at Camps Dodge and Pike, has been selected to succeed Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft of Princeton as chairman of the committee on training camp activities under the War Recreation Board, according to private advices received here tonight. Capt. Griffith, it was said, will take up his duties in Washington when Dr. Raycroft goes to Europe soon to direct recreation work among the soldiers there.

Sleipner Club to Hold Annual Ice Derby Today

The Sleipner Athletic club is ready to stage its annual ice derby at Humboldt park this afternoon. Ice eleven inches thick offers the skaters everything they need, and unless the zero weather continues the club looks for a record crowd. The start is set for 1 o'clock. The usual card of races will be run.

The Northwest Sportsmen's club has applied to the Western Skating association for a sanction to hold its annual derby, twice postponed on account of lack of ice, on the night of Feb. 1. If granted, this will be the first time a derby has been run at night.

GREAT LAKES GRABS GAME AT WISCONSIN IN HOT FINISH, 14-12

Madison, Wis., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—By a score of 14 to 12 Capt. Bill Chandler led the Great Lakes quintet to a hard earned victory over Wisconsin tonight. The Badgers led at the end of the first half, 6 to 3, and maintained the lead until the last four minutes when two lucky field goals placed the gobs two points ahead.

Fanning, who opposed Chandler, caged four field goals during the struggle, and at the same time held the invincible "Bill" scoreless. Bauer ran rings around the gobs throughout the game. Chandler, however, won the game for his teammates by dropping six free throws through the hoop.

Boxers Given a Scare When Boiler Explodes

Boxers in the Arcade gymnasium were pulling their training stunts about 5:30 yesterday afternoon when a ripping report that shook the building and sent a cloud of dust flying through the air brought them to a halt. They didn't know whether the Bolsheviki had started something or not, and didn't waste any time in finding out. They hurriedly got into their street clothes and made a jigtime getaway. A boiler in the basement of the builiding in which the gymnasium is located exploded, knocking the glass out of all the windows on the first floor and tearing a big hole in the floor. The firemen were quickly on the job. No boxers were damaged aside from a dandy little scare.

Central A. A. U. to Receive Title Events Bids Jan. 20

A special meeting of the board of managers of the Central A. A. U. will be held at the Hotel Sherman on Jan. 20, to award the association indoor championships for the coming season. The championships to be awarded are: Indoor track and field; basketball, 120 pound, 135 pound, and unlimited weight; indoor swimming, diving, relay, and water polo [men]; indoor swimming, diving, relay, and water polo [women]; wrestling, eight weights; boxing, eight weights; gymnastic; tug of war.

All bids for the above championships must be made in writing and submitted to the secretary before this meeting.

Fred Toney Is Acquitted on Draft Evasion Charge

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 4.—Fred Toney, former pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds and the New York Giants, was acquitted in the federal court tonight on the charge of evading the selective service draft act. It was charged by the government that Toney had made false statements on his questionnaire. Toney began this week to serve a four month jail sentence for violation of the Mann act.

Old Dan, Hiking Champ, Gives Boost to Boxing

Dan O'Leary and Henry Schmehl have come out strong for boxing. The veteran walkers, Schmehl, 67 years old, and O'Leary, 78, declare themselves living examples of what physical exercise will do for men of advanced years and both have, all their life, done more or less boxing in training for the walks that have made them famous.

FLORIDA BASS FISHING.

SOME time ago we published an inquiry from a reader who wanted some information on bass fishing in Florida. Now, the closest we have been to that state is reading Mr. Lardner's "Gullible's Travels," so we asked for help. The replies, as usual, were generous, readers from Palm Beach to Seattle, Wash., "kicking in" with first hand information.

By the way, it is remarkable how our readers can, and do, help one another with information on fish and fishing that we are unable to supply. We often have inquiries on out of the way places that even the map makers never heard of. All we have to do is to publish it, give the S. O. S., and back comes the desired info. It is seldom that we fail to corral some data—but let's go back to Florida, after some of those big bass.

This material we got on Florida bass was too good to keep, so we have decided to pass it along to the rest of the bunch, some of whom have as much sense as a summer yellow bird and trek to the sunny south, where birdies sing and posies pose, while in the north the cold wind blows [pome] and puts a redness on your nose.

Here is what Dr. Edmund Weis of Ottawa says about fishing for bass in Florida: "In the first place, every lake in the state, and there are thousands of them, hold the large mouthed bass, and, of course, they can be caught. Where I usually go, being about in the center of the state, it is no chore at all to be able to catch a good mess almost every day. These vary in size from the three-fourths pound bass to the immense big fellows twelve and fifteen pounds.

"The largest I have landed weighed ten pounds, and the average size of six pounds are rather common. I know the ordinary supposition is that the large mouthed bass are not as gamey as the red eye of the north, but I want to tell you that I have had as many hard tussles and very interesting fights with the large mouthed bass, or "trout," as they are called there, as I have had in the north with the small mouthed.

"Any lake and any stream from the St. Johns river down affords excellent sport, providing the weather does not happen to be too cold, and they can be caught with any sort of a lure from the plug to the muddler. The muddler is a small minnow, which is generally used on a small spinner. I have had the best success with the double bladed spinner.

"Where I go we also have the advantage of river fishing, which, as a matter of fact, are large creeks, as well as the various sized lakes. I have noticed a pecular thing about lake fishing, in that in some lakes you can get both large and small fish, while in others they seem to run to a certain size only—say two to two and one-half pounds. In those lakes one can usually land them by the dozen.

"If one wants to try the fly, to acquire all the thrills possible, there are many places where that can be done. Of course the bag in fly fishing is rather small, but the pleasure proportionately great. I have seen a man land a six pound bass with a fly, but it was done very expertly. Day after day at the hotel at De Leon Springs anglers have come in with big catches—in fact, we had so much fish on the table that we grew tired of it."

F. E. Lux of Oregon says: "I spent the winter season of 1917 at Lake Worth, six miles south of West Palm Beach. In company with my wife, who is an enthusiastic rod and reel artist, I enjoyed a day's bass fishing on Lake Osborne, about three miles southwest of Lake Worth. Boats and minnows may be obtained of a Mr. Lyman, at Lantana, a small town near the lake. We only took along a dozen minnows, as the water did not look extra good, but nevertheless we landed thirty-six nice bass, averaging about three pounds apiece.

"With plenty of minnows we could have brought back a boatload, I believe. We started fishing near the lily pads at the southern end of the lake. The water was shallow and the gars gave considerable trouble. Our minnows were all gone after we had caught the twentieth fish, so we started scouting and located an ideal spot near the western shore, south of the wagon bridge. Here the bass were simply ravenous, striking at any kind of bait, live or dead.

"While still fishing with ordinary cane pole, cork float, and live bait will land the most fish, we had lots of sport casting Dowagiacs near the lily pads. I saw several eleven pound bass pulled from the lake, and I was told that bass run as high as seventeen pounds here—but the fellow who sprung the whopper also told of an alligator "at least twenty-eight feet long," so you can take this story for what it appears to be worth. The Florida bass resemble our small mouthed red eye, but are lighter in color and grow to much larger size."

Another reader speaks of very good fly fishing in the Hillsborough river. At least, she mentions some good catches made with "a shiny green fly, without bait," the "without bait" telling us that our informant was a lady and no mere man.

[Concluded next Sunday.]

BULLETIN

George Lawyer, chief United States warden, announces that all migratory game birds held in storage are to be disposed of on or before Jan. 10. Any such birds found in storage after that date will be seized.

PURPLE FIVE SET FOR BIG GAMES; GOBS TOMORROW

Northwestern's basketball premiere, the squad's first showing except for a tryout performance, in which they were nicked, 37 to 21, by the Bloomington Nationals on New Year's Eve, will be staged tomorrow night at the Patten gym, when they encounter the five from Great Lakes.

Nothing can be said in the way of prophecy for the season. Three of last year's team are back, Marquard, Wilcox, and Ligare. Wilcox has been in the medical department of the S. A. T. C. and the others were lately discharged from the aviation service.

From the varsity material which reported last week a squad of eleven has been chosen: Wilcox, Marquard, Metzgar, Fargo, Mullinix, and Walters, forwards; Young, Ligare, and Gordon, guards; and Heinemeyer and Graham, centers. Mullinix, Walters, and Gordon are juniors, but have not appeared before.

The Purple schedule for the season is:

Jan. 6—Great Lakes at Evanston.
Jan. 11—Wisconsin at Madison.
Jan. 18—Iowa at Evanston.
Jan. 25—Michigan at Evanston.
Feb. 1—Purdue at Lafayette.
Feb. 7—Laporte at Laporte.
Feb. 8—Whiting Owls at Whiting.
Feb. 15—Chicago at Chicago.
Feb. 17—Purdue at Evanston.
Feb. 22—Wisconsin at Evanston.
March 1—Michigan at Ann Arbor.
March 3—Chicago at Evanston.
March 8—Iowa at Iowa City.

OLD STARS HELP MAROONS TRIM GRANT FIVE, 31-19

Gorgas and Birkhoff Aid in Victory Over Fast Soldier Outfit.

BY MAROON.

Showing improvement with each game and strengthened by the recent addition of Center Gorgas and Forward Birkhoff, the Maroons scored their first victory over a big team last night, defeating Camp Grant's five at Bartlett gymnasium by a score of 31 to 19. It was a cleanly fought game, with the Midway five displaying superiority. At half time the Maroons were leading, 21 to 11.

Berkhoff shone in floor work, while the all around play of Hinkle also had much to do with bringing the victory to the Maroons. The stars for Camp Grant were Sergt. Lutes, who caged five shots, and Private Hemsath, who gathered two.

A good sized crowd saw the contest.

The Maroons are to play another service team next Wednesday, stacking up against the Great Lakes team. The game will be played at Bartlett gymnasium. Lineup of Grant game:

STRONGER TONE PREVAILING IN GRAIN MARKET

Early Advance Followed by Reaction on Profit Taking.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

A stronger undertone prevailed in the corn and oats markets most of the day, with a good advance early, followed by a reaction on week end profit taking and evening up. The close was at gains of ⅛@½c on corn, May being the strongest and January the weakest. Oats were ⅜@⅝c higher in Chicago. Corn in St. Louis was ⅛@⅜c higher and Kansas City ⅜@1c higher. Oats in the latter market finished ¼@1c higher, with the near futures leading, while St. Louis was unchanged to ½c higher, with practically no business. Oats at Minneapolis finished ⅜@⅞c and Winnipeg ⅝c higher. Rye futures in Minneapolis were unchanged to ⅛c lower and barley ⅝@¾c higher for the near futures and ⅛c lower for May.

Closing prices compared with a week ago showed advances on corn of ⅝@1½c and oats 1⅜@1⅞c, the distant futures leading. Pork gained 25@30c and short ribs 17½@87½c, the latter on January, owing to the light stocks here. Lard lost 2½@37½c, the latter on January.

Corn Near Season's Top.

Local sentiment was more favorable to the buying side of corn, and while prices were slightly lower early, they advanced 1¼@1⅝c from the inside figures, with January getting within ⅞c of the best price of the season, while May was within ½c and February ⅛c of the previous top. March set a new record. Shorts covered freely, but toward the last there was week end profit taking and general evening up and the close was on a small reaction. January finished at $1.53⅝, February at $1.39¼, and March and May at $1.37⅞.

There was no pressure from cash houses and receipts were small at 126 cars, which sold fairly at unchanged prices until near the close, when buyers withdrew and a decline of 1c followed. Weather was clear and cold over the greater part of the belt. The weekly forecast was for cold weather with some snow.

Wire trouble curtailed outside interest in the market and also held down shipping sales to 15,000 bu. In view of the liberal number of consignment notices of late some receivers expected a material gain in the movement in a few days. For the week arrivals were 1,052,000 bu and shipments 441,000 bu. Last year receipts were 1,282,000 bu, against 542,000 bu last year.

Cash Oats Advance.

Receipts of oats were extremely small, 22 cars, and with local feed dealers active buyers prices advanced 1@2c. Choice No. 3 white sold as high as 1½c over January, with ordinary cars at ½c over. Standards at the outside brought 2¼c over January. Shipping demand was somewhat better, with sales of 55,000 bu. Country offerings and consignments are limited and receivers expect a small movement for some weeks.

Futures were in fair demand from shorts, who covered on the strength in the cash article and in corn, and they advanced early, only to react ¼@⅜c from the top and close with small gains. January finished at 70¼, February at 71⅛c@71¼c, March at 71⅝c, and May at 71⅞c.

Barley in Good Demand.

Rye had a firmer undertone, No. 2 on track selling at $1.62½. The government bought 5,000 bu in store at $1.62. Receipts, 5 cars. Milwaukee was unchanged and Minneapolis unchanged to ½c higher. The northwest had 48 cars.

Barley sold readily, with prices averaging 1@2c higher here, while Milwaukee and Minneapolis were unchanged to 1c higher. Spot sales were at $1.02@1.06, with a car of wheat mixed at $1.08. Receipts, 9 cars. The northwest had 38 cars.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed ½@1c higher, January, $3.55; May, $3.65½. Winnipeg unchanged. May, $3.42¼. The three markets had 30 cars.

Timothy seed easy. March, $11.75 asked. Country lots, $8.00@11.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo unchanged; January, $5.00; March, $5.22½ per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed unchanged. Country lots, $25.00@36.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 5c higher; March, $25.35 per bu of 60 lbs.

Packers Sell Provisions.

Free selling of May lard and short ribs attributed to Armour and the Milwaukee Cudahy combined with scattered offerings made an easier market for all product. There was also some selling attributed to the embargo on shipments to the seaboard, due to labor troubles and shortage of tonnage. Buying was mainly by short sellers of previous days. At the close lard was only 7½@10c and short ribs 5@10c lower, while pork was off 5c.

It was claimed by some traders that the English are not to pay the recent high prices. Local and outside packers are offering young short ribs more freely with sales of 50 lb averages at 25¼c and 70 lb at 25c. Shipments of lard and meats for the week exceeded last year's. Prices follow:

Omaha Factories' Output Doubled in Last 4 Years

Omaha manufacturers produced $427,271,161 worth of merchandise during 1918, an increase of $100,000,000, or 33 per cent, over 1917, and double the figures of 1915. These facts have been determined by an exhaustive survey by the bureau of publicity of the Omaha chamber of commerce.

This gain is largely due to the increase in output and value of packing house products, which was $288,820,787, an increase of $97,000,000 over 1917, and exceeded the entire output in other lines.

WASHINGTON PK. NATIONAL DIVIDENDS.

The Washington Park National bank has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent and an extra dividend of 14 per cent, making 24 per cent for the year. These dividends are payable to the sold stock, $100,000, and not to the recent addition of $100,000.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Unless there is considerable change in the program now being worked out between the United States and the allied nations in Europe by President Wilson and Herbert C. Hoover, there will be no loss to the United States on the 1919 wheat crop, according to J. Ralph Pickell in this week's issue of the Rosenbaum Review.

The problem of food distribution is to be one of the very first considered at the peace conference. The first part of the program was completed when Herbert C. Hoover was appointed head of the international food commission. As such he will regulate the distribution of grains and other foodstuffs. The allies were plainly told that the guaranteed figure on the 1919 United States wheat crop was done for their benefit, and not for this country's. Therefore they were morally bound to take the surplus grain.

A message to Howard B. Jackson of the food administration from officials of the food administration at Washington said that no permits had been issued to import Argentine corn and that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Barnes were not in favor of it. This was the bull card in corn yesterday. It was said that local shorts were well in at the last and that the break from the high point was due to profit taking by a few local longs. After the close there was buying of bids by local traders. Sentiment in corn remains bearish, although the local traders have not been able to make any permanent headway in depressing values, as they finished higher than a week ago, with March and May up 1¾@1⅞c.

It is claimed that 3,000,000 bu of Argentine corn has been hedged by sales of futures here within a short time. The corn has been bought at 70c at Argentine ports and hedged here at around $1.37 to $1.38. Buyers have the privilege of shipping to any country desired. The corn may not come to this country. It is doubtful whether it would grade here as some see it. It was said that the Rosenbaum Grain company bought 500,000 bu of the corn in Argentina a few days ago and hedged it here. Some regard it a good spread.

A few of the commission houses said that they had offerings of corn from the country yesterday, while others claimed they were light. A few reports claimed that the weather was too cold for farmers to do much shelling and hauling.

Weakness in January corn at the last, with the break of 1c in cash corn, owing to a withdrawal of the largest buyers, was attributed to selling by scattered holders. There is a belief in the trade that January may act somewhat like December later in the month, although likely to show weakness from time to time when small holders sell without the market getting support. Cash handlers are looking for a larger movement and are disposed to believe that it will come in a week or two. At the same time there are many speculators who are long and expect higher prices, because corn has not weakened under the talk of increased offerings this week.

There is a mixed sentiment in oats. Bears are selling futures because prices are high and stocks are large. The receipts of late have come mostly from the northwest. Comparatively few of the farmers in the central west are selling oats, and the movement is falling off sharply. Receipts here for the week dropped 1,174,000 bu, and were 607,000 bu short of last year's.

It was the gossip of the provision trade that packers have been advised of large future requirements of all products, extending up to July. This was construed as bullish on corn. There were also the claims that the English buyers were not to pay the high prices of late. Recent purchases were on the basis of 28c here for short clears. It is a high figure, but under existing conditions some specialists regard it as not out of line. Those who believe in large future requirements were buyers of lard and short ribs yesterday, while several of the large packers were credited with being free sellers.

Lard stocks at western packing centers Jan. 1 were 66,757,000 lbs, an increase last month of 11,071,000 lbs, the largest, with one exception, in seven years. In 1916 they increased 22,294,000 lbs. Dry salted meats increased 32,483,000 lbs and are 189,000,000 lbs. Short ribs show 1,958,000 lbs, a decrease last month of 762,000 lbs. Total meats aggregate 311,077,000 lbs, an increase of 54,760,000, the smallest gain in December since 1913, when it was 45,757,000 lbs. Last year the increase was 100,400,000 lbs. Pickled meats increased 22,000,000 lbs.

Messages from Omaha to the Updike Commission company said there was an active demand there for corn and oats from the south. A sale of 50,000 bu No. 3 mixed corn was made over night to go to Kansas City on the basis of $1.49, track Omaha. Kankakee, Ill., in a message to Sam Finney & Co. said shellers were busily engaged in that section, but that the corn was going south and east.

Some of the leading oat receivers say that they would not be surprised to see No. 3 whites selling at over 2c above the January before long. Receipts are expected to remain light for some time, or until the country finishes hauling corn. With the bulk of the cash grain in store here, understood to be sold for shipment, a tight situation might easily develop. Any fresh shipping sales will necessitate bidding up to secure the grain.

Barley prices have advanced 3@4c on the average during the last few days. A good part of the buying has been on a rumor that all restrictions on the brewing of beer would be removed. No action along this line is expected until Julius Barnes, president of the Food Administration grain corporation, returns from Europe. Hoover is expected to remain there for some months yet.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Offerings of cash wheat continue small in all markets. The only sale of winters at Chicago was of No. 4 red at $2.28, or 2c above the basic for No. 1. Sales of No. 1 northern were at $2.28. St. Louis reported prices 1c higher, but demand limited. Receipts, 40 cars.

Cash corn sold fairly at unchanged prices until the last, when buyers withdrew and it was hard to dispose of the last few cars which appeared late, and sellers had to shade prices 1c. St. Louis was 1@3c higher, Peoria unchanged to 2c higher, and Milwaukee unchanged.

Offerings of cash oats were very small, and with an active demand prices advanced 1@2c. Milwaukee was 1@1½c higher, St. Louis unchanged to ½c higher, and Peoria unchanged. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

HOT FIGHT ON IN BOARD OF TRADE FOR PRESIDENCY

L. F. Gates and Albert E. Cross Head Opposing Tickets.

The annual election of officers by the Board of Trade will take place tomorrow. The list of candidates is large and unusually interesting fights are being put up.

A point made by some of the candidates is that the ticket headed by L. F. Gates of Lamson Bros. & Co., with W. H. Perrine for vice president, represents the cash grain receiving interests as well as the speculators and that the cash grain people should give it their entire support.

Albert E. Cross of Cross, Roy & Saunders, who heads the opposition for president, is a provision specialist. He has already served in the directory and was vice president in 1913-14. W. H. Perrine, who retires from the directory this year, is opposed by C. H. Sullivan for vice president. Sullivan, who is well liked, represents the speculative interest.

Eleven Seek Directorships.

There are eleven candidates for the five places on the directory. Those representing the receiving interest are James E. Cairns, J. K. Riordon, and Howard Lipsey. The other candidates are John Joseph Bagley of Logan & Bryan, Arthur F. Lindley of Clement, Curtis & Co., Arthur G. Delany of Thomson-McKinnon; Louis Brosseau, who has made such a good record the last three years as director that he is up for reelection; James W. McColloh, Joseph F. Lamy, William H. Lake of A. O. Slaughter & Co., and Robert L. Scoles of Schwarz & Co.

For Arbitration Committee.

For arbitration committee the candidates are Harry S. Klein, T. Moran, Louis T. Sayre, M. P. Kelly, Jones E. Henry, Fred L. Bascom, N. J. Brogan, William B. Page; appeals committee, J. C. McCarthy, Earle M. Combs, C. W. K. Hvale, Ross H. Kidston, Harold C. Gifford.

The retiring officers are Acting President James A. Patten and George E. Marchy, T. E. Cunningham, L. C. Brosseau, W. H. Perrine, and J. J. Bagley, directors.

WAR CONTRACT HOLDERS UNITE TO PUSH CLAIMS

More than 200 contractors who have been engaged in war work have formed an organization, it was announced in Cleveland yesterday, for the purpose of bringing about an early settlement of their claims. W. S. Symington of Baltimore, president of the Symington Chicago corporation, was elected president.

Claims held by contractors upon which payment has been withheld by the government are reported to amount to $1,600,000,000. The majority of these claims were based on rush orders for material needed by the army and navy. Plants were reëquipped so the munitions could be manufactured. The treasury department has recently taken the stand that these claims, when not based on formal contracts, are invalid.

Even firms which had properly signed contracts have had trouble getting payment on their claims, the Symington corporation being in this class.

Members of the organization intend to use all their influence to secure the passage of the Dent bill, which legalizes claims for work done on verbal orders, and are urging manufacturers all over the country to join in this movement. The chief opposition to the Dent bill is said to come from attorneys who wish these accounts of manufacturers to pass through a long course of litigation before the court of claims. The manufacturers take the stand that they want to make their settlements with those who placed the orders with them, and that they want the matter taken up while it is still fresh in mind. Unless this is done it is held that the only alternative will be years of litigation, with the possibility that many just claims will never be paid.

COFFEE PRICES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—There was further scattering liquidation and a little trade selling in the market for coffee futures today with the close showing a net loss of 5 to 15 points.

Closing bids: May, 15.15c; July, 15.05c; September, 15.00c; October, 14.90c; December, 14.70c.

The spot market was nominally unchanged at 17c for Rio 7s and 22@22½c for Santos 4s. The official cables reported a decline of 75 to 150 reis in Santos futures. Receipts at the two Brazilian ports were 39,000 bags, and Jundiahy receipts were 22,000 bags.

Investors' War Tax Heavy.

The numerous changes made in the war revenue bill during its passage through the senate do not serve to lighten the burden on investors. In its present form this bill, like its predecessors, imposes the larger part of the tax on the people who own the corporations.

The levy amounts to confiscation of a great part of the profits of corporations in the year 1918. If those profits were in the treasuries in the form of cash the tax would be merely onerous. But in many cases they are in the form of finished goods and materials in process of manufacture. All this property must be valued for purposes of taxation on the basis of market prices of Dec. 31. Everybody knows that Dec. 31 prices were much inflated, and nearly everyone hopes and expects that a sharp decline will set in at once. If these expectations are realized the corporations will not be able to turn their paper profits into cash. They will be obliged to liquidate their big inventories on a falling market and, though the profits thus disappear, the tax will remain and must be paid.

As has been shown heretofore, this burden is laid not alone on men of wealth who, perhaps, are able to carry it, but on all investors, rich and poor alike. The number of small investors in corporation stocks has been increasing by leaps and bounds. A report issued last month by the United States Steel corporation shows 21,000 more stockholders than a year ago. Similar increases, though probably not so great, have taken place in other companies.

Colorado Fuel and Iron.

G. W. N., Galesburg, Ill.—The steel business has enjoyed unprecedented prosperity during the last three years and the Colorado Fuel and Iron company has earned more than ever before, but the showing is mediocre in comparison with other steel companies. Boom earnings have been at the rate of about 10 per cent a year on the $34,235,500 of common stock. There is a large bonded debt, making interest and sinking fund charges heavy. Whether the present dividend of 3 per cent a year could be continued through a period of depression is doubtful.

Brief Answers.

E. T., Adrian, Mich.—The North American company usually earns the 5 per cent dividend on its stock with a rather narrow margin. As it issues only annual reports, no statement of earnings since Jan. 1, 1918, is available. In view of the fact that the last year was a trying one for utilities, North American common would appear to be in a very speculative position.

M. W.—The Evanston Railway first mortgage 6s are well secured. Outstanding to the amount of $290,000, they underlie $106,000 of general mortgage bonds. Total interest charges were covered well over twice up to a year ago. No report for 1918 is available as yet. These bonds are better than the second mortgage issue you mention.

HAY AND STRAW

Almost every grade of hay sold at the top prices Saturday, with an urgent demand. Cold weather has restricted loading at country points and brought in a good demand for feeders. Indications are for better prices, as some of the leading dealers see it. Receipts were 25 cars timothy, 2 cars clover, 1 car Iowa prairie, and 6 cars Illinois prairie. No. 1 timothy was $30.00@32.00; No. 1 light clover, mixed, $29.00@30.00; Iowa prairie, $15.00@24.00, and Illinois, $15.00@20.00. Rye straw, $11.50@12.50, and wheat and oats, $10.50@11.50.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The copper market has been unsettled since the withdrawal of government price control on Thursday, with both buyers and sellers showing a disposition to await developments. Iron was unsettled.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Annual Meeting of the Illinois Life's Green Signal Club.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

The annual meeting of the Green Signal club of the Illinois Life, made up of the agents in the home state, was held yesterday at the Hotel La Salle, with a victory banquet in the evening with 250 in attendance.

The morning was given up to private agency conferences, with a business session in the afternoon. At this it was announced that the paid for business at the end of the year was $90,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000, with assets of $15,000,000. The death losses showed an increase of over $400,000, coming chiefly in the last quarter of the year, as a result of the influenza epidemic. Talks were made at the afternoon session by leading officers and agents of the company and plans were made for an increased production in 1919.

At the victory banquet in the evening R. W. Stevens, vice president of the company, presided, and the only speaker was W. R. Childs, assistant general agent for the company at San Francisco, who told of his experiences in Red Cross work in France. This was followed by a vaudeville program.

DECEMBER FIRE LOSSES.

The December fire losses in the United States and Canada amount to $15,737,750, making a total for the year of $317,014,385. This is the largest on record, with the exception of 1906, the year of the San Francisco conflagration. The losses were nearly $50,000,000 in excess of those of 1917, but a large part of this increase was due to the forest fire in Minnesota and to war values of property.

LIFE UNDERWRITERS' MEETING.

The Life Underwriters' Association of Chicago will meet at the Hotel Morrison on Tuesday evening, Jan. 14. Jonathan K. Voshell of Baltimore, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, will be the principal speaker. Each meeting for the year is to have an open forum discussion, and the subject for the January meeting is the scope of the life insurance issued by the federal government to its soldiers and sailors and how insurance men can assist them in keeping up their protection after the war.

INSURANCE NOTES.

The Ohio Supreme court has upheld the law prohibiting liability companies from indemnifying employers who elect to carry their own insurance against losses, which sustains the state fund monopoly feature in workmen's compensation.

Frank C. Crittenden of the publicity department of the National Life of the United States of America was called to New York last week by the death of his sister and has taken the remains to Waterloo, Ia., for interment.

Thomas DuRocher, superintendent of the automobile department of the Integrity Mutual Casualty of Chicago, was married last night to Miss Marguerite Eleanor Morse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Morse of Oak Park.

The quarterly luncheon of the Chicago Board of Underwriters will be held Wednesday at the Fort Dearborn hotel, preliminary to the quarterly meeting of the board on Thursday.

John Barnes, general counsel of the Northwestern Mutual Life and formerly a member of the Wisconsin Supreme court, died last week at the age of 59 from apoplexy.

The Fire Insurance club of Chicago will hold its first meeting of the year Jan. 14 with Quin O'Brien as the speaker.

AMERICAN CIGAR EARNINGS PUT AT $18 A SHARE

New York, Jan. 4.—Increase in the dividend rate on American Cigar common from a 6 per cent to an 8 per cent annual basis confirmed the forecast previously made. Earnings for the full year 1918 are expected to show about $18 a share on the $10,000,000 of common stock after war taxes and preferred dividends.

Of the $10,000,000 American Cigar outstanding the American Tobacco company owns $7,000,000. In other words, the income of the American Tobacco company from its cigar subsidiary will be increased from $420,000 annually to $560,000.

Up until a few months ago it had been expected that American Cigar would declare a stock dividend early in the current year. For tax reasons the financial plans were changed, and about a month ago arrangements were discussed for an increase in the cash rate. The company has been paying 6 per cent ever since the dissolution of the tobacco trust.

FREIGHT RATE TO JAPAN CUT.

A rate reduction of $15 a ton for cargo trade from the Pacific coast to Japan was announced by J. D. Lowman, assistant director of operations for the United States shipping board. The new rate will be $30 a ton. It was also announced a rate of $25 a ton to Manila would be established.

BIG EXPANSION IN LOANS SHOWN BY BANK REPORT

Credited to Special Operations by the U. S. Government.

One of the largest loan expansions shown by the New York associated banks appeared in the statement yesterday, the figures being over $116,000,000. The inrease was credited to continued special government operations and business of the banks in connection with the handling of treasury certificates. The statement occasioned no special comment, which in itself is worthy of notice.

The banks had a good gain in cash, $24,726,000, and the government increased its deposits by $37,881,000, bringing the total up to $215,440,000.

*Decrease. †Specie included, $61,040,000. ‡U. S. deposits deducted, $215,440,000.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago's weekly statement showed that the member institutions in this district are still borrowing, for the bills discounted increased $14,744,428 over the previous week. Meanwhile, however, the obligations of other federal reserve banks to this one decreased, the reduction in bills bought in the open market being $10,911,273.

Notes Show Contraction.

Federal reserve notes in actual circulation showed a contraction of $7,646,170. Government deposits were $2,291,294 higher. The statement as a whole was an average one, though the increase in bills discounted was larger than expected. One local bank borrowed about $10,000,000. The figures:

Claims Board Has Policy.

The Chicago district claims board, which is taking up the matter of adjustment of contracts that have been canceled by the government, has outlined a policy which appeals strongly to the business men who will become associated with the board. John J. Mitchell, one of the members, said yesterday:

"The members of the board that the government has gotten together is about as fine a lot of men as could be secured. There are in all about sixty. Maj. Delafield, representing the government, has outlined the latter's policy, which is for fairness and expedition. As to claims on contracts which were made without final and formal sanction, the government will investigate such as if they were regularly entered into. Then when congress takes necessary action as provided in the Dent bill the claims of all will have been passed upon and no delay will result in settlements.

"Some notion of the complexity of the business before the district board may be seen when it was found that one contractor alone who presented his claims had 1,200 subcontracts."

STOCK MARKET PRICES' COURSE IRREGULAR ONE

Oil and Rail Issues Depressed by Profit Taking.

[New York Times Financial Review.]

New York, Jan. 4.—[Special.]—The irregular course which marked stock market prices was nothing more than would be expected at the end of a week in which the tendency had been upward. While the oil stocks and certain of the railroad issues were depressed by profit taking, the list reflected a firm underlying tone with the exception of local traction shares.

Traction Securities Off.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Interborough Consolidated shares were under pressure in early dealings, presumably the sentimental result of the refusal of the city authorities to permit subway and surface car fares to be increased in Manhattan. The traction bonds were soft and a substantial total of dealings in the Interborough Rapid Transit 5s was recorded.

Rail Stocks Firm.

Followers of the railroad stocks who expected some reflection of Director General McAdoo's opinion on the future of the carriers did not find it. The general firmness of these issues indicated, as has been the case on occasions of the past, a feeling among owners of rail securities that an adequate program would be worked out before congress takes final action.

Thus far in the discussion of a five year period of government control and operation Wall street has discovered little public support for the proposal, and this has tended to engender a conservative attitude toward railroad shares among both investors and speculators.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Chicago stocks were moderately active, with the principal trading in the packing house issues. They were about steady, though Swift International made a gain of ¾. Union Carbide held at 56. Stewart-Warner was fractionally higher and the trading moderate. Peoples Gas was up fractionally. The remainder of the list was inactive.

—We Make Your Accounts Negotiable
You can sell an Acceptance or a Note to your bank, because they are already in bankable form. Your Accounts Receivable are the same as your Acceptances, except in an unbankable form. We arrange your Accounts into bankable form and cash them for you.
What is the difference whether you sell Acceptances or Accounts, if you can make a profit on the money over and above its cost?
You can probably make a larger profit on the money from the sale of Acceptances because there is less expense in handling same than there is in Accounts.
If you can make a profit over and above the cost of financing Accounts, when it may not be feasible to secure Acceptances, why shouldn't you make that much additional profit, rather than lose it simply because you have Accounts instead of Acceptances?
Are you interested in more details?
Cash from the sale of any Asset is of the same use to you.

CATTLE PRICES NARROW RANGE DURING WEEK

Gradual Drawing Together of Extreme Charges Is Expected.

As usual at this season of the year the range of cattle prices narrowed up considerably during the week and from now on a gradual drawing together of the extreme prices is expected. The spread in beef cattle prices for the week was $9.75, against a spread of $5.75 a year ago. Last week's average price advanced 70c at $16.10.

Average price of lambs for the week at $15.80 was 90c higher than the previous week and $1.65 higher than two weeks ago, which was the lowest week during 1918. The average was the second highest since last September.

Barring the first two weeks of December, when top steers sold at $20.25 and $20.50 respectively, top cattle for the week at $19.75 equaled any week last year.

Louisville reported a top for hogs at $17.10, while Buffalo and Pittsburgh each recorded $18.65, the spread of $1.55 being the widest in many weeks.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $17.62, being the lowest since Thursday, Dec. 26, against $17.69 Friday and the previous Saturday, $16.28 a year ago, and $10.35 two years ago.

Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 226 lbs was the heaviest in two months, against 224 lbs the previous week, 216 lbs a year ago, and 191 lbs in 1916, the lightest on record for January, in which week receipts at 334,279 were the largest on record.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 26,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs, and 21,000 sheep, against 8,501 cattle, 18,129 hogs, and 9,311 sheep a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 76,000 cattle, 240,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep.

CATTLE TRADE UNCHANGED.

There was no material change in Saturday's market for steers. Bulk of offerings were stock carried from the previous day. Values figured strong to 25c higher for the week. Butcher stock held the previous day's level, being steady to 25c higher for the week. Other offerings were unchanged, but higher for the week.

HOG MARKET TOPHEAVY.

Liberal offerings, including 13,727 carried over from Friday, forced a 5@10c decline in hog prices and the market closed topheavy, with 9,000 left in the pens and traders generally expecting liberal receipts and a further break early next week. Best sold at $17.85, with price range narrowest of the season. Eleven markets received 812,000 for the week, being 251,000 more than previous week and 100,000 more than the ten year average.

Bulk of sales	$17.50@17.75
Heavy butchers	17.65@17.85

Poor to best pigs	14.00@16.75
Stags	16.00@16.50

LAMBS SELL HIGHER.

Only a few thousand sheep and lambs arrived and the general market was 10@15c higher. Aged and yearling lots closed the week showing 25@50c advance, while lambs closed 75c@$1.00 higher than the previous week. The top on lambs did not show as much gain as some of the medium classes.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The British consul general in Chicago has sent out notice that restrictions on manufactured imports and exports have already been largely relaxed in Great Britain. It is expected that British manufacturers will soon be able to meet practically all demands. Materials not freely available in Great Britain include wire rope, steel wire, tin plate, railway materials, shipbuilding materials. Markets are wanted immediately for airplanes, woolen goods, metal repetition work, sulphuric acid, and similar products.

The Mercantile Trust and Savings bank has announced that its net earnings for the year were $49,008.85, equal to 19 2-3 per cent on capital stock and 16 1-3 per cent on capital and surplus. An extra dividend of 2 per cent was declared in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent and $25,000 added to surplus account. During the year the bank gained $600,000 in new commercial business.

Total resources of $775,493,531 are shown by the financial statement of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York as of Dec. 31, 1918, which has just been issued. Deposits of that date totaled $583,786,091. Comparison of these figures with those of Dec. 31, 1917, shows an increase of $114,748,235 in resources and of $49,504,115 in deposits. In January, 1915, when Charles H. Sabin became president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, its total resources were somewhat over $269,000,000 and its total deposits a little over $211,000,000.

The long range outlook for the copper industry is declared to be encouraging. It is thought certain that good export orders will be received during the next year and that there will also be a good domestic demand. Many companies have curtailed production because of the present inactivity.

Bankers who have had discussions with treasury officials have said they believe it likely that stock market loans will be held down until the fifth Liberty loan is out of the way next spring.

Arthur M. Betts has received his discharge from the army and has returned to his position as manager of the bond department of Alfred L. Baker & Co., 141 South La Salle street, Chicago.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Local curb issues have been quite active with sentiment much improved and the tendency toward a higher level of values. Butler Brothers was the particular feature, selling as high as 221 and closing at 220 bid, offered at 222. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock advanced to sales at 73½. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company changed hands at 185. Inland Steel sold at 204 and closed at 202 to 204. Emerson Brantingham common advanced to sales at 19, while the preferred changed hands at 81. Moline Plow preferred was wanted at 94¼ with small lot offerings at 95½. Deere preferred sold at 96. American Fork and Hoe was unchanged at 106 to 108. Avery preferred was quoted at 99 to 101, and the common at 100 to 102. There were no reported sales in Bucyrus preferred. Automatic Electric improved to sales at 38, and closed at 37 to 39. American Hominy common continued in demand at 72 with very little stock offered around current quotations. In the Motor group Reo Motor Car was quite active with stock selling as high as 23½, but closed slightly easier at 21¾ to 22¼. Continental Motors changed hands at 8¾. Paige-Detroit improved to sales as high as 25½, but closed easier at 23½ bid, offered at 24. Hupp was in excellent demand at 4¾. Fisk Tire and Rubber sold at 84. Goodyear Tire and Rubber second preferred changed hands at 103, while the common was quoted at 225 bid, offered at 230. Firestone Tire and Rubber sold at 144. Sugar stocks were rather quiet. Michigan Sugar unchanged at 8¼ to 8½; Holland-St. Louis at 11¾ to 12¼; Columbia, 11¼ to 11¾; Utah Idaho, 8¾ to 9. The public utility group was without special features, little actual trading taking place.

Anaconda Earnings Put at Annual Rate of $15.48

New York, Jan. 4.—John D. Ryan, chairman of the board of directors of Anaconda Copper Mining company, in his letter to stockholders explaining the authorization of $50,000,000 ten year 6 per cent bonds to finance the development of the South American properties, states that in the nine months ended Sept. 30 last the company earned (after interest, but before depreciation) $27,115,499. This was equal to $11.63 a share, or at the annual rate of $15.48 a share. Earnings in 1917, after interest, depreciation, and taxes, were $34,333,751, equal to $14.72 a share. Surplus income before these deductions totaled $37,498,380.

November Exports Show Gain Over Those of 1917

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Exports from the United States during November were valued at $522,272,604, the department of commerce reported today, as against $487,327,694 for the same month in 1917. Total exports for the eleven months ended with November, 1918, were valued at $5,584,979,478, against $5,633,377,591 for the same period in 1917.

Imports in November were $251,008,037, against $220,334,550 for November, 1917. For the eleven months of 1918 ending with November they were $2,820,326,193, compared with $2,724,556,458 for the same period in 1917.

YEAR'S FAILURES ARE FEWEST IN LAST TEN YEARS

Business Reflects Great Industrial and Trade Activity of War.

Reflecting the great industrial and trade activity of the war period and the large profits accruing from the extraordinary commodity prices, the country's business mortality disclosed further substantial contraction in 1918. Thus commercial failures in the United States during the year just ended, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., numbered 9,982, and supplied $163,019,979 of liabilities, as against 13,855 defaults, involving $182,441,371, in 1917 and 16,933 reverses for $196,212,256 in 1916.

Big Decrease Shown.

Comparing with the high point of 22,156 insolvencies of 1915, the latest statement reveals a 55 per cent decrease, and the indebtedness is practically that much below the $357,908,859 of 1914, which marks the maximum. More than this, so few failures as the 9,982 of 1918 have not occurred in any previous year back to 1899, when the number was 9,337, and the liabilities are the smallest since 1909, or in nearly a decade.

The decline in number of defaults in the last year was progressive, improvement appearing in each quarter, and the returns for the last quarter, with only 1,913 reverses, were especially favorable. In every case the quarterly statistics show reduction both numerically and otherwise from the figures of the corresponding months of 1917.

Statistics Are Given.

In the following table failure returns for the last two years are compared by quarters:

	—1918— No.	Liabilities.	—1917— No.	Liabilities.

COTTON TRADE NEWS

New York, Jan. 4.—A fair amount of liquidation was on in cotton futures and they closed at almost the lowest of the day, with fair losses. The spot markets were firm, with no pressure from sellers, but domestic business on the whole was not heavy. There were indications of selling futures by southern interests. Exports are rather disappointing to the bulls, although some interests look for larger takings in the near future. Supplies generally are large, but for the present have no decided effect on values. Futures:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.

TALK OF THE STREET

There was a fair volume of realizing in the New York market and accompanying short selling with the result of general declines throughout the list. The railroad stocks placed an uncertain construction on Secretary McAdoo's talk before the senate committee. After all is said the situation remains unchanged, with the necessity for government legislation before any plan can be carried out.

Paul M. Warburg says of money and other conditions: "Until we know what will be the outcome of the peace negotiations and what will be the resulting economical and financial relations between the allies on one side and between the government's future financial economic policy, particularly as to the question of financing by government loans, the purchases of our goods by allied nations, and finally until we see more clearly what will be the political and social conditions in what is left of Germany, Austria, and Russia, we cannot even approximately form any judgment as to the trend of prices, wages, and money rates."

Some market observers held the view that the speculative temper seemed to be favorable for carrying the rally in the market into another week. There is a considerable short interest and many who have sold for tax position have still to buy back what they sold or other things in place of the particular securities parted with. No one, however, expects a continued bull market. The outlook appears to be for a trading position.

It is thought that until the excess profits tax is eliminated there will be little chance of a bull market in copper stocks. At present it may be noted the available supply of metal unmarketed is increasing at the rate of about 150,000,000 pounds a month.

The automobile issues were moderately dealt in at fairly steady prices. American Beet Sugar was a firm feature, advancing 3 points, the best record for any of the active shares.

PRODUCE TRADE

Butter prices advanced here ½c Saturday, with a good general demand and lighter offerings. Receipts were only 1,812 cuts, making 29,079 cuts for the week, compared with 32,138 cuts last year. Extra creameries were 67@68c, while other scores were 69@66½c. Centralized, 65@65½c. Trading in cheese was light, with prices unchanged at 35@37c, depending upon the shapes.

An easier feeling developed in the egg market, with prices slightly lower at 62½@63½c for fresh firsts. Receipts were 644 cases for the day and 7,822 cases for the week, the latter comparing with 21,920 cases last year.

Live turkeys were off 2c, fowls, spring chickens, and ducks 1c, and geese 5c lower. Receipts for the week were 24 cars and 3,300 coops. Turkeys were 30c, fowls 25@29c, and spring chickens 24c. Dressed stock sold fairly, with supplies not heavy. Turkeys were 39c, chickens 25@29c.

Potatoes were taken more freely, although trading was not heavy. Receipts for the day were 13 cars, making 125 cars for the week, compared with 128 cars last year. There were 93 cars on track and 38 cars outside. The fruit trade was light. There were 24 cars of apples on track.

Proposed Purchase of White Star Line Checked

LONDON, Friday, Jan. 3.—The Press association says it learns that a sudden stop which is likely to lead to the collapse of the negotiations has occurred in the negotiations for the American purchase of the White Star line, whose vessels form a part of the International Mercantile marine and fly the British flag.

TO THE BUSINESS MAN OF CHICAGO
WHO NEEDS AN ADVERTISING AND SALES PROMOTIONAL EXECUTIVE

Here is an opportunity for you to engage a man of proven, high-grade ability, who can help you develop your business, increase your sales, and reduce your operating expense by increasing your organization's efficiency. I am especially interested in reaching the man who is directing the affairs of a big institution, or one with big possibilities, either.

Mail Order House—Department Store—Manufacturer—Jobber

I know how to produce the largest volume of sales at the lowest possible cost per sale.

Have passed the experimental stage—have learned to see things in relation to one another; take facts and reason my way through them to successful conclusions; am able to think and work fast and produce a quantity of quality work.

I have good health, am full of ambition and have an unsatisfied love for work; can keep my head and shoulders above details and can assimilate as much work as it is possible for any one man to do; am serious minded enough to get things done right and on time.

Am familiar with practically every line of merchandise that is used by the consumer and know trade channels—manufacturers, jobbers, wholesalers, retailers, and mail order. I know how to find and analyze markets, sources of supply—raw products, etc.

Have had 18 years' experience in the business world with commercial institutions whose sales total up to $20,000,000 annually, covering advertising, sales promotional work, organization and departmental work—training an organization's employes how to work.

Am 36 years old; married.

With last employer more than seven years.

Can furnish highest class references as to my ability and responsibility.

I am using this plan of placing this message before you because I feel that if your business requires a man of my ability and qualifications, you will look through these columns to find him. Only positions in Chicago considered.

DAYTONA
FLORIDA
On the Beautiful Halifax River

"THE PRETTIEST WINTER RESORT IN THE WORLD"

Daytona, the most beautifully located resort in Florida, where the Atlantic Ocean and deep flowing Halifax River combine to make this resort the most picturesque spot of Florida East Coast. On the Ocean side stretches the wonderful white beach made internationally famous by the annual mid-winter automobile races. On the banks of the Halifax, where private yachts ride at anchor, is the Town of Daytona, with its public buildings, smart shops, lovely winter homes and fine hotels.

From Casino Burgoyne radiates the social life of the winter colony. Golf on a fine 18-hole course, sport fishing in Ocean and River, hunting in the pine forests that lie only a few miles out of the city, surf bathing, yachting, tennis and music twice daily are only a few of Daytona's diversions.

Modern and efficiently managed hotels offer accommodations to meet the requirements of all visitors, from the moderate priced, quiet family hotel to the big, smart hostelries of metropolitan service. For information send for booklets, series N. Address Individual Hotels.

Girls! Beautify Your Hair With "Danderine"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

35c Bottles. All drug stores and toilet counters from Switzerland this woman wrote

She had been traveling about from London to Paris, to Switzerland and beyond. Then the War came, making shipments difficult, and she learned the discomfort of traveling without CREME ELCAYA. And so began the search for it, ending with this letter:

> Dear Sir: Aarau, Switzerland
> I have used ELCAYA products ever since they could be had at Selfridge's, in London, but am no longer able to obtain them. You would oblige me very much by kindly letting me know whether you have a depot in Switzerland, or whether it would be possible to get ELCAYA direct from New York.
> Yours truly, (Miss) M—— L——

This letter tells its own story of the place CREME ELCAYA, the non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream, has made for itself with women who are careful about the little niceties of their appearance. They write us frankly and unsolicited that there is no substitute for CREME ELCAYA, and they go to no end of trouble to get it.

It is not alone what CREME ELCAYA does to protect and soften and clear your skin—

It is the unbelievable attraction it adds to your personal appearance which will make you love CREME ELCAYA just as every woman does who uses it rightly.

Begin today to make your skin beautiful by this easy method—

> A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a little ELCAYA rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of face powder over all.

Before you'd believe it possible, your skin will be so good to look at that you will go often to your mirror. And the joy of knowing that you give pleasure to all who see you will add new joy to life.

A Vastly Better Way to Brush Teeth

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Millions of people find that brushed teeth still discolor and decay. It is evident that old-time methods do not give protection.

As every dentist knows, the reason lies in a film. In that slimy, clinging, ever-present film. It gets into crevices and stays and resists the tooth brush. And that is the tooth destroyer.

That film is what discolors. It hardens into tartar. It holds food which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth—the cause of decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus nearly all tooth troubles are due to the film.

Scientific men have long sought a way to end that film. And one man now has found it.

The way is called Pepsodent—a tooth paste based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter.

The purpose is to dissolve the film, then prevent its accumulation.

Watch Its Effects

Pepsin must be activated, else it is inert. The usual method is an acid, harmful to the teeth. So pepsin long seemed barred.

But now a harmless activating method has been found. Five governments have already granted patents. That discovery makes possible these Pepsodent results.

After three years of clinical tests we now offer it to users. Able authorities have proved its results thousands of times over. Now we ask you to prove them in your home.

Send the coupon for a One-Week tube. Use it like any tooth paste, then watch the results. Note how clean your teeth feel after using. Note how they whiten as the fixed film disappears.

You will see in one week that Pepsodent means cleaner, safer teeth. It will be a revelation. You will want those good results continued, we believe. Cut out the free coupon now.

La-may Face Powder Does Not Contain Any White Lead

Now you can use a pure face powder that beautifies your complexion wonderfully and is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. Five thousand dollars is offered any chemist who analyzes it and finds it contains any white lead or rice powder. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and pimples. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed. If you do not find La-may much better than any you have ever used, your dealer is authorized to return your money without question. Refuse substitutes. Your common sense will tell you that when you are offered a substitute it is sure to be a demonstrator trying to sell an inferior powder that pays a big commission. When you use this absolutely pure La-may and see how splendidly it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why it so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York.

Over One Million American Women Are Now Using La-may Face Powder

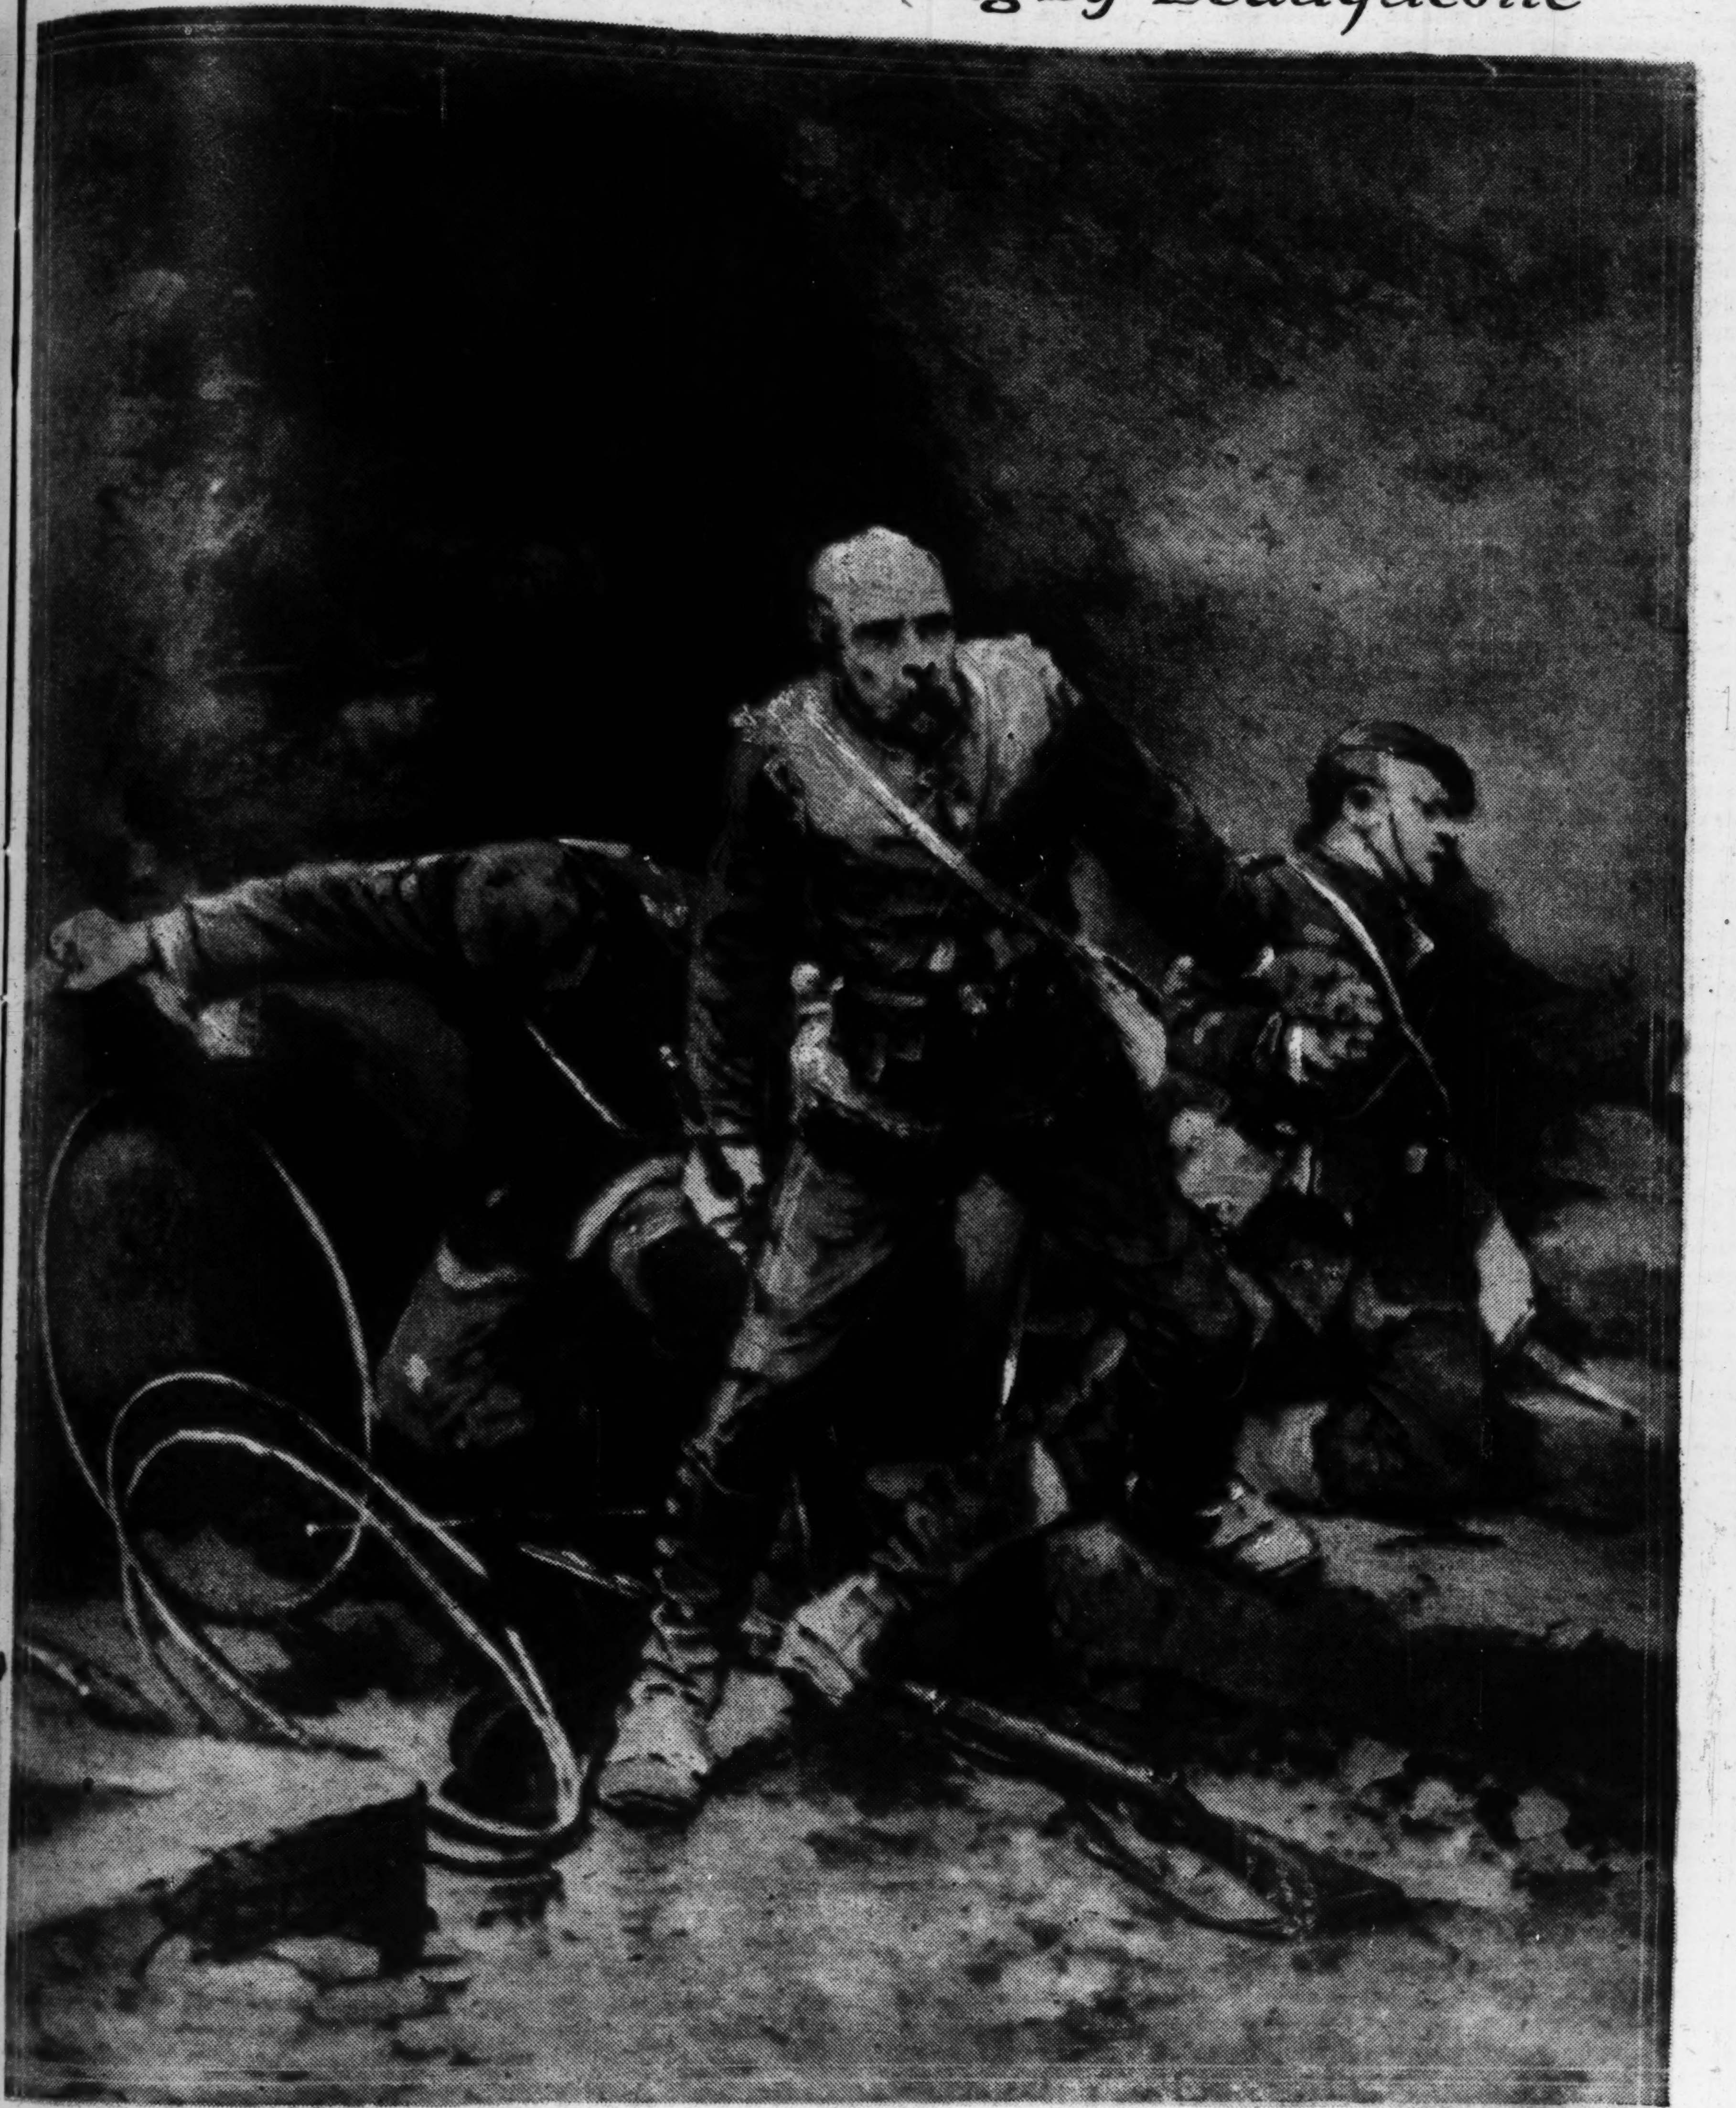
THE FIGHT IN THE CAVE

Reproduction of a Painting by Beauquesne



BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

NEARLY fifty years ago France fought the war which lost to her the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. France fought desperately, her back to the wall, each family a unit in her forces, each house a fortress in the crumbling line of defense. Father and son stood side by side facing a relentless enemy from the stronghold of their own homes. The basements that were sought as battlements proved often death traps, and in them the men were caught like rats with no way of escape but through the dark road to death.

In the painting by Beauquesne, "The Fight in the Cave," there is shown one of these treacherous retreats. The brick curb gives on to other steps that lead to the wine cellars below. The stairs above lead to the floor of the house proper. Hoops stripped from barrels in some vain movement of offense incumber the ground.

In the dark of the basement room a gray haired officer of Lorraine grasps the muzzle of his importunate rifle, one son falling to death behind him and a younger lad sinking wounded upon the stairs. At their feet pistols and muskets shot to their last round lie worthless at this moment of greatest need. From above echoes the tramp of marching feet. The Frenchman leans forward—watching, listening, every sense strained to catch the meaning of the noise above. Through his mind runs the phrase that in 1874 rang out in the great hall of the reichstag at Berlin, voiced by the members from Alsace: "If Europe stands for this now, sooner or later the time will come when Europe herself will be in this condition."

Europe stood for it, under protest, and the time came. The fulfillment of the time we have just seen. France has received again her own, and the fangs of the beast of Prussia have been drawn in the blood of her sons.

The painter, Wilfrid-Constant Beauquesne, was born at Rennes, France, in 1847. He was a pupil of Vernet and Vernet-Lecomte at the Beaux-Arts in Paris. He has become celebrated as a painter of military subjects. He has exhibited a great deal and has won many prizes. Among his paintings are "Au Drapeau," "Les Corbeaux," "The Death Ride," "The Death of Sister Claire," and "Sous-Bois."

THE CULL BEATS IT

By Jack Lait

A Little Deception All Around That Did No Harm.

THE Gold Coin Kid was a gambler. He wasn't a high flyer, just a second rate piker. But he was a professional in that from the first day when he had learned how to make a pair of dice roll seven for cigaret pictures in an alley he had made such a living as he had made thereafter by the tools and artifices of games of no chance.

He had graduated to the cigar store world and the poolroom sphere and had come, certified and bearing numerous degrees, into the out and out gambling houses which lurked in dark and seedy buildings, "under cover."

In such precincts he "knocked out" a precarious but sufficient income for his needs and tastes. A package of tobacco in his hip pocket, a tab of papers to match in his lower right hand vest pocket, a few dollars for room rent and ham and eggs, not much for laundry service and less for reading matter inclusive of the racing sheets, sufficed him.

He was called the Gold Coin Kid because he had once been sent to the bridewell for stealing a $20 gold piece from a tipsy cattleman, and not because he rang true, glistened, bespoke ready money, typified a standard value, or was minted of precious metal.

The Kid had been dealing questionable stud at one of the last surviving gaming rooms when an annoying official nosed in and began to prosecute with venom. The gamesters scurried like rats to avoid both of the two contingencies which the professional gambler most fears—arrest as a defendant or subpœna as a witness.

A gambler just one stratum higher than the Kid had "slipped him the tip to blow"—to be gone, to disappear, to stay away until the surface of the uncertain sea might again seem smooth.

"Beat, it cull, beat it," he commanded the Kid, easing $50 into the piker's palm.

And the cull did as he was bid.

He had no relatives at Bar Harbor, no club in New York, and no castle in rural England to go to. In truth, he had no objective destination when he poked the money into his "kick" and hurriedly started.

Beating it presupposed evacuation of the city at least, so he made for a depot, the nearest one. He looked up at the signboards over the gates which are pointed with clock hands to indicate time of train departures, and selected the gate which let him in to the train that would be first to go. At the ticket office he bought transportation which would take him on that train to a village a hundred miles distant, a village whose name he had never seen or heard before. And at that village he alighted with his yellow imitation leather suitcase and looked about him.

It was not a resort town. No hawking solicitors for hotels assailed him. No one even noticed him. He hailed a boy and asked him where a boarding house might be found. The boy said he had never seen one. The Kid walked through the town and found no sign indicating a welcome for strangers. So he walked on. Into the country, along a road of lumps and ruts, he proceeded with his light luggage, and toward nightfall halted at the pathway to a rustic dwelling house.

In the dorway sat a mighty pretty girl peeling potatoes. She looked up and took him in with an unembarrassed, protracted survey. The Kid had never been a ladies' man, but he knew his etiquette and raised his hat.

"I'm a stranger," he said.

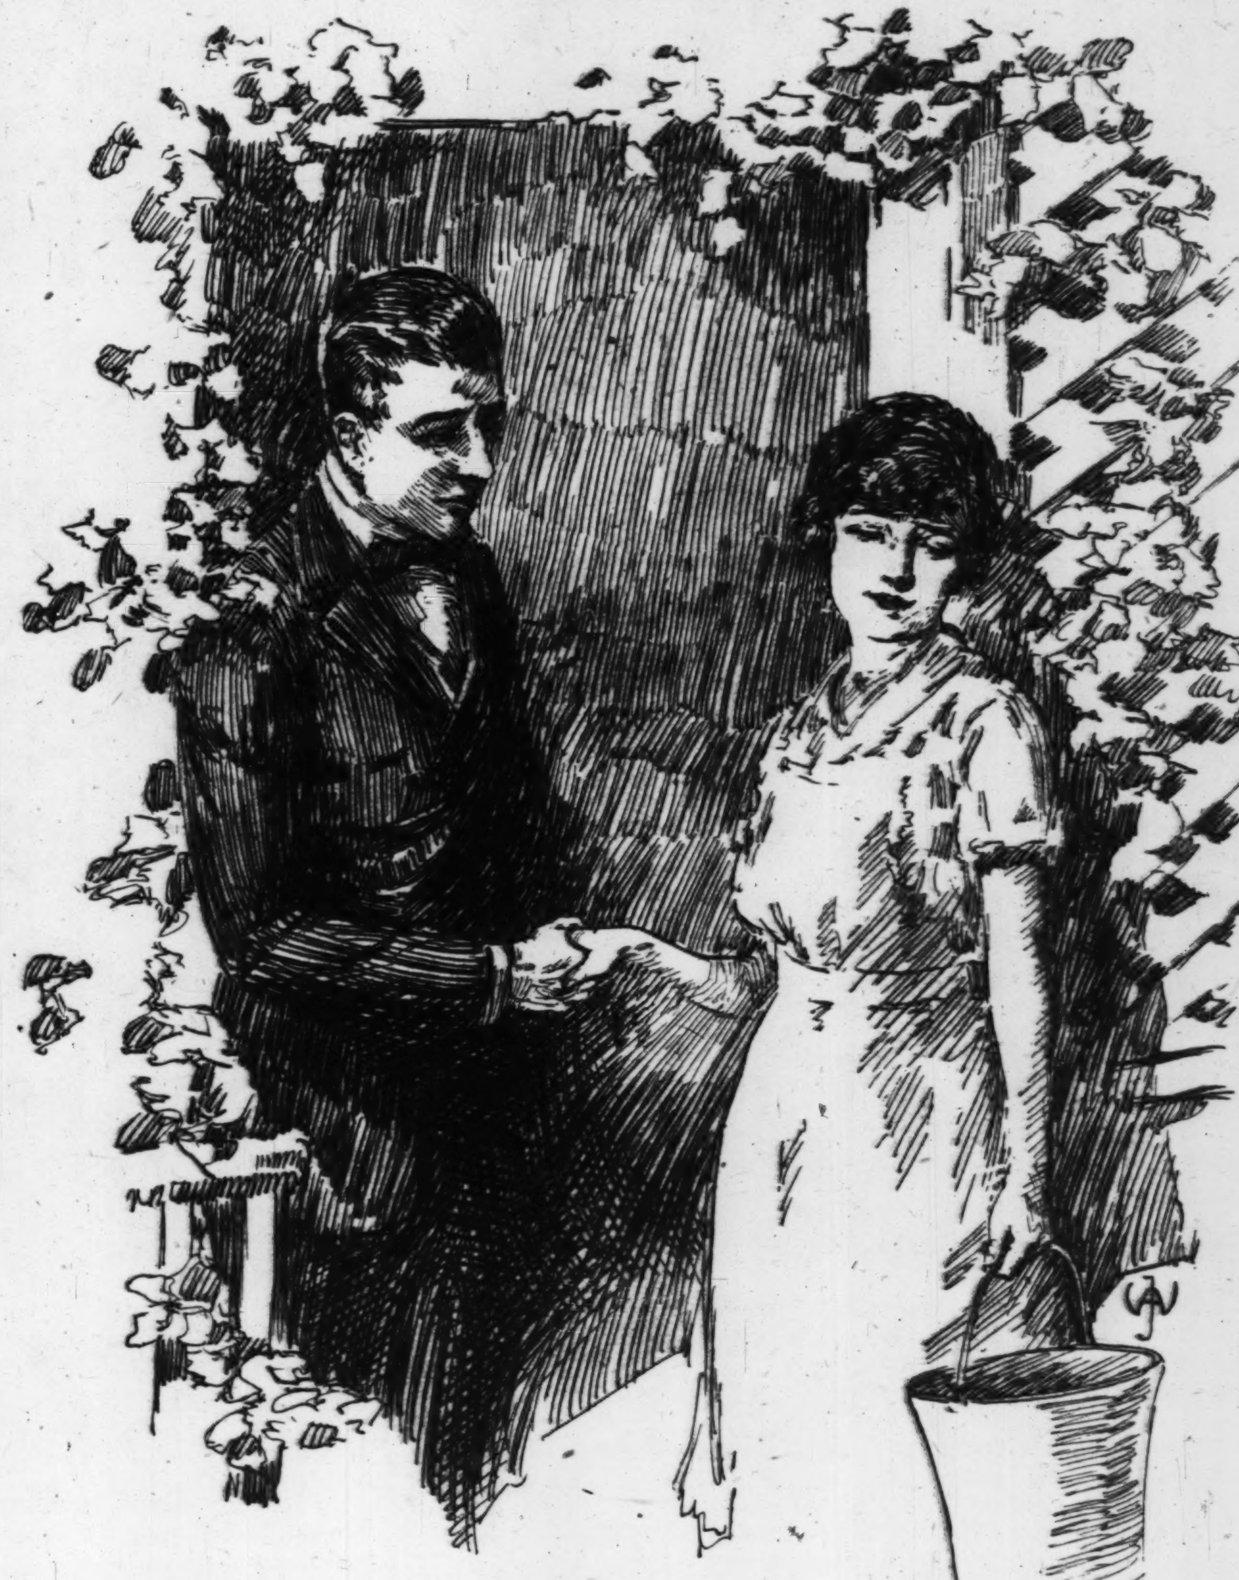
"Huh—I knew that," said the girl. "The men 'round here don't lift their hats; besides you got a satchel, an' I know ev'rybody in this county, anyway."

"I wonder would your ma take a boarder."

"My ma?" repeated the girl, smiling. "Well, I'll ask Mrs. Hornsby if she wants you."

And she vanished into the house.

A stout woman, wiping soapsuds on both sides of a blue jeans apron, came forth presently, dickered with the Kid, asked him a few questions meant to be cagey and got as many answers meant to be subtle and wily, and a bargain was struck. The Kid was ushered in, shown to a smelly room with a rag carpet on the floor and a creaky bed in a corner, and informed that supper would be ready in half an hour. Raised in tenement houses and gambling houses, the Kid was no fresh air fiend, but the lack of ventilation, typical of rooms "in the country," offended him, and he opened a window, not without considerable effort. Then he spruced up at the faded mirror over the rickety "dresser," washed his hands not too diligently in the cracked china bowl, and rolled a cigaret. When the handbell called he came down to the feast.



"You're an ace," he said.

Small talk lagged during the repast. The head of the household, an unshaven yokel of the smart Aleck type, sparred with the "city feller" in manner intended to be wise and hardened. He wasn't to be abashed just because he wrestled with the soil for an existence—no, he had been to Chippewa Falls and he guessed he wasn't buying any gold bricks.

The Kid did not push matters. For one thing, his interest was largely concentrated on Ella, the girl, who waited on table, and who apparently was a servant; moreover, he was off his own dunghill, and his experience as a gambler had taught him that the most skillful player is at a disadvantage in the other man's game.

All hands sought the feathers early that night, and next day before the Kid had yawned and stretched the farmer was far afield. During breakfast the boarder and the hired girl had the stage alone between them and made more than negligible progress, the Kid lying about where he had come from and what his business was, and the unblushing girl offering the information that she lived "over there," indicating not too specifically nor' by nor'west, or thereabouts. The Kid suggested that she had a pretty nose, and she giggled and opined that he was mighty fresh on such short acquaintance, which meant she liked his style and would receive attentions if approached with discretion.

After the meal the women folk busied themselves about the house and the Kid took a walk. He endured that for an hour, but was equipped with the wrong shoes and the wrong endurance for more lengthy cross country hiking. So he limped back to the front porch and watched the road a while. Nothing happened and no one came by, and he found it tedious and growing irksome.

He "frisked" his suitcase and found to his disappointment that in his haste to "duck" he had forgotten to slip a deck of cards into his paraphernalia. So he whistled to Ella, which was by way of a formal and yet amicable summons, and said:

"Say, if you could dig me up a deck o' cards I'd play myself a li'l solitaire."

"Nothin' like that on the grounds," she decreed.

"No? Well, mebbe there's a pair o' dice?"

She guffawed.

"Nix," she answered. "These folks never seen anything like that."

The Kid wondered and pondered. To think of it! A family which had no cards or dice!

"Say," he whispered, "when the ol' man comes home get me three washtubs an a watermelon an' I'll show him the shell game."

Ella snickered.

"I'll go cuckoo here," whined the Kid. "It's so doggoned still it gives me the willies. Can't you break a dish or throw somethin' at the dog?"

"O, you'll get used to it after a while," she assured him. "It ain't so dead around here. Year before last a book agent called, an' next fall there's gonna be a 'lection, with speeches at the county seat, only eighteen miles away."

"You're very encouragin'. All night it was so still I couldn't sleep. And when the birds begun to twitter to'rds mornin' I tried to hyp myself that it was traffic whistles, an' at last I kidded myself to unconsciousness. This looks like a tougher lay than what I dreamp it would be."

"You mus' be a reg'lar night owl in town, huh?"

"Who, me? Aw, not exac'ly. I'm a cigar salesman, an' that line o' trade keeps me steppin' aroun' live joints. I guess I took my business too serious, at that; that's why my healt' broke down an' I was ordered by a specialist to beat it for the tall weeds an' nurse my nerves back to the proper temp'ature.

"This here milk, air, an' eggs is O. K. enough, but I don't mind wisin' you I'm homesick already. Gee, I'd like to wrap myself around a lot of chop suey right now at the Chinaman's, shake the ol' twenty-six game for the smokes over the counter, an' then kind o' josh around with the gang for an hour or two. A party gets used to such as that an' he don't feel right when he's away from his own s'roundin's."

"I d'know," said Ella. "I've alwus stuck around these parts. Gee, it mus' be wonderful in a large city, with the tall buildin's, them cars an' theayters."

"Aw if you're in amongst that stuff all the time it gets tiresome, an' it takes a heave into a layaway like this here to prove what blessin's asphalt pavements an' corner saloons is after all. After I get back home, though, if you'd care to come up to the city—that is, I ain't goin' back to where I told you I lived, but I'm gonna head for Chicago—why, mebbe you an' I might meet some time, an' mebbe I might be able to steer you around some."

"Mebbe," she said with a faraway look and voice. "Mebbe you might."

The days droned by for the Gold Coin Kid. No one ever had less to do than had he upon the waylaid farm. A landsman at sea, a soldier in peace times, a city man in the country—useless, lost are they. The Kid couldn't even look on with interest, for the simple tasks about the place were unintelligible to him. The humming of winged things, the soft noises of distant kine and a whispering waterfall, the all day jarless quietude, and the nights of dark without gloom, reposeful nights, worked him into a humor he had never known before.

And fitting into this mood was Ella. He watched her a hundred times a day as she busied about with her mean tasks, whistling now, and silently sad, it struck him, again. But he saw that her form was young and supple, that her eyes were hazel, that her nose was pert and girlish, that her lips were full and red, and that there was something about her to be pitied. That something has won many a man, many a man higher and lower in the social scale than the Gold Coin Kid, who had never paid much heed to women, whose vices had not looked to the other sex for expression.

He grew quite convinced that Ella liked him. Of course he was a male, a stranger, a hero of skyscrapers and trolley cars, and it was but natural that he should carve an impression upon this child, whose wildest diversions had been summed up in stray barn dances and roadside greetings with hickory shirted plowboys. Yes, the Kid was willing to "lay" two to one that Ella fancied him.

And he longed to play out the bet.

His chance came. Ella had gone to the barn to tend a weanling calf which howled after dark. When she returned to the house she was startled to hear the scraping of a foot on the floor of the porch, and through the unlighted evening she made out the figure of the star boarder. She giggled nervously and said: "O—h'lo. You here?"

He convinced her that he was.

He slid his arm about her and drew her toward him.

"Here, here—none o' that," she protested. But he was stronger.

"Don't git noisy," he murmured. "I don't want you to wake up the ol' folks. I got somethin' to say to you what ain't none o' their business."

"You mustn't," she pleaded. "I—you—this don't go."

"Fine," said the Kid heartily. "I was afraid it might be too easy. They's a lot o' women in Chicago—Chicago was where I said I was goin', wasn't it?—but I found the one here what I want. Ella, if I look better to you than this here bum farm I want you to come with me when I mosey back to town."

"No—no; I can't. I got to go straight. I——"

"Straight? Well, who's askin' you not to? A preacher goes with this proposition, an' a license an' a ring on your left duke."

The girl throbbed a moment. Then she pushed him away.

"Wait a minnit," she gasped. "Just a minnit—lemme think. . . . No. You come here a stranger, a boob from the big town. It wouldn't be right to put one over on you."

"Wh-what do you mean? Who's gonna——"

The girl looked up, squarely and with resolution.

"I ain't what you think I am," she gulped. "You found me here on a farm amidst potato peelin's an' decency, an' I s'pose the picture would nach'rally fool anybody, 'specially a man from a big town, where they think anybody what's in the country is as sweet as milk. Well, you're wrong. They's as much rottenness an' no account, low down work at the crossroads as at the downtown corners.

"You wanna marry me. That's mighty sweet o' you, an' you'll never know how fine that made me feel. But you don't know—an' when you do you won't want me."

"Why—what's the matter with you?"

"Everything. When I pointed over that way an' told you I come from there, I didn't tell you what over there it was I come from. Five miles acrost that hill is the state school for incorrigible girls; that's where I come from. I'm on parole, farmed out to these stingy rubes that can't forgive me one minnit o' the day for my past, but who get me a dollar a month cheaper because I'm damaged. Now, don't ask me how I got into trouble—it don't matter, excep' that tem'tations is the same around here as what they are everywhere. Anyway, I guess that cooks my goose with you, Mr. Snyder."

"My name ain't Snyder," said the Kid. "I lied like a horse thief. My name is Simpson, an' they call me the Gold Coin Kid, an' I'm about as low as they come. I'm a cheatin' piker gambler. I've did my li'l stretch in the bandhouse; the coppers is lookin' for me right now—that's why I'm here—an' they ain't even lookin' for me for a respectable job, on'y as a witness in a bum, scummy gamblin' house mixup. They don't come no lower than what I am. I love you, honey—you're eighty times as good as what I am. Now you got my number, an' I s'pose it's twenty-three."

"My God!" exclaimed the girl. "This can't be. It sounds like a miracle. They ain't a man in this here county what'd have me, an' here you come out o' nowheres, made to order, with your arms out for me to fall into. It don't sound nach'ral—somethin' is goin' to drop on me in a minnit an' wake me up."

"Nothin' but me," he said as he again embraced her. "An' you can wake up all you like, becus what I'm tellin' you ain't no dream. I don't wanna know how you got in Dutch. I've alwus been a piker, but I alwus knew that when it come to a showdown some day I'd go through like a sport. Say, honey—this is a gamble for your life, an' I'm not askin to see the next card. All I got goes on one queen in the hole. Is it a deal?"

"The king takes the queen," she said, trembling.

"You're an ace," he said, "an' a trump. Let's go."

Through the stilly night they walked off, the Gold Coin Kid carrying his yellow suitcase, heavier now because it contained Ella's other dress. In the station they waited. train came booming in.

"That goes to Chicago," she said, starting up.

He drew her down.

"Let it go," he said. "We're on the way to Minneap'lis. I think the two of us'll be better off where we got a chance to lie about ourself."

The Top Sergeant Stayed Boss Until the War Was All Over.

IT'S all over now, of course, but every member of Company B will remember Sergt. Saxe. Those who did not happen to be in Company B will remember a top sergeant who was just like Sergt. Saxe, because all companies have a way of being pretty much alike. He was the "noncom," you remember, whom every one was going to take a poke at, when he was a civilian again, and never did.

Sergt. Saxe could stand in front of the company and have everything all lined up to make it soft for the captains. Captains have a habit of being careful about picking their "top kickers."

In the first place Sergt. Saxe had a voice that was commanding. It was husky. Tenor voices may bring big money in an opera company, but the possessor of one is pretty apt to stay a private in the army. The vocal chords of Sergt. Saxe seemed to be constantly affected by the "flu." His bark brought men to their feet.

Then, too, Sergt. Saxe had a piercing scowl. He twisted one side of his mouth as he scowled. And when he was not at "attention" he had a manner of standing, his feet apart, his left knee slightly bent so that his automatic hung on his hips with added grace.

Sergt. Sax was the boss of 107 other men, each of whom had passed the physical test for the American army. He ruled supreme. How many of the 107 could have licked him in a fistic encounter no one can say. There were those who muttered that they would black his eye if he so much as ever took off his chevrons, but their mutterings were mere mutterings. He had everybody cowed by his personality. He was naturally a monarch or he would never have stayed a top sergeant.

Who and what had Sergt. Saxe been in civil life? No one really knew. After a week in the O. D.'s no one knew or cared what anybody about them had been in the old life. It didn't count at all. The sort of a soldier a man was counted a good deal. The chances were that one would be a soldier for a long, long time. And Sergt. Saxe was a good soldier. He knew the "I. D. R." by heart. He was the first man up and dressed in the morning. He never had an ache or pain; he was as hard as the soles of his hobnail shoes.

The mobilization of American youth recently proved one thing absolutely. You can't tell any more by looking at a man or listening to him whether he is from the city or the farm. An accent may betray his particular section of the country. It is the only clew. And the present generation of American youth has proved itself a little more sure of itself, a little more daring, a little more boisterous, a little more muscled than any American generation that has gone before. It has proved itself a little bit snappier and harder than any race of men that has ever gone before.

Sergt. Saxe had no infant class on his hands. He had a bunch of huskies to bawl out. He bawled them out and none of them ever said anything back. "No excuses," "no arguing," "no complaints"—these were some of the mottoes of the sergeant. On an occasion or two while passing down the barracks a disgruntled remark had reached his ears, and he had turned so abruptly with a "What's that?" that the 107 had shivered in their blankets, and the author of the remark had positively held his breath until the sergeant had passed on.

Why is it so easy for some men to lead? It is an interesting study. Half the men in the company were as big and strong as Sergt. Saxe, although he was well built and tireless on a hike. Napoleon may have been a small man, Funston may have been less than 5 feet 4, but they were handicapped at the military game just the same. They must have been.

Private Lane was a bigger man than the sergeant, and as a matter of fact Lane had been far above Saxe in civil life. Lane had been at the head of a chain of stores and Saxe, to tell the truth, had been an insignificant clerk. But in the army Saxe had gone up and Lane had gone down. All companies are alike. And a saying in the army is that "it's a great life if you don't weaken." There is a point in the course of the strenuous training where it is a case of kill or cure. If you pass that point, "heads up" you are setting pretty. If at that point you weaken, then you're all out of luck.

Lane had weakened at the critical point. He had allowed himself to get sick, and the man who lies on his bunk—well, he misses a drill or two, fails to have all his stuff issued to him, loses out on the physical exercises; and when he gets up again the company has raced on and he is a man marked. He is like the boy who misses a week at school. He has a hard time catching up. His mistakes glare. He makes a good kitchen police, an easy victim for any "noncom" picking a detail. Every company has them.

Lane, too, precise enough as a civilian, was a sloppy looking soldier because he got his clothes only after the company had grabbed and picked things over. Sergt. Saxe, a corporal at the time, had shown efficiency at grabbing. His hat was the right size and his leggings were snug and he looked like top sergeant material to the new captain.

Authority came with authority to Sergt. Saxe. Private Lane, eating and sleeping with the private, became one of them. Down in his heart he had felt at first that he was superior to Sergt. Saxe, but he had begun to doubt. Sergt. Saxe had the time to shave and he shaved. He slept in a room with a couple of other sergeants at the end of the barracks. He did not mix with the privates socially. His power grew.

Everybody jumped when they heard the sergeant's whistle. When the sergeant lined up the company and looked it over with his scowl deepening, the 107 lifted their chins and trusted that their buttons were all polished. No one relished the sergeant's sarcasm. He used plenty of sarcasm. He used everything that those who command make use of. He ruled.

The company went to France. Sergt. Saxe was not seasick going across. The morale of the sergeant failed to decline when the company reached the trenches. Shrapnel and gas seemed to have no terror for him. He went over the top when the time came just as he had gone over when in training. He bayoneted the live enemy just as he had bayoneted the dummy enemy back in camp.

And when peace came and the world's nightmare was over, the men of Company B looked for relentment from the sergeant, but he relaxed not a whit. He squelched a cheer from Private Lane. He tightened up with the discipline. He remained the boss—his scowl still made his men cringe, his sarcastic tongue continued to be feared.

He was top sergeant until the last. He enforced rules going home on the ship. When the men were on their way to a mustering out camp, he saw that none of them stuck their heads out the windows. He allowed no man to leave the car. No jokes came to his hard pressed lips, no softening came to the huskiness of his voice.

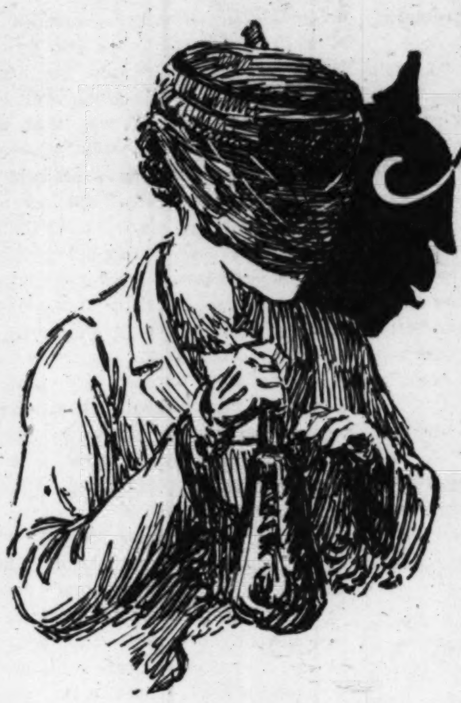
He was that way to the last.

But when the equipment had finally all been turned in and the discharges made out the sergeant underwent a change. He sat in the orderly room smoking a cigaret and there was nothing of the boss about him left. The top sergeant was about to go back home to his wife, who had told him she expected him to come back a lieutenant like the husband of her chum.

His wife weighed just ninety pounds. She came just to his shoulder. She would want to know why he did not have shoulder bars instead of chevrons. He knew his wife when she had her heart set on anything. The ex-top sergeant thought of the meeting in store for him and he trembled. He didn't see how he was going to face her. He feared what was coming.

Just what does leadership require? It's interesting study.

MISS JEROME TURNS THE RICK



One Strange Meeting That Was Followed by Another.

VIRGINIA JEROME laid down the Norwegian newspaper whose headlines she had been vainly endeavoring to translate, and looked up in response to a sudden movement around her. Though it was almost midnight, the lounging room of the Grand hotel at Christiania was filled with men and women, amicably exchanging viewpoints, but anxious eyed and as restless as waves.

Less than a week ago, when the first guns of the European war had sent forth their almost simultaneous roar, the majority of these men and women had been strangers to one another. Now fellow refugees in an alien land, hotly awaiting escape from a continent whose rulers seemed suddenly to have gone insane, they had formed the abrupt interdependencies that develop among those subject to the same dangers and apprehensions.

Most of them were stopping at the Grand hotel. Its lounging room was the hangar to which they returned during the day, after vain flights to steamship offices and among the unexciting pleasure grounds of the Norwegian city; it was their sole resort at night—the background of their oddly assorted friendships, of their ephemeral but close intimacies.

Miss Jerome's cool glance traveled appreciatively from group to group, merely touching several, lingering on others, but always with tolerant understanding in their depths.

The great event of the evening was here—the event for which she and her fellow travelers invariably waited. The night train was in from Bergen, with its load of Russian refugees, and already, in the hotel foyer, tragic groups were gathered, some to remain, others to be sent away because they had no money.

The arrival in Christiania always found certain victims at the end of their resources. Forlorn individuals or groups stood in the big lobby of the hotel, bereft at once of money, hope, and courage. They furnished a nightly drama to observers, waiting to discover which among them remained after the brief conference with the hotel clerks, and which gathered up the hand luggage that was all they had and went out into the midnight streets.

For this drama the men and women in the great lounging room had, as it were, reserved seats. Without leaving their deep chairs or wide davenports, they could see the spectacle through the arch and past the columns that alone separated the foyer from the neighboring apartment.

They were not unsympathetic observers. Virginia Jerome had seen the pugilist rise abruptly the previous night and go to the rescue of an aged couple who were beginning their dazed journey back to the hotel's front entrance. The English judge had provided for a half frantic woman and her three small children—the youngest infant staggering under the weight of a toy hobby-horse he had carried all the way from Berlin. Only the hotel management knew for how many refugees Miss Jerome herself had already paid.

Also they helped each other—these Russians—and sometimes in a royal fashion. Often one of them beckoned to tragic eyed loiterers in the background and adjusted the little matter of cash payment for these friends. Few, if any, ignored the destitute ones; there were at least farewells, regrets, and sometimes tears.

It was her full understanding of all this that made Virginia lean forward and follow closely the movements of one woman in tonight's assemblage. She was a tall woman, slender, and carrying herself with somewhat unusual erectness. She stood out from her companions, partly by reason of her height, but more especially because of her effect of mental detachment from them. She hardly seemed to know that others were near her. Her eyes were on the ground, as if in deep thought, and as she awaited her turn at the desk she tapped the floor with the toe of one serviceable boot, not impatiently, but as if in recurrent emphasis of abysmal reflections.

When she finally faced the clerk she took the first room he offered her, paid for it in gold, nodded, and turned away with a curt gesture, directing a porter's attention to a traveling case at her feet. Throughout she held in her hand a small black bag which she did not once release.

Like her traveling companions, she showed the effects of the long journey on the crowded train. She wore a rumpled pongee traveling coat and skirt, with a hat that confessed its German birth; and though the night was warm, she also wore a blue veil through which Miss Jerome caught the outline of a Roman nose. She had certainly traveled all the way from Bergen with the Russian party; probably all the way from Holland, and quite possibly from Germany itself. But she walked into the elevator without a greeting or a backward glance at one of them, and as she watched the retreating pongee back, Virginia lent herself to a sudden and intense dislike of the woman who owned it.

She breakfasted hurriedly. At 10 o'clock she was due at the credit bank of Christiania, to offer one of her express checks to an unwilling official, who, for an embarrassing interval, would regard it and her with surprise and pain. Then, after extracting the details of her family history and writing them on the back of the check, together with her American address and that of her bankers, he would reluctantly bestow upon her something less than 40 crowns. It was an elaborate daily ceremony over so small a matter, but this was Norway in a time of panic, and possibly, to its officials, even the steady old bank seemed rocking in the upheaval of the world. Certainly as the days passed they relaxed none of their precautions, and this morning Virginia added herself to the tail of the long line of travelers stretching from the door to the desk of the exchange teller, and reminded her impatient soul that, as she had nothing in the world to do, she might as well be there as anywhere else.

She was so sternly taking herself to task for a lack of proper philosophy that several minutes passed before she became aware that the human back immediately in front of her was pongee coated and recognizable. The pongee was less rumpled than it had been the night before; indeed, it looked as if it had been freshly though badly pressed; the back it covered was the arrogantly erect back of the unknown woman of the Grand hotel. It was interesting to have her so near and so unconscious of observation. Also, for the moment, there was nothing to do but to observe her. Virginia therefore looked her up and down, indifferently at first, then with closer attention.

She was a neat person—that was clear at once. Also, she appeared to be something of a personage. The pongee suit was worn with an air. The flat, round German hat, whose brim shadowed her face, was a fine straw, and the trimmings were good. The blue veil, also worn again this morning, was silk, crossing at the back of the hat, tourist fashion, and knotted in a bow under the wearer's chin. It left little of the face in view—only the Roman nose, and a rather large, straight, thin lipped mouth. At the back of the head was a heavy knot of red brown hair, resembling in effect the popular English "bun."

This bun was directly on a level with Virginia's eyes, which naturally fastened themselves upon it and, in so doing, suspected it of being a wig. The fact did not especially interest the observer. The world is full of wigs and of women who wear them. She would have dismissed the suspicion with this reflection but for a little episode that happened in the next instant.

A restless girl in the line, standing immediately in front of the pongee suit, and wearing a wide brimmed straw hat, stepped back without warning, striking with her hat brim the hat of the woman behind her. The impact was abrupt and disastrous. The Berlin hat wabbled and slid sidewise. Its wearer caught at it with a gloved hand; but before she had straightened it, it had pulled the auburn wig to one side. Under the bun, and quite clear against the wearer's dark skin, Virginia saw an inch wide line of short black hair. She leaned forward. It was not the short hair of a woman, but—she took in the detail with stunned conviction—it seemed the smooth, shining, well brushed hair of a careful man. The next instant the hat was straight, its wearer had accepted with a murmured word the apology of the girl in front, and the incident was over.

Virginia caught her lower lip between her teeth—a trick of hers when she was surprised or excited. Then, slowly and carefully, she again looked her neighbor up and down. The result was reassuring. The woman seemed serene, patient, thoughtful. She was angular and flat chested, but so are thousands of other women. With an inward shrug at herself, Virginia decided that her flashing intuition was wrong. She knew several women who wore wigs, and she knew that they wore them for many reasons. Also they were not necessarily the color of the wearer's hair. Why she had experienced that instantaneous conviction that the woman in front of her was not a woman at all, she did not understand. She merely knew that already it was passing—had passed. Nevertheless she slightly changed her position so that she could study the stranger's profile.

She was aided by a forward movement of the human line that brought the pongee suit to the exchange teller's desk. Its wearer lowered her head, bringing the hat brim under the official's eye, and opened the small black bag she had carried. She drew out a handful of gold—German gold, Virginia observed—and in a very soft, well modulated voice asked for Scandinavian and Russian notes in exchange. The amount she received was large. In counting it she evidently discovered that her tight fitting gloves handicapped her movements. With her first gesture of impatience she partly stripped her right hand, turning up the edge of the glove and baring the wrist and thumb. On the back of the hand, just below the encircling kid, Virginia saw a suggestion of short black hair; across the fleshy underpart of the thumb, ran a white line, seemingly the scar of a deep cut, long since healed.

The next moment the money was in the black bag, the glove was replaced and buttoned, and Miss Jerome, who had stared openly and forgetfully during the entire transaction, felt the sudden stab of a pair of black eyes, narrow lidded and resentful, looking straight into her own. It was so cutting a glance that she stepped back, flushing hotly; but she did not lower her eyes, and into them crept the surprise, contempt, and dawning understanding she was experiencing. For perhaps three seconds the look between the two held. Then the thin lips of the stranger parted in a smile, slight but ironical.

"Pardon me," the agreeable voice asked softly, "but we have met? At the Grand hotel, perhaps?"

The woman's manner was now perfect. It admitted the existence of this staring American and assumed that the stare was merely one of recognition, but it intended to be sure of it. Miss Jerome was taken aback.

"I saw you there last night," she admitted, returning the other's smile with an effort.

"And on days like these one does not stand on ceremony. A glance, and one has a fellow feeling; a word, and one has found a friend."

Virginia murmured a vague response. It was not so in this instance, however sound the philosophy might be in its general working out. Her one desire was to end the unexpected encounter and get away. But the stranger mellowed with each passing second.

"You are returning to the hotel now?" she continued, graciously. Her accent was almost perfect, but her foreign blood betrayed itself in the modulations of her low voice.

"No." The American spinster was beginning to recover her usual poise. "I am waiting here for some money and," she looked

"How long have I been here?"

"An hour. Perhaps a little longer."

"Thank you. Will you call a cab for me, please? I must get back to my hotel."

For reply the woman pressed her back on the sofa and adjusted a pillow under her head. Her manner was soothing, almost maternal.

"Listen," she said. "I have a message for you. Hear it quietly. It must be obeyed. But you have nothing to fear."

"What is it?" The American was struggling against an incipient panic that threatened to overwhelm her.

"You are to remain here three days."

"What!"

The woman nodded.

"Three days. You shall have everything you need—food, care, good service. After that you are free to go!"

Miss Jerome sat up dizzily, but with determination.

"Do you mean to say that I am a prisoner?" she demanded passionately. "That you will dare to keep me in this house against my wish?"

The woman nodded.

"In this room," she said simply. "But you have nothing to fear. My orders are to give you everything you wish in reason——"

Virginia stared at her.

"It is not believable," she said, slowly.

"All is possible in war."

"I am an American in Norway. America and Norway are not at war."

"No."

"Then why——"

"My orders—that is all I can say."

"And three days. Why am I kept three days?"

"In three days madame will be in another country and her work will be done."

Virginia's lips curled. "Madame!" she quoted, ironically.

The face of her companion changed and hardened. Lines appeared on its smooth surface.

"Madame," she repeated, significantly. "See that you do not forget it is madame!"

"I am not apt to forget—the lady!" Virginia stared dizzily at the floor. She felt sick and faint, but, strangely, no longer afraid. Instead of her fear, a slow, cold anger grew in her, side by side with her incredulity.

"Suppose I refuse to remain?" she demanded at last.

The woman smiled. It was a good humored, tolerant smile.

"Be wise," she said. "If you make us trouble, you will be——" She hesitated.

"Killed?" breathed Miss Jerome. Anything seemed possible. The woman laughed.

"No, no. We are not murderers. But—less comfortable. Much less comfortable."

Virginia lay back and closed her eyes. She wished to think if she could, but her decision was already made. She must resign herself to the inevitable.

"I shall not make any trouble," she promised.

The woman uttered a soft guttural of content. "That is good," she said. "You are wise. Now, at once, you shall have your lunch."

Two years and six months later, at a few minutes before 8 o'clock, Miss Virginia Jerome, resplendent in her most gorgeous evening gown, entered the drawing room of a New York friend. Almost simultaneously she found herself bowing in response to her hostess' presentation of the man who was to take her in to dinner. He was a slight, rather elegant looking man, obviously a foreigner, with shining black hair and narrow, brilliant black eyes. She had not even caught his name, but his voice when he spoke was vaguely familiar, and as he glanced down at her during their little journey to the dining room, there seemed something familiar, too, in the narrowed look of his brilliant eyes and in the smile of his wide, thin lipped mouth.

Their talk at first was purely conventional, and therefore uninteresting. But as she ate her last oyster she suddenly glanced up and saw him exchange a smile with a girl across the table—a singularly intimate and tender smile that wonderfully softened his haughty face. The expression in the girl's eyes gave Virginia her clew. It was a misty glance of utter adoration. Under it Miss Jerome impulsively caught her neighbor's arm. He started slightly and the black eyes turned on her a guarded and veiled glance which even in her excitement she noticed.

"Why, you're—you're Carl, aren't you?" she cried.

The black eyes still wore their veil.

"Yes," he admitted, slowly.

"Why, I've just taken it in! You married my god-child, you know! I've loved Dolly ever since she was an hour old! But I have been in France for two years, doing Red Cross work. I longed to come home when you and Dolly were married last spring, but I couldn't get away up till now. Dolly met me at the ship, but you were out of town. You two are really the dear ones I came home to see! I wanted to look you over," she added smilingly.

He returned the smile, and now there was something very charming and engaging in the look he gave her.

"I hope you will like me," he said. "Please do. Dolly will divorce me, I think, if you do not," he jested.

"Why, of course I shall like you," she said; but she finished the sentence on a note less certain than the one on which she had begun it. Something arose in her, alert, watchful, and reminiscent.

"Dolly adores you," he was saying. "She has talked about you steadily ever since I met her. You seemed to have made her childhood a kind of fairyland."

"I merely took her to all the plays, and circuses, and wild west shows. It's easy to make a child happy. She's hardly more than a child yet, for that matter."

Virginia spoke absently. What was this perplexing memory that was torturing her?

"She is very happy now," he said, quietly.

"You have made her very happy," Virginia conceded. "I am glad."

She was, indeed, intensely relieved. She had not liked the idea of her godchild's foreign marriage with a man twelve years older than his bride, and at a time, too, when the relations of their two countries were strained almost to the breaking point. But they had been married seven, no, eight months, and the golden circle of the honeymoon still hung in their sky. Virginia wished she knew more of this man. He had money, she remembered, and his work in America had to do with foreign banking interests.

She had time for these reflections, for Dolly's husband was talking to the woman on his right, and the man between Virginia and the hostess was pouring into Miss Jerome's ear a peaceful monologue that called for almost no response. A new course of the dinner was served, and she turned to select a fork from the shining array beside her plate. As she glanced down she observed a hand on the table cloth, absently playing with a bit of bread while its owner chatted to his neighbor. Across the thumb ran a clear, white scar.

Transfixed and motionless, she stared at it for perhaps half a dozen seconds. Suddenly it moved, and, drawn by some strong force, her eyes rose and met the glance of the narrow lidded and now recognizable black eyes of her godchild's husband. The look the man and woman exchanged was an intensified repetition of the look they had exchanged in the Christiania bank two years and six months before.

The whole situation was clear; the only thing that was not yet clear was how she was to handle it. She knew what this man was, and she believed she now understood the meaning of his continued presence in America. He was a thing to be reckoned with, for he was a strong force and a ruthless one.

On the other hand, what could he do? His nationality was no secret. There was tacit recognition of it tonight in every discreet remark dropped by the guests around her. She had reason to know him capable of anything, but she had great faith in the ability of her own countrymen, in the power of her government, to handle these spies who swarmed in America's great cities. Her reflections remained impersonal. She had no desire to pay off her personal score; indeed, she had confided to none but her closest friends her experience in Christiania. That experience, however, seemed to make it obligatory to give a hint to some one that a careful eye should be kept on one of tonight's dinner guests. That was her duty. Or was it? For there was Dolly! There, most certainly, was Dolly, informally addressing her across the table at this very moment.

"Jerrydear," she called.

Miss Jerome nodded at her. The use of the old pet name carried her back to Dolly's baby days, when it had been bestowed.

"I've just been telling Mr. Knowlton about the spy you met in Norway," added Dolly, "and about your being a prisoner in a Christiania house for three days." Her voice took on a note of childish discontent. "I don't think he believes me," she ended.

"Yes, it is true," she said quietly.

"Have you ever seen the fellow since, Miss Jerome?" he asked.

Virginia smiled again.

"I haven't had a glimpse of him from that day to this," she replied, deliberately.

"Jove, I should think you'd be glad of that!" muttered the neighbor at her left.

She came to a decision.

"Suppose I did?" she said, addressing Knowlton across the table. "Suppose I recognized him over here some day? What do you think would be my duty?"

"Why, to run him in," suggested Knowlton, casually. He was an easy-going man, who solved questions without mental strain.

"What for?" asked Miss Jerome. She was conscious of the rigid attention of the figure at her right. "For what happened in Norway?"

"Why, no; I suppose you couldn't do that." Knowlton was getting beyond his depth. "What do you say, judge?" he added, gladly tossing the conversational ball to a safer player.

Dolly's father showed no great interest in the ball, but he answered with his characteristic drawl.

"I suppose it would be your duty to notify our secret service people," he said, "so they could keep an eye on the man." He seemed to feel that a lighter touch was needed. "A gentleman who deprives a community of Miss Jerome for three days at a time isn't a safe person to have around, anyway!"

Miss Jerome acknowledged the tribute in a few frivolous words.

"I'd put him in a dungeon in chains," remarked Dolly, vindictively, "for treating my Jerrydear as he did. The idea!"

"Speaking of spies reminds me——" One of the other guests had begun a story. Virginia turned to the husband of her godchild. He smiled at her easily and without overdoing it. She experienced a sudden and quite unexpected admiration for him.

"No woman can keep a secret," she said, lightly. "I told my Christiania adventure to three of my friends in the strictest confidence. Now all New York knows it!"

He inclined his head, slowly and thoughtfully.

"My august father-in-law has given you some advice," he murmured. "Shall you take it?"

She hesitated, glancing across at Dolly.

"I don't know," she replied, thoughtfully. "There is something else I would rather do."

He smiled at her again. Any observer would have been sure he was finding this New York spinster charming.

"Yes?" he asked. "And what is that?"

"I would rather say to him, 'The jig is up. Go home. If you do, I will be silent.'"

He slowly repeated her words, as if trying their flavor on his lips. "'The jig is up.' That sounds cryptic. Would he understand?"

"Yes. He would surely understand that I couldn't let him remain here and work for his government against mine, wouldn't he?"

Her neighbor did not reply. He seemed to be turning her words over in his mind.

"For of course if he did not go I should have to give my warning; and then he wouldn't be allowed to accomplish anything anyway," she added, with studied moderation.

To this he agreed, with an effect of regret. His unwilling mind was taking in the truth.

"That, I suppose, is true," he murmured, courteously.

"If he would be reasonable enough to sail within a week——" she began.

"He may. The Frederick the Eighth leaves next Thursday, with many foreigners on board. By the way, I myself am sailing that day," he added conversationally, as if changing the subject. Their eyes met; then his black ones fell on his wife's happy face and softened oddly. "But please do not speak of it to Dolly this evening," he added. "You see—she does not yet know that we are going!"

RUTH of the U.S.A.

SYNOPSIS.

Ruth Alden, a stenographer, wants to go to France, but her mother and sisters are dependent on her, so she cannot. She is much interested in the arrival in Chicago of Gerry Hull, a famous young aviator, and happens to see him as his motor is halted in the crowd. She asks him what she ought to do and he tells her she may be trusted to find that out. Later she buys a box of pencils from a beggar and on opening it finds money and a passport. She decides to take advantage of the opportunity and go to France. The passport belongs to one Cynthia Gail, and Ruth learns that she has been killed in an accident. She takes possession of Cynthia's room at a fashionable hotel and goes to a reception with Hubert Lennon, who easily accepts her as Miss Gail. Here she meets Gerry Hull again. He rails at America for not having been in the war long before. Ruth leaves for France on the same ship with Lennon, Gerry, and Lady Agnes Ertyle. The boat is torpedoed. Ruth is terrified. Gerry Hull tries to reassure her. Later Ruth thinks he has been washed into the ocean and tries to save him. She sees his face above her and knows he is safe. An American destroyer comes to their aid. Ruth manages to convince the officials that her passport is genuine. Hubert Lennon questions her about things that happened when Cynthia Gail was abroad before, and she thinks he is testing her. Ruth takes up the work assigned to her in Paris. One day in the church of Notre Dame a man gives her a message from the German government. She asks Gerry to have inquiries made about him. The man—Trevenac—is arrested. While Ruth is at Mirevaux with Mrs. Mayhew to see to some restoration work a great battle begins and the women drive to Ham and assist refugees. Gerry, after a thrilling battle in the air, captures a German plane and pilot. His machine is wrecked and he meets Ruth who tells him how brave she thinks the English officers are that she has met. And he contrasts her, mentally, with Agnes Ertyle. When Ruth returns to Paris her roommate tells her Lieut. Byrne (Cynthia's fiancé) has been to see her, and that her brother is dangerously ill. Ruth goes to him. Returning from the hospital she meets Lieut. Byrne. For a while he believes she is Cynthia, but later she tells him the truth. He is dazed and shocked, and is taking her to the authorities when a man strikes him down with a bludgeon. A German warns her to get away—to go to Switzerland. She tries to obtain permission, but is refused. Gerry comes to see her and she tells him the truth about herself—that she is not Cynthia, but Ruth Alden. Ruth manages to get to Switzerland, and she reads that Gerry has been shot down. A German spy who is also a guest at the hotel questions her about her affairs. He pretends he is taking her to headquarters for orders, but on the train Ruth learns he has found her out. In order to escape from him, she manages to overturn the motor they are riding in toward his estate at Lauengratz. Von Forstner and the chauffeur are killed in the accident. Ruth is escorted to the manor house, where she manages to get hold of important papers from Von Forstner's portfolio and escapes.

SEVENTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

BOUND FOR THE RHINE.

RUTH sank down upon the ground in a warm, sunny spot where the trees were more scant than they had been below. They were dense enough, however, to shield her from sight of any one in the valley, while they permitted a view down the mountain side and across the valley. Off to the west she could see a stretch of railroad; nearer she got a glimpse of the road; now she saw horsemen and several slower specks, which must be men on foot. Oberst-Lieut. von Fallenbosch had arrived, Ruth believed, and Adler had started the pursuit after her. But as she thought of the maze of pathways through the forest she believed that she was safe for a while—unless Adler had dogs to track her.

But she could not make herself safer by further aimless flight. Here seemed to be as secure a spot as she might find for the examination of the documents which she had procured; here was the place to plan. She laid out upon a rock the pages of Von Forstner's report, and, placing the stencils, she studied them in series of three, as she had seen Adler do. These pages—those which Adler had read, together with these which she had kept concealed—told a plain, certain story. The Germans at the present moment were concerning themselves with the minutest details of events before the Reims-Soissons line of the allies; other sectors, in comparison, were disregarded; before Reims and Soissons the enemy matured their great attack!

Ruth, having read, gathered together the pages and sat in the sun gazing away over the Rhine to the west. The feeling of fate—the touch of destiny—which had exalted and transformed her upon that cold January morning in Chicago quickened her again. Something outside herself, and beyond herself, originally had sent her into this tremendous adventure, throughout which she had followed instinct—chance—fate—whatever you called it—rather than any conscious scheme. At the outset she had responded simply to impulse to serve; to get into German—how, she did not know; to do there—what, she had not known. At different times she had formed plans, of course, many plans; but as she thought back upon them now they seemed to her to have contemplated only details, as though she had recognized her incapacity, by conscious plan, to attain their consummation.

For she realized that this was consummation. This which she already had gained, and gained through acts and chances which she could not have foreseen, was all—indeed, more than all—that she could have hoped to obtain through the vague, delayed ordeals which her fancy had formed for her. She had nothing more to attempt here in the enemy's land than escape and return to the allied lines; she had no right, indeed, to attempt more; for anything additional which she could gain would be of such slight value, in comparison with what she now had, that it could not justify her in heaping hazard upon the risks which she must run in returning to the allied armies with the knowledge she possessed.

There was Gerry Hull, of course. He was in this land of the enemy somewhere—alive or dead. When she was entering Germany she had thought of herself as coming, somehow, to find and to aid him. But what she had gained meant that now she must abandon him.

She gazed toward the railroad and to the white streak of the road to Lauengratz, upon which, after a few minutes, a motor again passed; more horsemen appeared and more specks of walking men. But through the woods about her and below was silence; the axmen, whom she had heard before, began to fell other trees; but the slow steadiness of the sound itself brought Ruth reassurance. Whatever search was being made below had not yet reached or disturbed the woodsmen near her. Yet she arose and crept a few hundred yards further up the mountainside, and under heavier cover, before she dropped to the ground again.

She found herself more relaxed as the rowels of peril, which had goaded her mercilessly, ceased to incite fresh strength for further flight. All her nerves and senses remained alert; but her body was exhausted and sore. She was hungry, too; and though nothing was further from her thought than sleep, nevertheless she suffered the result not only of the strains of the morning, but also of her sleeplessness during the night. She was cold, having changed from her suit to a linen street dress which had been Cynthia Gail's, and she was without hat; so she sought the sun once more and sat back to a tree and rested.

If recaptured—she thought of herself, you see, as having been captured by Von Forstner—she recognized that almost surely she would be shot. Therefore her recapture with Von Forstner's reports upon her could not make her fate worse; and in any case she determined to preserve them as proof to the French—if she ever regained access to the French—that the information which she bore was authentic. She did up the papers and the stencils together and secreted them under her clothing.

She tried to imagine what Adler and Oberst-Lieutenant von Fallenbosch—who undoubtedly was now saying to Adler a good deal more than the secretary had dreaded—would expect her to do so that she could choose the opposite course. The alternatives, obviously, were effort to reach the Swiss frontier and in some way elude the border guards or to make for the Alsace front, where the French and the Americans were fighting.

This second allured her powerfully; but, to attempt it, meant leaving this friendly cover of the Black forest—which would hide her almost to the Swiss frontier—and crossing west to the Rhine and across to the Rhine canal, and almost the whole way across Alsace to the Vosges mountains, where the opposing trenches twisted. She knew that behind the German fighting front she would encounter a military zone of many miles, much more difficult to penetrate than the civilian zone bounding the soldier sentineled barriers at the Swiss frontier. But, just beyond that zone in Alsace lay American battalions; above it would be flying American battleplanes.

Ruth closed her eyes and seemed to see them; one was fighting as she had seen Gerry Hull fight that morning near Mirevaux. It was he and he was being shot down!

She started up, blinking in the sunlight. He had been shot down again, in truth. This was Germany here about her; and he was in Germany; the enemy had him—von Forstner's boasting voice was saying it—dead or a prisoner. She shuddered and closed her eyes to see, again, Gerry Hull's face. She seemed to be looking up him; he was in blue-gray—his French uniform. Palms and roses were behind him. They were in Mrs. Corliss' conservatory together, their first time alone.

"You're not like any one else here," he was saying to her. "That's why I needed to see you again. . . . What is it, Cynthia Gail?" A queer, warm little thrill went through her; he was not saying her own name; but it was her name as he knew it and with a strange consideration in his voice. She seemed to be still looking up at him, but his arms were about her now; he was carrying her. They were upon the Ribot and she was telling him that she would have gone into the sea to get any one—any one at all. Now, "Ruth—Ruth Alden!" he was saying. Her own name; and he liked to repeat it. "They shan't!" he was holding her so fiercely. "They sha'n't!" Now he kissed her hand. Her fingers of her other hand closed gently over the hand he had kissed; so, in the sunlight at the base of a tree high upon the mountainside above Lauengratz in the Black forest of Baden, at last she fell asleep.

Not soundly or for extended periods; a score of times she stirred and started up at sounds made by the breeze or at the passage of some small forest animal. Once a human footfall aroused her; and she was amazed to learn how delicate her hearing had been made by alarm when she discovered how distant the man was. He bore an ax; and evidently he was a Russian or perhaps a French captive; he passed upon a path far below without even looking up to where she hid in the trees. Nevertheless Ruth fled further about the mountain after that before she dared rest again.

At nightfall she was awake and during the first hours of blackness she forced her way on in spite of the dismaying difficulties and dangers of wood travel in the dark. She fell repeatedly, even when she ventured upon a path, or she bruised herself upon boughs and stumbled into thickets. But she did not give up until the conviction came to her that she was hopelessly lost.

At best, she had been proceeding but blunderingly, attempting no particular course; merely endeavoring to keep to a definite direction. But now she did not know whether she had worked west of Lauengratz or had circled it to the east or south. She was cold, too; and hungry and quite exhausted. Twice she had crossed tiny brooks—or else the same brook twice—and she had cupped her hands to drink; thus, with nothing more than the cold mountain water to restore her, she lay down at last in a little hollow and slept.

The morning light gave her view over strange valleys with all the hills and mountain tops in new configuration. She stood up, stiff, and bruised, and weak; taking her direction from the sun, she started west, encountering cleared ground soon and a well traveled road, which she dared not cross in the daylight. So she followed it north until a meeting road, with its cleared ground, halted her. At first she determined to wait until dark; but after a few hours of frightened waiting she risked the crossing in daylight and fled into the further woods unseen. Again that afternoon she came into the open to cross a north and south road. Early in the evening she crossed a railroad, which she believed to be the road from Freiburg to Carlsruhe.

She had seen many men, women, and children that day, as upon the previous day, passing on the roads, or busy about houses, or working in fields, or in the woodlands. Most of the people were Germans; but many, undoubtedly, were military prisoners or deported civilians. She had avoided all alike, not daring to approach any house or any person, though now she had been forty-eight hours without food except for the "stimulant" and the accompanying biscuit which Adler had sent her.

That night, however, she found the shelter of a shed where was straw and at least a little more warmth than under the trees. Refuge there involved more risk, she knew; but she had reached almost the end of her strength; and, lying in the straw and covering herself with it, she slept dreamlessly at first, and then to reassuring, pleasant dreams. She was in a château—one of those white-gray, beautiful, undamaged buildings which she had seen far behind the battle lines in France; she was lying in a beautiful, soft bed, much like that which had been hers at Mrs. Mayhew's apartment upon the Avenue Kleber. Then somehow that all shifted to a great hospital ward, like that in which she had visited Charles Gail; but she was in the same beautiful bed and an attendant—a man—had come to take her pulse.

She stirred, it had become so real; she could feel gentle, but firm, and very real fingers upon her wrist. Now a man's voice spoke, in French and soothingly. "It is well, mademoiselle, I do not mean harm to you. I am only Antoine Fayal, a Frenchman from Amagne in the department of Ardennes, mademoiselle. I——"

Opening her eyes, Ruth saw a thin, hollow cheeked, dark haired man of middle age in the rags of blouse and trousers which had been, once, a French peasant's attire. He quickly withdrew his hand, which had been upon Ruth's wrist; and his bloodless lips smiled respectfully and reassuringly.

"I am French, mademoiselle," he begged in a whisper. "Believe me! One of the deported; a prisoner. My duty here, a woodsman! Happening by here, mademoiselle, I discovered you; but I alone! No one else. You will pardon; but you were so white; you barely breathed. I did not believe you dead, mademoiselle; but faint, perhaps. So I sought to ascertain!"

"I thank you!" Ruth whispered back, feeling for her papers as recollection turned to her. "Where are we?"

"This is part of the estate of Graf von Weddingen, mademoiselle. We are very close to the Rhine. You are——" he coughed and altered his question before completing it. "It may be in my power to aid you, mademoiselle?"

"I am an American," Ruth said.

"Yes, mademoiselle."

"I have been trying to reach Alsace and the French and American lines."

"You have done well so far, mademoiselle," Fayal said respectfully.

"How do you know?"

"I know that at noon yesterday, mademoiselle, you were twenty kilometers away. The whole countryside has been warned to find you; but you have come these twenty kilometers in spite of them."

He coughed and checked himself, a little guiltily, as she startled. "That is, mademoiselle, if you are that American lady who had accompanied Hauptmann von Forstner."

"I am that one," Ruth admitted.

"Then, mademoiselle, come immediately with me! No moment is to be lost!"

He went to the door of the shed and gazed cautiously about. Ruth arose and began brushing the straw from herself; sleep had restored her nerves, but not her strength, she found. She swayed when she stepped. She was completely at the mercy of this man, as she must have been in the power of whoever found her. But she did not distrust Fayal. His emaciation, his cough, and, more than those, his manner—the manner of a man who had been suffering indignities without letting himself become servile; and together with that, his concern and respect for a woman—seemed to Ruth beyond counterfeit.

"You require food, of course, mademoiselle!" Fayal exclaimed in dismay. "And I have none!"

"I can follow you," Ruth assured.

"Then now, mademoiselle!"

He stepped from the shed, and, motioning to her to imitate him, he slipped into the trees to the right. Evidently he considered her danger great; the peril to him, if caught aiding one who was attempting escape, must be as positive as her own; but the Frenchman was disregardful of that. He gained a gulley, and, returning, aided her in descending. Some one approached. "Lie flat!" Fayal whispered. She obeyed; and, while she lay, she heard German voices shouting and the sounds of search.

When they had moved far away, Fayal led her on to a dugout entrance, concealed by brush and with last year's leaves scattered before it.

"Keep well back in there, mademoiselle; until I come again for you!"

She went into a low and dark but fairly dry cavern under the hillside. She heard Fayal tossing about leaves to hide the entrance as before. Soon he was gone.

Many times during the day Ruth heard people passing through the woods. Once she was sure that a group of men were engaged in a search; but they failed to find the cavern. Only late in the afternoon some one, who stepped quickly and lightly—a child or a slight, active woman—ran close past the brush before the entrance, and, without halting, tossed a bundle into the bush.

Ruth had been obeying Fayal's injunction to stay well back in the cavern; now, venturing to the bush, she found a paper package, within which was a chunk of blackish, hard bread and two boiled turnips. She thought, as she saw this food, that it had been Fayal's perhaps; at least, it had been the ration of some prisoner or deported captive as ill fed, probably, as he. But she now was ravenous; this had been given her, however little it could have been spared by the donor. She ate it all and was stronger.

by Edwin Balmer

Fayal did not return that day; but during the night he or some one else visited the cavern. For she found when morning came again that some one had left food.

At night Fayal returned, and now, when he guided her out of the woods across field and farms, she realized fully how essential were the precautions which he had enjoined. He guided her half the night, and at last brought her to another concealment, where another French refugee took her in charge.

She had become a "passenger," she found, upon one of the "underground railways" in operation to conduct escaped prisoners across the frontiers; Fayal, having brought her safely over his section, said his adieu.

"The next German attack is to come upon the French on the front between Reims and Soissons, remember, Fayal," Ruth enjoined upon the man when parting with him. "If I fail to get through, you must try to send the word."

"Yes, mademoiselle. But you must not fail. Good fortune, mademoiselle, adieu!"

"Good fortune, Fayal; a thousand thanks again; and—adieu!"

Her new conductor led her on a few more miles that night; she laid up during the day; at night proceeded under a new guide.

So she passed on from hiding-place to hiding place, sometimes lying for days at a time—terrible, torturing delays, during which she dreamed of the Germans advancing over all that Reims-Soissons front and sweeping over the French armies as they had overwhelmed the British in Picardy. And she—she, if she could only go on, could prevent them! Many times during the endless hours she lay alone waiting for her guide who did not appear, she crept out from her concealment, determined to force on; but always she learned the impossibility of proceeding alone; always she managed to make her way back to her hiding place, humbled.

She was following her sixth guide after Fayal, and it was upon the eleventh evening after her escape from Lauengratz, when suddenly she heard a rough challenge; German soldiers appeared across the path; others leaped up from the right and left; yet others were behind.

Her guide instantly recognized that he had led her into a trap; and he fought, wildly and hopelessly, to try to save her. She fought, too. But they bayoneted him, and, upon their bayonets, they bore him back upon her. A soldier seized her; overpowered her, brutally, and she struggled no longer with hope to fight free, but only to destroy the papers which she still carried. So they pinioned her arms; they half stripped her in searching her; they took her papers, and, leaving her guide dead upon the ground, they hurried her with them to their commandant.

This officer instantly suspected her identity. For, in spite of her eleven nights of flight, she was not yet seventy miles from Lauengratz. Disposition of her evidently had been predetermined, pending her recapture; for the officer, after examining her again, dispatched her to a railroad train, under guard. They put her in manacles, and, boarding a northbound train, they took her to a town the name of which she could not learn. From the station they marched her to what appeared to be an old castle, where they at once confined her, alone, in a stone walled cell.

It possessed a solitary, narrow slit of a window, high up under the ceiling; it boasted, for furniture, a cot, a chair, and bowls. The Germans relieved her of the manacles when they led her into this cell. Not long after she was left alone, light streaked in through the slit of a window; a hand, opening a panel in her door, thrust her in a dipper of soup and a chunk of bread.

Ruth received the food, consumed it, and sank down upon her pallet. Her great venture thus had come to an end; her life was forfeit; and by all that she had dared and done, she had accomplished—nothing.

No; more than nothing. She had caused the arrest of De Travenac and those taken with him; she had aided at least a little in the frightful labors of the retreat from Mirevaux. She had saved the life of Gerry Hull!

She had never before permitted herself to think that she had saved Gerry; without her he would have been able to free himself from under his machine; he would have succeeded in getting away. But now she let herself believe.

This gave her part in what he had accomplished since then—part in the battles which he had fought over the advancing enemy lines. Yes; she had accomplished more than nothing. Yet how much less than she had dreamed! And all of her dream—or most of it—might actually have come true! She had possessed the German plan; indeed, she still possessed it—the knowledge of the front of the next assault and something of the detail of the enemy operations! She had committed it, verbally, to Fayal and to others of her guides; so it was possible that it might yet reach the allied lines. But she realized that, even though Fayal or one of the others sent the word through, it must completely lack authority; it must reach the French as merely a rumor—a trick of the enemy, perhaps; it could not be heeded.

She sat up with muscles all through her tugging taut. It seemed that with her frantic strength, with her bare hands she must rend those stones and escape, not to save herself, but to return to the allied lines and tell them what she knew. But the coldness of the stones, when she touched them, shocked her to realizations.

Tomorrow—or perhaps even today—the enemy might take her out and kill her. And while death—her individual, personal annihilation—had become a matter of amazingly small account, yet the recognition that with death must come withdrawal perhaps even from knowledge of how the battle was going upon that line where the fate of all the world was at stake, where Britons and French fought as she had seen them fight, and where, at last, America was arriving—that crushed her down to her pallet and with despair quite overwhelmed her.

So she set herself to thinking of Gerry. He was alive, perhaps; a prisoner, therefore, and to be returned some day when the war was over, to marry Lady Agnes, while she . . . Ruth did not shudder when she thought of herself dead.

Perhaps Gerry was dead; then she would be going at once to join him. And if they merely took her out and shot her today or tomorrow or some day soon, without doing anything more to her than that, she might find Gerry and rejoin him, much as she had been when he had known her and—yes—liked her. Without having suffered indignity, that was. These cold stones seemed at least to assure her of this. So she lay and thought of him while the slit of light crept slowly from left to right as the sun swung to the west and she listened for the step of those who would come to her cell.

"It's surely a girl they're to shoot, you say?"

"Or have shot, dear things."

"English?"

"O, no; one of yours this time."

"An American!"

"That's the word."

"Where is she?"

"They have her—or they had her—at a place this side of Mannheim; at the Schloss of Von Fallenbosch."

The American prisoner swore briefly and deeply. The English prisoner—a captain of 22, by name Lownes—nodded complete agreement. "Sweet-scented creature, Von Fallenbosch, certainly."

"How long's he had her?"

"Several days—perhaps as long as a fortnight."

"They gave her a trial?"

"O, undoubtedly—their sort of a trial."

"I mean, was she given chance to appeal to a neutral consul?"

"What good, Hull, do you fancy, would she find in an appeal?"

"That's all you could find out?"

"Except that she was caught somewhere down in Baden, after a good bit of a chase; she came in by Switzerland maybe a month ago."

Gerry Hull jerked and stiffened as he gazed away across the courtyard of the Offiziergefangenenlager of Villinstein toward the tennis courts where several score of his fellow prisoners were gathered applauding the players in a match game which was going on. The match was in doubles and was for the championship of the camp, between a pair of English officers and a Canadian and an Australian, representing the colonies.

It was a late May morning, warm and sunny and ideal for tennis; and with the excellent weather and the camp tennis title at stake, an unusually large and enthusiastic gallery of spectators—French, English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, South African, Australian, and American—stood upon the wooden steps which formed a sort of grandstand about the tennis court. Much of their enthusiasm was genuine, as the match was well played and bitterly fought; but if you knew the whole secret—as Gerry Hull did—some of the shouting and stamping was a bit spurious. For under the wooden steps, where they ran up against the wall of the camp recreation building and canteen, five officer prisoners—who originally had been in that stamping crowd—were digging a tunnel; and it was arranged that during the more audible of their activities the gallery above was to be continuously enthusiastic.

Gerry found a place upon this stand and faithfully joined in the enthusiasm while he watched the game, which continued to be hotly contested, and the while he thought of the work going on under the stand. That work, which was more than two weeks old, had engaged a good deal of his thought and no small part of his time, as he had been one of the diggers when opportunity offered, and he was one of those scheduled to use the tunnel first in attempt to escape.

Indeed, the particular enterprise of that tunnel had been schemed out with especial reference to him as a flight officer. It had proved no great trick for the officer prisoners, all coöperating, occasionally to get a few of their number outside of the prison inclosures; but to get them out of Germany—well, that had proved another matter. Too many, for whose freedom the camp had worked for weeks, had been shot when discovered in "the attempt to escape"; too many more, having been recaptured, had been committed to the hopelessness of the "solitary confinement jug" for punishment.

Accordingly, for several months prior to the arrival of Gerry Hull at Villinstein in April the camp—while wishing nobody any bad luck—had been praying for the arrival of a pilot; for, about two miles from Villinstein's outer wire was a German flying field for the training of aviators, and upon every fair day the black crossed wings of the German Gothas and Albatrosses soared over the camp. One day, in fact, one of them all but fell into the camp inclosure.

"Which was a mercy to us that it didn't," said Capt. Ignatius O'Malley of the Irish Fusileers when the circumstance was related to Gerry upon arrival, "for if it had we'd look like fools with a fine flying machine donated intact to us and we with no one to make away with it. Now, the next time——"

And Capt. O'Malley, who was the heart, if not the soul, of all schemes to escape, launched into the details of his newest and most highly perfected plan.

Gerry, accepting his essential rôle in that scheme, had been thinking of the escape solely in relation to himself and those of his fellow prisoners chosen to make the attempt with him, but recently another consideration had come. For word had reached the camp there in Hessen that the Germans had caught and imprisoned a girl and were to shoot her as a spy.

It had reached Gerry at first merely as a vague rumor picked up by some one upon a walk on parole outside the camp; it was not known, indeed, whether the spy was a man or a woman, and there had been no account of the spy's nationality. Then, little by little, information accumulated. The spy was a girl; she had come through Switzerland about a month before; rumors regarding the method of her imprisonment multiplied until within the camp indignation and anger grew. Now it was known that she was an American, and Gerry knew—yes, he knew, in his throbbing heart—who the girl was.

He gazed, not at the tennis courts now, but across them and beyond the courtyard and wire barriers off to the south, over the blue land in the direction of far-off Mannheim, near which, in the schloss of the sweet-scented Von Fallenbosch, the American girl lay; and as he gazed and thought his blood burned and beat and beat. So she had tried it—that little Ruth Alden, his Ruth Alden—had she? And he had let her go. Yes; by refraining from making damning report about her, he was responsible for the fact that she was passed into Switzerland, whence she had come into Germany in her mad hope to do her task. Why had he let her go?

Well, there was no use in accusing himself for that now; the only matter to think about was, supposing he could get free, might he do anything to help her? The camp, not knowing her at all, was planning it; perhaps chiefly because plans gave them something to think about, and the thought of a girl locked up at the schloss of Von Fallenbosch and to be shot gave them something to rage at. Anyway, the camp—which not in six months had succeeded in getting even one of their own number free—plotted the escape of ten together, all pledged to try to save that girl. Such was the Offizier-gefangenenlager of Villinstein.

"Aye, England! England! Aye, Canada! Aye, colonies!"

A set—the deciding set—had just gone to deuce, the colonies evening up after trailing, and the gallery was stamping and cheering. Gerry stamped and cheered, too, the while from below the stand the digging squad of the forenoon was being dragged up to report with the other prisoners at mess.

Fifteen minutes later England, bracing again, won out; and Gerry found himself beside O'Malley as they trooped to the mess hall.

"All went fine today; so Thursday night, bye, we set out to get her from them," O'Malley whispered.

"Can't we make it before?" Gerry asked.

O'Malley glanced at him keenly. "I heard ye was talking with Lownes; he told you the girl's one of yours. By any chance did you think you know her?"

"I know I know her," Gerry said. "I'll tell you about her tonight."

The Irishman, still watching, grasped Gerry's arm quickly. "We wait, bye, only for your moon. Or do you dream you can do better without?"

"No," Gerry admitted, rebuked.

"So pray, bye, for a dark night at first."

"The moon for mine."

"Yes, bye; the moon for thine."

So that night Gerry told those who were to escape with him of Ruth Alden; and during the week, while a new tournament went on, the work under the stand continued. Gerry himself worked in the tunnel again the next day; upon the following afternoon it was his turn to take a walk outside the prison. For upon certain days groups of officer prisoners were permitted to take a tramp in the neighborhood, accompanied by a couple of German officers.

Every prisoner was required to give his parole not to attempt to escape while out thus walking; but as the parole was for the period of the expedition only, and bound no one after return to camp, Gerry and the rest gave parole. There was nothing to prevent an officer using his eyes to get the lay of the ground about the camp, or his ears to pick up whatever fresh rumors might be afloat regarding the American girl in the Schloss von Fallenbosch. Thus, those who were to escape made mental maps of the neighborhood and learned that the American girl, although condemned, still lived. And Thursday evening came, overclouded, yet with a moon behind the clouds which shone bright and clear for minutes at a time, then, obscured, left all the land in blackness.

The digging parties of the last week had placed in the tunnel enough food from the officers' packages, which arrived regularly through Switzerland, to supply three days' rations for ten men; so that night the ten descended into the tunnel. They knew the peculiar German system of rewards, which gave a prize to a guard for catching prisoners in the act of escape, but which gave nothing for preventing an attempt; therefore they knew it was possible that the guards knew about the tunnel and had permitted them to enter it that night only to catch them at the other end.

The test would come when "taps" was sounded and the German officer of the day, making his rounds of the barracks, would find ten men missing roll call.

Gerry then was lying on his face in the tunnel and passing back dirt which those in front of him excavated. Only by counting the drumming of his heart could he estimate the minutes passing, but he knew that the delay in the tunnel was longer than O'Malley had planned.

"Taps! Taps!" came the word from Lownes, at the prison end of the burrow, who had heard the German bugle blow. From forward, where O'Malley was digging, dirt kept coming back, and still more dirt. For the diggers of that day had not dared to run the bore to the surface, nor, indeed, near enough to the surface so that a sentinel, treading above, would break through. At best, therefore, O'Malley and the Canadian engineer who were finishing the bore had a fair amount left to do.

"The alarm! The alarm!"

THE TEENIE WEENIES

FEED THE HUNGRY.

by Wm. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies were snowed in. The drifts about the shoe house were so deep that the only ones who ventured out were some of the children, who wanted to make a snow man, and the Policeman, who had to go out on his beat in all kinds of weather.

He put on his snow shoes and went to every house in the little settlement, finding the Lover family safe and warm, the Chinaman working away in his laundry, and the Doctor fussing happily about the hospital, where he spent most of his time now.

But when the Policeman came back, he burst excitedly into the Teenie Weenie library.

"General," he reported, "there are two sparrows out here in front of the house who are starving! The snow has covered the ground so they could get nothing to eat for days. They want food."

"Certainly—certainly," said the General. "No one shall ever be turned away hungry from our door, not matter how small it is! Cook, prepare some food for these birds."

"It'd better be hot," said the Cook. "Such cold weather folks need hot food. I'll hurry and steam up a thimble full of wheat."

By the time the wheat was ready, many of the Teenie Weenies had put on snow shoes and wraps and gone out to talk to the birds. But when the sparrows saw that steaming hot wheat, they forgot everything else, and gobbled it down before the Teenie Weenies had a chance to wink!

"Do you want more?" asked the Cook anxiously. O, please!" cried both birds. They ate three thimblefuls of wheat before they said "Thanks and good by," and flew away, and the next morning, to the despair of the Cook, they were back again, and brought six hungry friends with them!

"I'm terribly sorry," said the General. "But if we give you all steamed wheat, there will be none left for us. You fellows would eat as much a meal as would last us nearly a month! But—we will turn no one away who is hungry. Some of my men shall go out and see if food of some kind can't be found for you under the snow."

Paddy Pin and the Cow Boy volunteered for the service. They took shovels, pick axes, and a sled, and it was not long before they came back with a large piece of bread lashed tightly to the sled.

"We found it beside a garbage can, that's what we did," said Paddy. "An' we had an awful time to dig it out, and it's dry as a bone, so it is."

"Never mind," said the Cook, "I'll fix that." He heated five thimblefuls of water, in which he put a pinch of sugar, and a little butter, and poured that over the dry bread before he called the sparrows to their meal.

"Dee-licious!" cried the sparrows, and gobbled down every crumb to the delight of the Teenie Weenies, who felt that they had fed their guests and yet saved their own small store of wheat. Soon the snow melted enough so that the sparrows could get their own food, and the little people did not see them again.

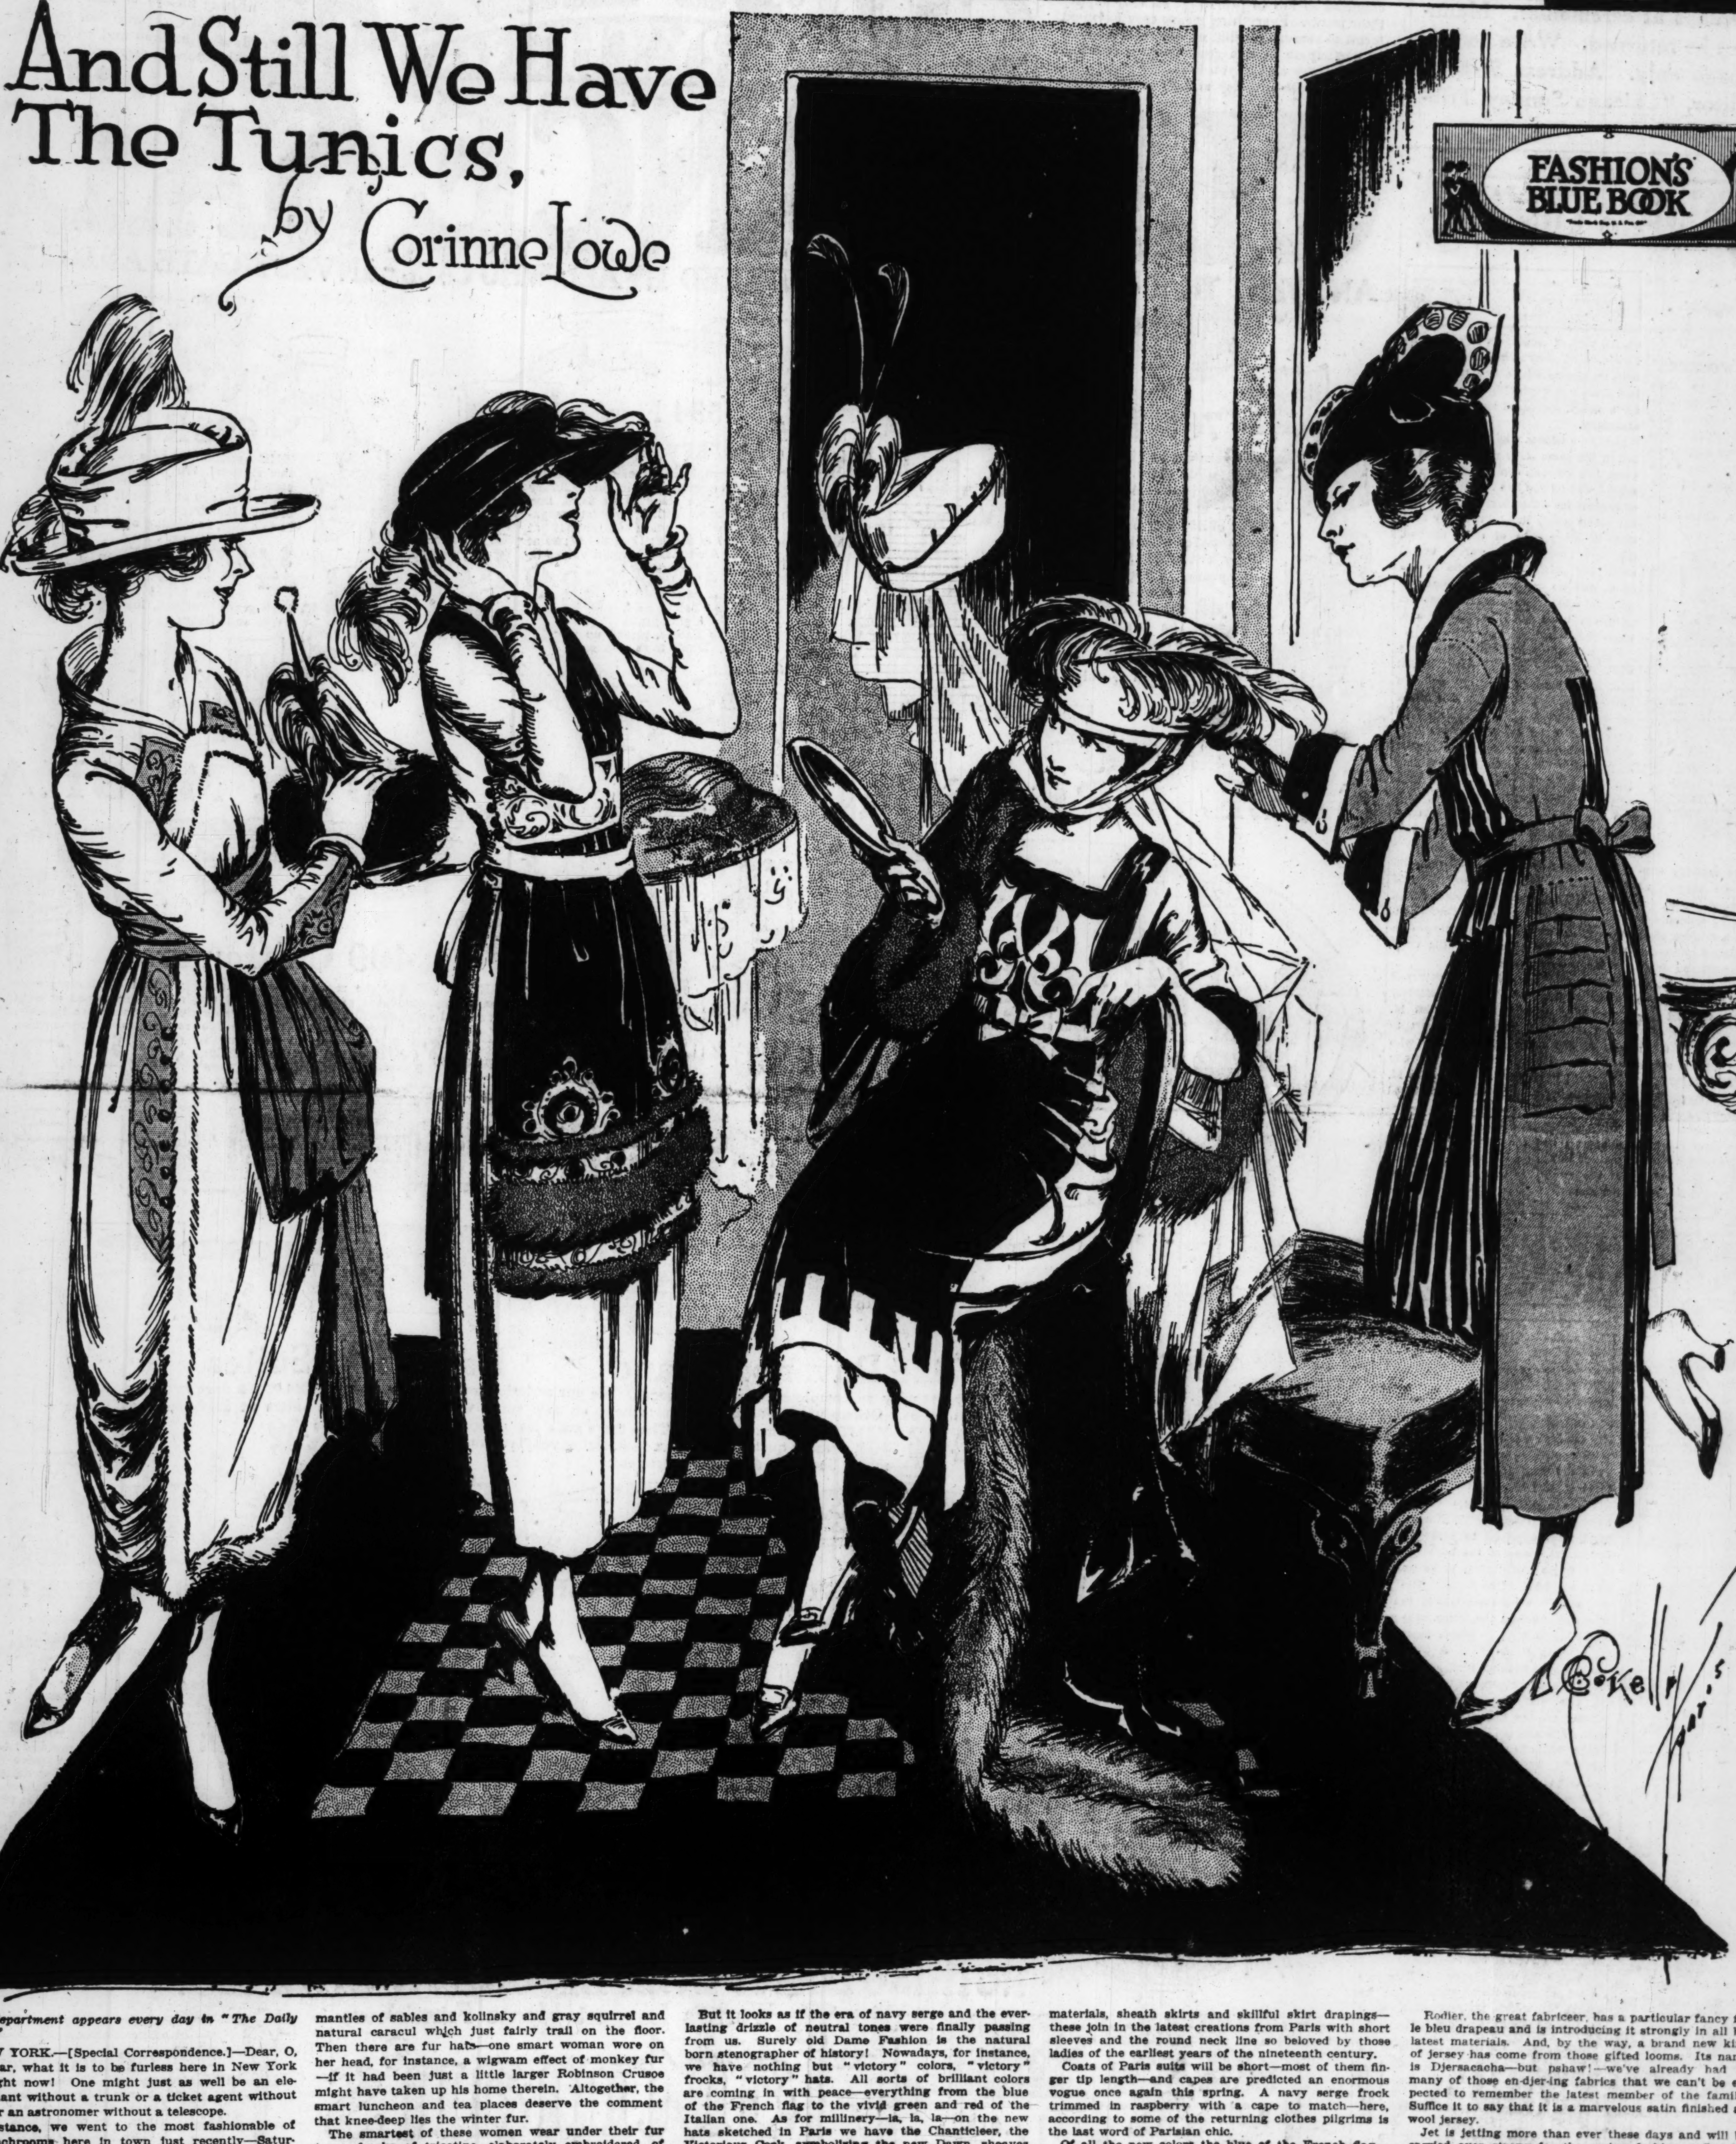
FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Dear, O, dear, what it is to be furless here in New York right now! One might just as well be an elephant without a trunk or a ticket agent without tickets, or an astronomer without a telescope.

For instance, we went to the most fashionable of hotel lunchrooms here in town just recently—Saturday! That's when one may see the main exhibits of fashion. Sometimes, of course, there are so many who come to see, there are few left to be seen. But this day was not one of them. The world and his family—of furs—was all there.

It really gives one an almost uncanny feeling—just as if one had been suddenly whisked back to the Cave Man age—to see these fur-laden beings come up to a modern restaurant table. Here are not just the pellets of pelt which we used to know, but great swathing mantles of sables and kolinsky and gray squirrel and natural caracul which just fairly trail on the floor. Then there are fur hats—one smart woman wore on her head, for instance, a wigwam effect of monkey fur—if it had been just a little larger Robinson Crusoe might have taken up his home therein. Altogether, the smart luncheon and tea places deserve the comment that knee-deep lies the winter fur.

The smartest of these women wear under their fur togas frocks of tricotine, elaborately embroidered, of duvetyn and velvet. And, by the way, what a shock to the woman who used to think of a serge frock as a simple little thing to price these roc's eggs nowadays. Here, even in midwinter, the saleswoman shows you a navy tricotine with nothing on it but some black silk embroidery and acts as if she could just hardly put up with anything so frugal. "Only seventy-five dollars, madame—of course, it was a hundred and fifty—but here is something really good—only one hundred and twenty-five."

But it looks as if the era of navy serge and the everlasting drizzle of neutral tones were finally passing from us. Surely old Dame Fashion is the natural born stenographer of history! Nowadays, for instance, we have nothing but "victory" colors, "victory" frocks, "victory" hats. All sorts of brilliant colors are coming in with peace—everything from the blue of the French flag to the vivid green and red of the Italian one. As for millinery—la, la, la—on the new hats sketched in Paris we have the Chanticleer, the Victorious Cock, symbolizing the new Dawn, sheaves of wheat symbolizing Plenty, and many and many a Directoire bonnet.

And, speaking of the Directoire, this seem to be the note emphasized in both frocks and millinery, according to some of our returning clothes pilgrims who have made flying trips to Paris since the coming of peace. To be sure, the waist line worn by Josephine is not present in this revived Directoire. Today we have the normal line, but there are sufficient other features to preserve the resemblance. Vivid colorings, marvelous materials, sheath skirts and skillful skirt drapings—these join in the latest creations from Paris with short sleeves and the round neck line so beloved by those ladies of the earliest years of the nineteenth century.

Coats of Paris suits will be short—most of them finger tip length—and capes are predicted an enormous vogue once again this spring. A navy serge frock trimmed in raspberry with a cape to match—here, according to some of the returning clothes pilgrims is the last word of Parisian chic.

Of all the new colors the blue of the French flag—bleu drapeau, as they call it over there—is deservedly the most insistent. Millinery is particularly apt to record this color prejudice and one of the smartest of the new hats from Lewis, the Paris milliner, is of this shade set off by an Alsatian bow of deeper blue. And, by the way, the Alsatian bow is just now beginning to take here on our shores. By spring every woman's daughter of us will probably be sitting under one of these vast bows borrowed from the pretty, deep-eyed daughters of Strasbourg.

Rodier, the great fabriceer, has a particular fancy for le bleu drapeau and is introducing it strongly in all his latest materials. And, by the way, a brand new kind of jersey has come from those gifted looms. Its name is Djersacacha—but pshaw!—we've already had so many of those en-djer-ing fabrics that we can't be expected to remember the latest member of the family. Suffice it to say that it is a marvelous satin finished all wool jersey.

Jet is jetting more than ever these days and will be carried over strong for the spring fashions. So also will ostrich—particularly the glycerined variety. One of the strongest whims of the season is for bead embroidery and often, too, the beads are sprinkled among silk or wool embroidery. These undoubtedly are part of the strong "victory" note. That is why we see gay bits of red and white crystal ornamenting the latest of Lanvin navy serges. Steel beads and nail heads are also entered enthusiastically in the accessory race and again we find the alliance of wool embroidery with these.

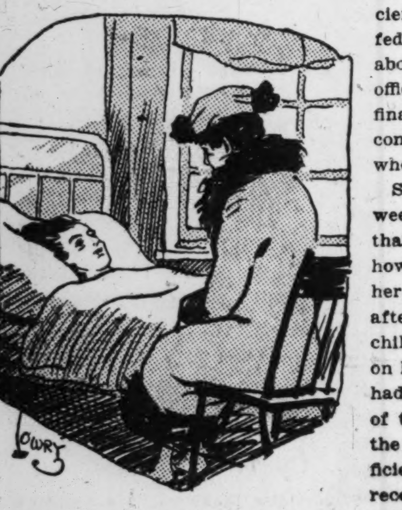
WAGES OF WOMEN WORKERS.

EMPLOYERS often have little sense of responsibility concerning the matter of salaries paid to women employés. The idea is generally prevalent among employers, and the women themselves are somewhat to blame for the misconception, that women work merely for their own support or for pin money, whereas the majority of women are actually supporting or aiding in the support of two or three other persons.



It is not quite fair that women employés should be paid on a lower scale than men, but this is almost universally true, even where women are doing work identical with men. But where women are carrying as great domestic responsibility and burden it is not only unfair but unjust.

As I said before, the women themselves are to blame to a great extent for this situation, as a false pride often leads them either to misrepresent or to hide their circumstances, and the fact that they have one or more dependents is kept not only from their associates but from their employers.

This injustice to women in regard to salaries is not intentional, I am sure, on the part of employers generally, as I have heard many stories of employers who, on learing that a woman employé had some one depending solely on her for support, increased her salary substantially.

Mrs. C., a widow, who has been working in the same office with a friend of mine, has a young son just starting to school, and as she has no other means of support for either herself or her son, her small salary has been barely sufficient to keep both of them clothed, fed, and housed. She rarely talked about her affairs to any one in the office, and no one suspected that her financial affairs were in a precarious condition until about a month ago, when she became ill.

She was away from the office for a week, when my friend, Miss M., decided that she would call on her and see how she was getting along. She found her seriously ill with no one to look after her but her 8 year old boy. The child had been manfully trying to wait on his mother and under her directions had been cooking the meals for both of them. The house was untidy, both the mother and child had been insufficiently nourished, and the mother had received no medical attention.

The next morning Miss M. reported the circumstances to her employer, and before the day was over a doctor had been assigned to the case, a nurse installed to care for the patient, and a woman hired to look after the child and do the housework.

When Mrs. C. recovered and returned to her work her employer immediately raised her salary and had Miss M. make an investigation and report to him of any other girl employés who had any one either solely or partially dependent upon them. When Miss M. turned in her report he was astonished to learn that out of nine girl employés only one had no one partially dependent upon her for support. He then decided to pay all his women employés at the same rate that he was paying the men.

Real Love Stories

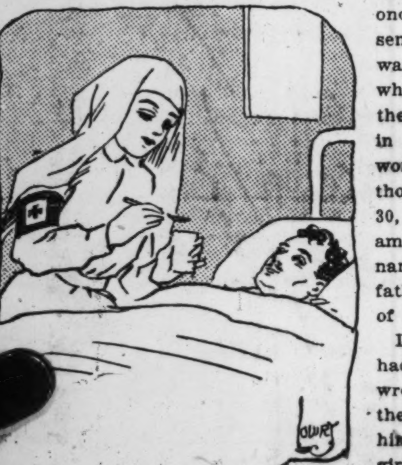
HAPPINESS LONG DELAYED.

MY Cousin John had almost reached 30, and he was arriving at the conclusion that a really big love between a man and a woman was a sort of myth. He had never fallen in love as he defined the term.

A widow with an unusually winsome little son had for several years been clutching desperately at various men whom she appraised as comfortable meal tickets, and because John really loved children and the son seemed devotedly attached to him he and the widow became friends and eventually engaged to be married. There was no real love between them. John liked the child, so the widow found him "easy," but only because he had despaired of ever meeting the one woman.



A few months before his contemplated marriage John met "the" girl. A deep mutual attachment sprung up between them, and if they had married theirs undoubtedly would have been one of the matches made in heaven. But the widow refused absolutely to release John. She threatened to bring suit and urged her son to play the part which would excite John's sympathy. So the marriage finally took place, and for twelve years John lived the kind of existence that men similarly situated experience.

The child, however, was a great comfort to him, and the older the boy grew the greater seemed to be his love and appreciation for his stepfather. His devotion was really touching. His mother died a month before we entered the war, and shortly afterward the boy, just 18, joined the army.

When the newspapers began discussing the necessity of procuring a label from overseas to paste on the Christmas boxes of the boys John at once wrote his stepson to be sure to send his label without fail. The boy was sick in a base hospital in France when he received the letter. He sent the label to his stepfather, describing in glowing terms what a wonderful woman was nursing him, adding that though she evidently must be around 30, she was the finest looking girl among all the nurses. He gave her name and address, suggesting that his father write her a note of appreciation of her unselfishness.

I talked with John two days after he had received this letter. He at once wrote the nurse, but perhaps not quite the kind of a note his boy had expected him to write. For the nurse is "the" girl he had loved so hopelessly through those twelve miserable years, and because she had never encouraged admiring men in all that time, but devoted her life to self-sacrificing work, it is probable that she, too, was trying in vain to stifle her love.

When the unit of a certain base hospital arrives in New York John will be there to welcome the girl, and it's easy to predict what the outcome will be.

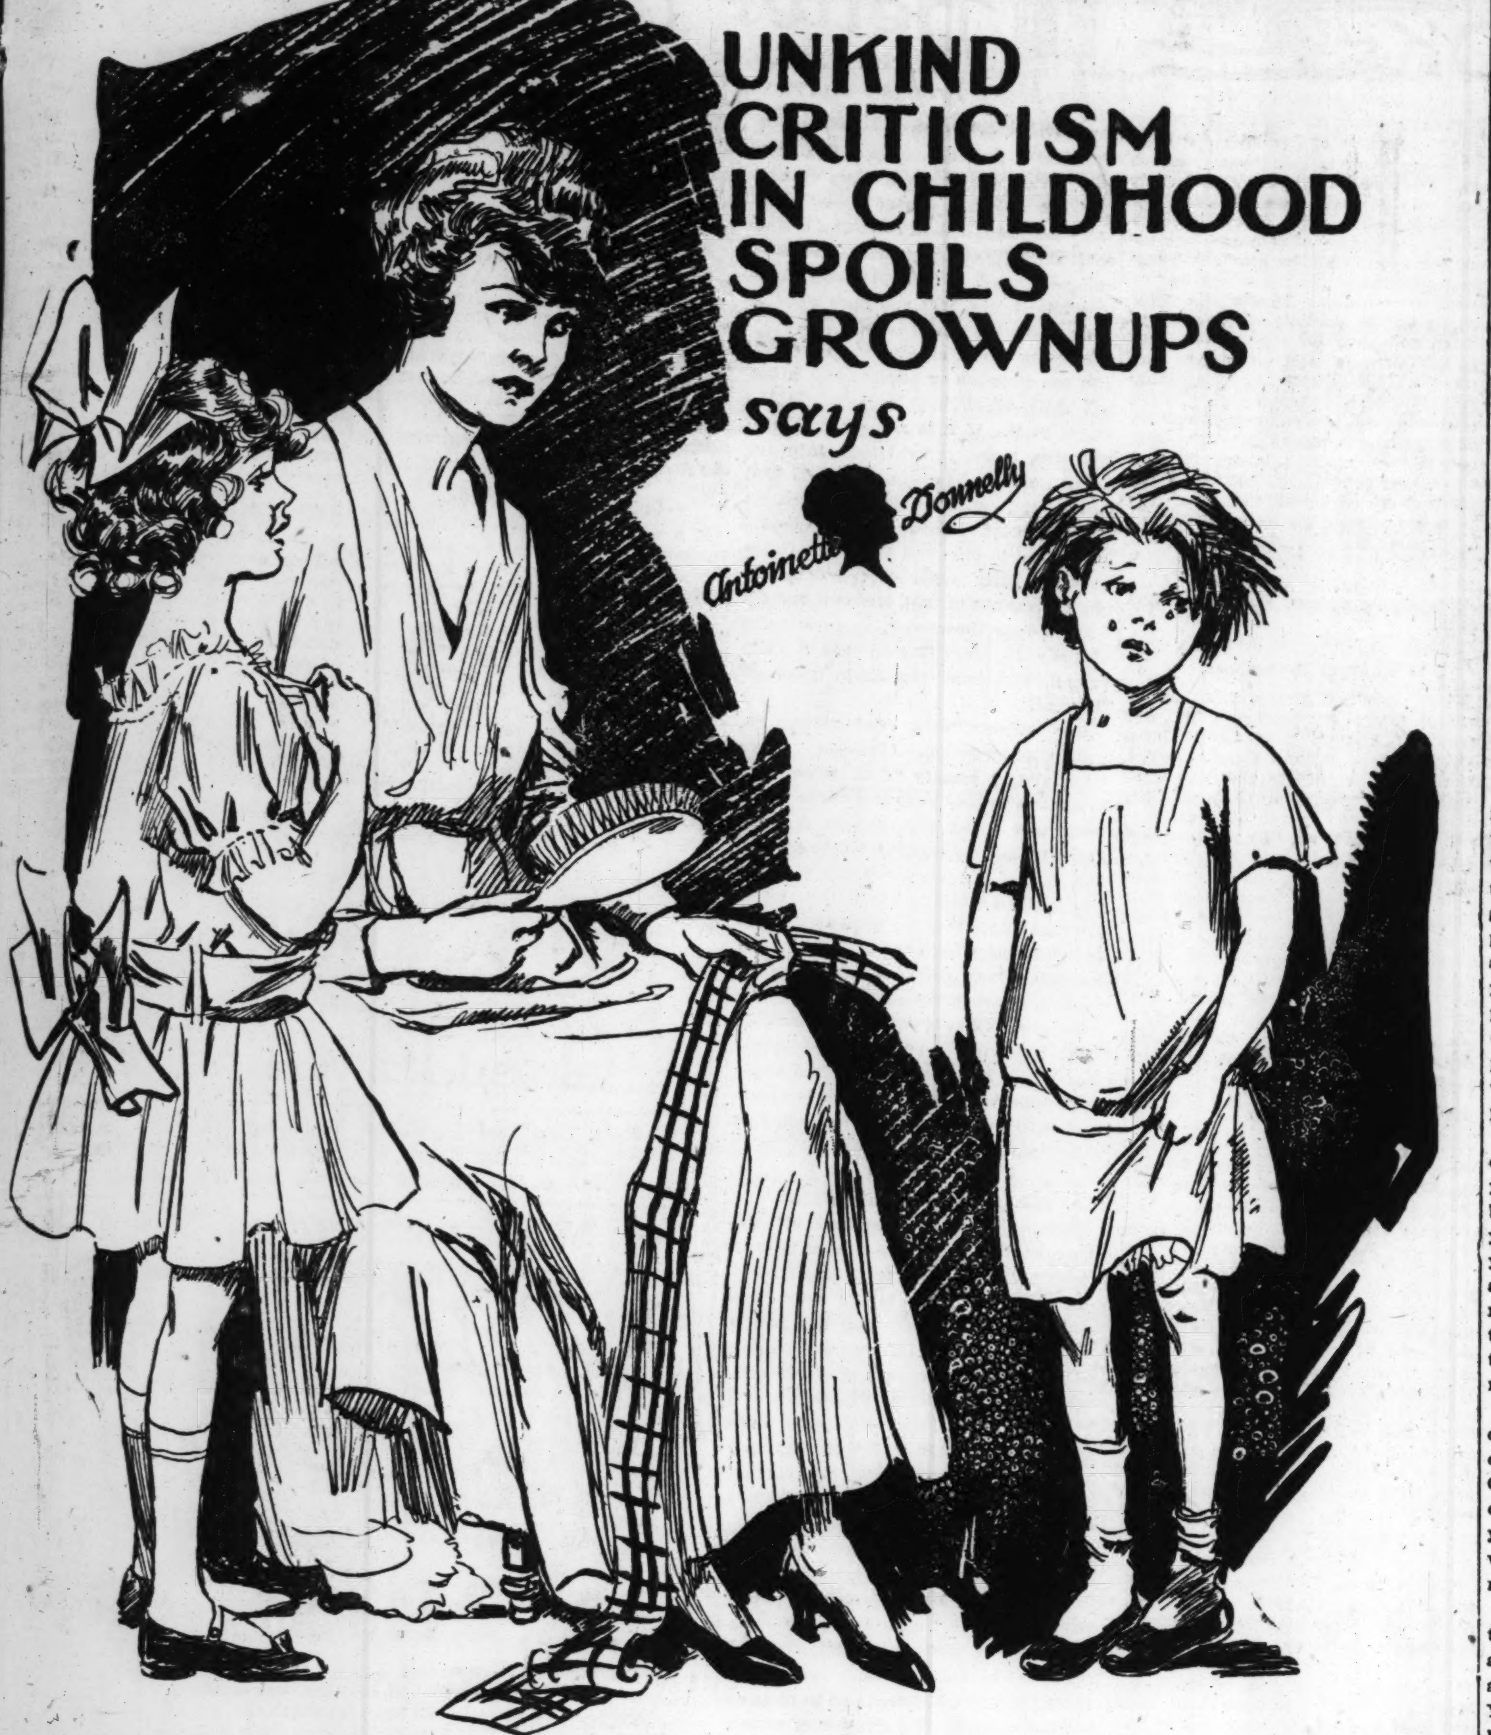
UNKIND CRITICISM IN CHILDHOOD SPOILS GROWNUPS

says Antoinette Donnelly



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

ONCE upon a time there lived a little girl who was extremely unhappy as a little girl. The sorrows of Cinderella were hers, not alone because she was poor but she thought every other little girl in the world was prettier than she. Or, in other words, she thought there was no other little girl in the world uglier than she.

She had no reason to believe otherwise, because she was told it nearly every day. The result was she believed it implicitly.

Somehow, she struggled on up through her teens, still fostering the belief that there wasn't much use in her trying to do anything for herself since she was so consummately ugly. And if she had tried, her hands and her feet would have got in the way just at the moment of a test, for she had been drilled so thoroughly in the belief that she was born to live and die awkward that she accepted that as her fate and there was no use trying to change it.

A shrinking timidity deprived the poor youngster of the normal fun of childhood; a word of teasing from the school children was but an additional indorsement to her sensitive soul of the opinion she had of herself. And on through the 'teens she missed out on the lovely romances of youth because she knew she was so ugly and awkward that no boy would like her anyway. And because she was so timid and backward and so ill at ease in their presence she was unpopular.

However, a fairy godmother fate intervened in the nick of time. She had brains in fairly good quantity. It so happened she had taken up a business course. She took a position in an office and maybe because she felt that work was all there was in life for her she worked sufficiently well to earn rapid promotion. Her employer's wife's attention was directed to her. She, in turn, had a rich sister living in the east who wanted a secretary. The girl went to her.

The woman proved to be the fairy godmother. She complimented the girl on her lovely skin and on her hair, which was a kindlier thing to do at that moment than to have added to her monthly stipend. The girl didn't know her skin was attractive, and she thought her hair an uninteresting drab. At the end of a year's time, with a faith in herself she never knew before, the girl had blossomed into another person.

She remained in that secretary capacity for three years and returned to her early home. One day she was rummaging through some old photographs, among which was one of herself as a little girl, and she was amazed to find a thoroughly cute looking youngster looking up out of a shabby paper frame and that she was that youngster.

"I wasn't such a homely youngster," she said. "But what a lot of misery I might have been spared if I had known it then, instead of now. No one will ever know what agony I used to suffer over being 'the ugliest child in the world.' And here's proof I was not."

Now, that story may sound like fiction to you, but it isn't; it's gospel truth. For the girl whose experience it was told it to me her own self.

Another girl told me of the surprise she felt when a man complimented her on her dancing, which she said she knew he must have meant, because he asked for another immediately. "And I used to be told all the time at home that I never would be able to dance because I was so awkward."

Still another girl related her experience anent this unfair home made criticism. She is extremely tall but, in my opinion, perfectly beautiful. Black haired, ivory skinned, and gray eyed and with a dozen other beauty assets. But her height has been a matter of perpetual censure and ridicule by her mother and sisters until she believes she is a freak of nature for whom there is absolutely no hope.

I have heard mothers making cutting remarks to children about afflictions for which they were responsible. Outstanding ears, for instance, and bowlegs, both of which might have been avoided or remedied by careful parents.

If a child has a large nose which it has come by through perfectly natural hereditary measures it should not be made a matter of ridicule. There are, in almost every normal child, enough good features to offset a peculiar one or two. And the parent who is going to make a child feel that she is like other children, with no more handicaps and no less possibilities for success and good looks than other children, is going to reap the reward in a grownup of finer mental and physical fiber.

Children who are "don't'd" and "shushed" from morning till night grow up into timid folk who worry whether they are doing the right thing or not. They fear criticism, are afraid to have definite opinions, or at least to speak them out loud.

There is a charm about an ease and sureness of manner in a growing or grownup girl. In a full grown woman it is poise, one of the choicest possessions.

A woman who has acquired a great deal of poise through sheer mental training confessed that it was the result of her childhood criticisms that made her susceptible to the most sudden spells of self-consciousness and diffidence in spite of the time she had given to training herself away from such attacks.

On the other hand, there is a college girl of my acquaintance who entered school phenomenally young and had a brilliant career through school, and after she went into her chosen work. "I never knew what fear of attempting things meant because my mother always said: 'Of course you can do it if any one else can.'"

In families where there are several sisters and one is the so-called homely duckling there is often grief added to the luckless one's fate by the nicer hats and dresses being distributed among the pretty ones on the theory that "it wouldn't look like anything on the unattractive one." If there's a distinction it should be in favor of the least favored by nature. She needs the pretty artifices that the more favored sisters may do without.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers to Inquiries.

> What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

MISS ELIZABETH: THE ERUPTIONS you complain of on the back of your upper arms are due to a lack of surface circulation. Cold baths or a cold shower will work magic on this trouble. You can effect a remedy by vigorously scrubbing the arms with warm water and a flesh brush and then letting cold water run over the arms. Follow with a good rubbing with a Turkish towel. A couple of weeks of this treatment will do the work.

MRS. D.: APPLES, ORANGES, LETtuce, figs, prunes, cereals, spinach, tomatoes, rhubarb, rye and bran bread, and cabbage are all known to be of value in the prevention of constipation and should be regarded as desirable articles of food for this reason. Another thing, food should be chewed thoroughly and not bolted. Some people through habit bolt their food, while others fail to chew it thoroughly because it hurts their teeth to do so. The result in either case, sooner or later, is impaired digestion and this always produces constipation, which in turn makes for pasty and blotchy and sallow complexion.

AMY: YOU WON'T HAVE TO wear the dress shields much longer if you will follow carefully the directions I am giving for treating perspiration in the armpits. Have your druggist prepare for you a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Dab gently on the armpits every second or third day and let it dry on. It is usually sufficient to make three such applications, then to wait for a recurrence before resuming treatment; or one application a week may be made to ward off recurrences. Thoroughly wash the armpits with warm water and soap and rinse carefully so that no soap remains. After applying the lotion do not let any part of the clothing touch the skin until it is perfectly dry. Excessive use of the lotion causes a sharp itching or stinging sensation, which will subside if the part is not scratched. If itching does occur in spite of precautions, an ointment of cold cream containing 12 per cent boric acid may be used.

* *

YVONNE: TAKE MY ADVICE and don't let any more fat accumulate between your shoulders. That gives an ugly, aged look and you are far too young to hang out a welcome sign to a guest like that. Here's the remedy for it which I want you to practice faithfully every morning and every night: Lie flat on back, crown of head on floor; raise head to chin on chest. Keep heels and shoulders on the floor. After you have become adept with this exercise take the same position and raise yourself to a sitting position, keeping the heels on the ground. These are the best exercises for getting rid of the old age lumps you describe.

M. R. S.: ALL THE COLD CREAMS and skin foods in the world will not improve your complexion until you have regulated your system by food and exercise. Constipation is invariably the root of complexion ills and until it is remedied you cannot hope for a good, clear skin. Try a coarse food diet for awhile. Then I would advise you to take the bran treatment. It is ordinary bran which you may procure at a grocery store and which you may take either in water or eat raw. Send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I will give you further directions about the care of the complexion.

IRENE: I FIRMLY BELIEVE, Irene, that the best tonic you can take is an "overdose" of sleep from now on. You are evidently run down from lack of sleep owing to the good times you have been having. Sleep is a tonic, you know. Have a regular time to retire and a regular time to rise, and do not sleep less than eight hours, and ten if it is at all possible. Gets lots of exercise in the open air. Drink plenty of water, eat simple, nourishing food, guard against constipation, and I am sure it will not take long to build up your health and strength and take away that "dragged out" feeling.

* *

BETH: THIS IS A SIMPLE EXercise for developing the legs: Rise on tiptoe, hold this position a few seconds, then lower the body. Do this alternately first with one foot, then with the other, and finally with both. Practice this exercise for twenty minutes night and morning.

HELEN: AN APPLE EATEN IN the evening will mechanically and chemically cleanse the teeth, and if followed by proper brushing will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night. Fruit acids, such as grape juice, orange and lemon juice, and apples, stimulate a flow of saliva and are cleansing. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for the care of the teeth and mouth hygiene if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

JOSEPH: SCRUB YOUR FACE thoroughly every night with hot water and good soap and a complexion brush. Give particular force to the brush when you get to the center of your face, since you claim your nose is the harbor of the bleackheads. After scrubbing in the hot water, rinse in warm and then in cold. Have an alcohol bottle handy and with a piece of clean absorbent cotton go over your nose. The alcohol is cleansing and is an astringent too. Then leave out pastries, candy and rich foods in your diet for awhile and drink a lot of water.

* *

L. L. A.: DON'T BE SENSITIVE about the superfluous hair on your face. Yours is not a heavy enough growth to be disfiguring and especially when it is a blond color. It may be removed, but have it done by electricity, and I would suggest that you put yourself in the hands of an expert for the work. The charge ranges, I believe, between $4 and $5 an hour, but electrolysis is the only permanent remedy.

* *

FRANCES: YOU DID NOT GIVE me your address, so, of course, it was impossible to send you my formulas for pimples and blackheads, and they are much too lengthy to print in the column. Try it again!

* *

H. D. T.: POOR CHILD, YOU mustn't think you are as ugly as that. You can't be! Your dark brown eyes and blond hair would make you unusual looking, I think, and that is an attraction in these days. You will put on weight as you get older, I'm sure. But that is up to you now! You have to force yourself to drink milk and eat butter on things in goodly measure, also cream. You cannot get fat unless you eat fat producing foods. And naturally you will have to spend time enough outdoors doing good, vigorous exercise to create a hearty appetite. You would better send your address along on a stamped envelope and I'll give you minute instructions on the foods you should eat and the exercises you should do to get fat.

* *

MISS M. L.: YES, MY REDUCING instructions include attention to the neck and face. You're right about that. Many of the reducers advertised leave the neck stringy and the face flabby looking if they don't leave you an absolute wreck. Why take stuff like that? You don't know anything about it. Thyroid extract preparations should be taken only with a physician's approval, and a reliable physician will give that only after he knows the case in hand, but in preference he will recommend the diet and exercise as the only safe and sure remedy for fat.

Doris Blake Says:—

If you were born this week you are

Selfish.

> Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF you were born during the week beginning today you are a protégé of Capricorn (Dec. 21-Jan. 19). You possess much mechanical ability, are stubborn, retaliative, have a fondness for giving advice, mysterious in your designs and movements, and capable of cunning and trickery and of being intensely selfish and unreliable.

Your life is pretty certain to be a continual fight against worldly tendencies unless you choose to patch up a truce with them and let them have the rule and sway which you are not always willing to do.

Money making is your principal aim in life and you pursue your object in a farsighted, determined, undeviating way. You understand your business thoroughly and know where the best goods are to be found at the lowest prices. You are a shrewd buyer and an equally shrewd seller, and people of your stripe do not often make their appearance in bankruptcy courts. You do not take kindly to partnerships, preferring to go it alone and keep your wallet or checkbook in your own pocket.

And while you have the reputation of being close, sharp, and shrewd in your dealings, taking care to have the beam of the scales tip in your favor, you generally manage to hold on to your customers. You have a knowledge and understanding of what is just and right, but you do not always live up to this knowledge. You are just when the exercise of the virtue is not detrimental to your own interests.

With a somewhat quick temper and caustic tongue, you have the faculty of controlling both and making friends. On the whole people like you. You are quite sympathetic with suffering, but you are not given to showing it, and what good you do in your way you do not make a parade of.

You are devoted to your family and think your children are about right and you are patient with them and apt to let them have their own way. You are not dictatorial in the least, but you carry everything your way at home, in a rollicking, good natured way. The neighbors say you are a happy family, but too noisy. You are musical and there is apt to be a piano in the house, and, if so, it is useless for the neighborhood to go to bed until you and your crowd have turned in for the night. You love traveling, even if within circumscribed limits.

As a speculator, a trader, a contractor, an inventor, a prison warden, a detective, a merchant, a broker, a banker, a railway manager, or a lawyer, you may find success, for yours is a wide field of endeavor.

Sympathetic signs are Taurus, April 21-May 21, and Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23. You are usually more happy when married, for you dislike being left alone. In fact, you really need congenial companionship, for it acts as an incentive that brings out your best efforts. You Capricorn men are apt to be gentle and sympathetic toward the feminine persuasion, while the women of this sign will usually maintain a more independent attitude toward the men. A marriage with Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, or Cancer, June 23-July 22, will be almost certain to bring domestic happiness.

You will be most fortunate during the weeks beginning Oct. 14 and May 27; your colors are maroon, silver, and black; birthstones, garnet and moonstone.

Not Spending for Fun of It.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a man, 33 years, and am very much in love with a girl 18. Do you think it proper for a man of my age to marry a girl so much younger than myself? I have never told her that I loved her, but have taken her to theaters, dances and dinners and bought her flowers, candy and ice cream. Some of her girl friends have tried very hard to make her believe she was doing wrong by going with me. Her mother does not object, as I ask her to go with us a great many times.

"I have a good position and think I could make her a happy home unless there is too much difference in our ages. I do not drink or use tobacco, but am not a very good church member.

"She seems to enjoy my company, as she has asked me to go for a long walk with her the last two Sundays.

"Would it be proper for me to tell her that I love her, or do you think that she thinks I am just spending my money on her for the fun of it?

It would depend entirely on the type of girl she is. If she were a serious, sober minded and domestic girl it would be all right for you to ask her to marry you. But if she were flighty or irresponsible you would be taking a good deal upon yourself in choosing her for a life partner. In the latter case, you see, she could not be blamed for not being as ready to settle down as you, for after all she is only 18. You would better think it over pretty seriously before you propose.

A Present for Her Birthday.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy 16 years old and I have been reading your answers in the paper for a year. I work every Saturday and I met a girl one year old than I am whom I like very well. Do you think it proper for me to give her a little present for her birthday? If so could you tell me some suitable gift? D. J."

Send her a box of candy or a bunch of flowers, wishing her many happy returns of the day. That would be the best present under the circumstances.

Loves Them All.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl 20 years old and have four friends in the service. They all have proposed marriage, but I love them all equally well, so can't decide on any certain one.

"They all have faults, but, of course, that is to be expected of every one. The following are the outstanding faults of each one: One is what is considered real fast; one is rather conceited; one is terribly bashful, and the last one is inclined to be a spendthrift.

"With this information I think you can get an idea of what they're like. Will you please advise me which one I should choose and also an easy way to turn the other three off without breaking their hearts? I so hate the idea of ruining their lives. I would greatly appreciate any advice you might give me for I am so worried over the matter. GERTRUDE."

Well, Gertrude, there is one thing you have to learn and that is that men's lives are not ruined nor do they die of broken hearts over the nonacceptance of a matrimonial proposal, so don't let that worry you. Outside of the bashful one I do not think your suitors are to be taken seriously. Besides if you haven't any distinct preference yourself you may be sure that you are not in love. So if I were you I wouldn't prepare an answer for any one of them for they, too, may have changed their minds by now.

Wait a Bit.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are girls 14 years old and although we are considered very attractive the boys don't seem to care to go any place with us. We are not disliked and would appreciate any of your advice. "JEAN AND DORIS."

The boys, Jean and Doris, apparently have more grown up sense than you two little girls have. They probably wouldn't dream of inviting you to go anywhere, for fear your fathers would chastise them for their effrontery. Wait a couple of years, girls, before you spend your time worrying about the boys and in the meantime improve your school days so that when you have reached the age of going around with boys you will be just that much more attractive and sought after.

R. S. V. P.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please tell me what the initials 'R. S. V. P.' mean? MOLLY."

"R. S. V. P." stands for the French words, "Respondez s'il vous plat"—meaning, "Answer, if you please."

He Stole a Kiss.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 15 and have many admirers. There is one who is continually asking me to big shows, parties, and anything to show me a good time. He would do anything to please me; he gets me many presents, and no matter what I desire he will get it for me. But I do not like him. I feel so bored when I'm with him. I refused him every time, except once, but still he keeps asking me.

"I also have many other boy friends, and when they ask me to go I do go, whenever I can, because I like them, and they are decent boys.

"Is it proper for a girl to let a boy put his arms around her and kiss her? I have often been asked, but always refused. But a boy that I have only known real well for a month or so stole a kiss. Was it all right? He is 17. D. R. H."

My dear child, I hope you are not guilty of accepting presents from men. In fact, you ought not to be going around with them to shows and parties. Have you no mother? If so, does she approve of this kind of conduct? I cannot understand how any mother with her child's interests at heart would approve. Do not let the boys put their arms around you and kiss you. I hope you called the boy down who stole the kiss from you. You see, my dear, if you are going to start in at 15 encouraging such familiarities, you are going to make a very cheap, common little girl of yourself before long, and when it comes to a marrying age you will find that you will be left on the shelf while the girls who have demanded respect will be happily married.

He Sent Scissors.

"Dear Miss Blake: I received for a Christmas present a pair of scissors from a young man whom I hardly know. Please tell me the meaning of it. B. E."

What a funny present, B. E., from a boy, anyway! But then Christmas presents are ever a source of amusement, there usually being numbered among the gifts one or two things one wonders the why of. So long as you've accepted it, just think of it as something with the better intentions of the sender than his judgment in choice. Which is probably what it is.

Don't Tempt Jimmy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 years old. Do you think it is all right for me to go riding with Jimmy if mother sits in front with him and I sit in back with father? Will you please tell me how old I should be before I allow a boy to kiss me good-night? "ANXIOUS."

I guess it will be all right if Jimmy sits in the front seat with mother and you in the back seat with father, providing mother and father keep a watchful eye on you youngsters. If you are beginning to worry about the age at which you may allow kissing your little head is filled with a number of things it were better without, and you may be putting notions into poor little Jimmy's head.

Not a Reliable Sign.

"Dear Miss Blake: Would you please tell me the meaning of a stamp put upside down on a letter? "BLUE EYES."

According to stamp lore, that means "I love you." But, Blue Eyes, have more evidence than that at hand before you jump at the conclusion, for the real interpretation of the upside down stamp may be carelessness on the part of the sender. The stamp language is better to be taken as a game to laugh over than as a reliable code of heart to heart messages.

Conduct Is All Right.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have known a boy friend almost all my lifetime, as we have been neighbors for fourteen years. Do you think it is wrong if he takes me to a theater on Sunday, with my parents' consent, and comes to our home during the week? I am 16 years old and he is 17. FLORENCE."

No, Florence, there is nothing wrong about your conduct. Your being neighbors for fourteen years would indicate the boy must be thoroughly all right when your parents give their consent to your going out with him. It would be different if you should want to run around with boys you had just met.

Nemo Corsets SAVE MONEY AND HEALTH

DEVOTED TO TRUE WELFARE OF WOMEN

THEIR real merit and the originality of their features make Nemo Corsets the leaders of the corset industry; and they long ago passed the stage of a mere commercial article of exceptional value. Nemo Corsets are now recognized as a scientific medium of benefit to women; because they furnish a distinct and specific hygienic style-service; and their acknowledged scientific value cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

HYGIENIC-STYLE SERVICE: This service prevents and cures physical weaknesses, and has produced unmistakable and definite results in improving the health and appearance of those who have worn Nemo Corsets.

Hygienic-style service is found in Nemo Corsets, and in Nemo Corsets only.

DURABILITY: Nemo Corsets are even better known for their durability and economic value than for their hygienic service; because the former was easier to establish than the later.

A NEW MISSION: With the advent of changed economic conditions, armies of women have taken up industrial, commercial and professional lives, and are important factors in the labor market. This gives Nemo Corsets an additional mission to fulfill: To guard the health of those who are unaccustomed to physical exertion and who need protection against undue strain.

Nemo Corset Hygienists are to be found in almost all up-to-date and progressive corset departments. Ask for their assistance when selecting your corset.

The Nemo Corset system is divided into the following services;

Self-Reducing Service	$4.00 to $7.00
Wonderlift Service	6.00 to 12.00
Marvelace Service	6.00 to 12.00
KopService	3.00 to 10.00

In the January Bulletins and those that follow, we will explain the individual hygienic-style features of the various Nemo Corset Services.

Nemo JUSPUL BRASSIERES, a New Service made in a variety of styles with different inventions. Self-adjustable to every figure. "They fit as you fasten." $1.00 and $2.00

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

THE STATUS OF THE COOK.

IN nine years of daily attention to the subject of food I have changed myself over from a college teacher and writer to a cook. It is as a cook par excellence that I am willing to be known. Any one who casts any reflections on my ability to cook for anybody or anything has aroused my antagonism.

This does not mean that I cannot learn something every day. Not until I believed with all my heart and soul that if people would and could eat right they would never be ill, barring accidents, did I take up cooking with the greatest zest. In addition I pride myself on the fact that I have in some measure raised the status of cookery. But there is a world of work yet to be done, and as a pledge of the new year I would like to ask everybody who has the most progressive ideas about food, or is in the way of attaining them, to work to this same end.

Not a few of my friends apologize for me today, really, in introducing me to some stranger. They do it in various ways. Perhaps they say I am a dietitian, which I hope I am, because every cook should be. I am afraid that there is sometimes yet in my heart a sort of quiver lest my social status should seem lower than a woman of my education and intelligence should have when I describe myself as a cook.

I am sorry it is so, and I am working towards the day when it shall not be. Not until the intelligence of the whole world is raised will anybody, perhaps, dare to stand out and be as proud of being labeled cook as of being labeled doctor, professor, or even president.

First Cooking Schools.

Forty years ago it was perhaps easier to give a definition of a cook than it is now. About that time were established cooking schools for girls in industrial institutions. I have collected some of the text books written for this work. As well as I can trace the domestic science and home economics work of today, it seems to me to be the direct outcome of this work first started for these poor and homeless girls in industrial schools as a way to help them to earn their living out in the world. It is not the first great movement started for the unfortunate that has been turned to the service of the fortunate.

At the top of the list of developments from this humble beginning, influenced by certain academic developments, are schools where the work is as scientific as a school of technology. The late dean of American home economics was a teacher first in a leading school of technology, beginning with chemistry or sanitary science, I think.

If my reasoning of the facts gathered is sound, a work which was started for the poor and homeless has in it today people of the finest attainments and mind. Confined at first to industrial schools, this work in its elementary phases is in all our public schools today and it is engaging people of the highest attainments and finest minds.

All this has brought us nearer to the definition of a cook or my hoped for definition. Unfortunately a large number of people who take work in the higher schools of domestic science or home economics study that they may teach. In some cases those who teach them to cook cannot cook, and they in turn go out to teach without being able to cook. Because they can do so little as cooks they are still ashamed of being thought to have the ability which they do not possess.

Thus here again I am up against a stone wall of fact when I would raise the business of cooking to a high place. Those who profess it have not the proper respect for it in too many cases.

Careless About Cleanliness.

Lately I have visited some public school work. The work looked about as poor as it could be. Every operation going on was conducted in a slovenly way. One of the girls was preparing celery for creaming. The stalks were exceedingly muddy and she was cutting them up without first washing off the mud. The compost in which such things grow is rich in hundreds of kinds of objectionable dirt. Each stem of that stalk of celery should have been carefully washed and lightly scraped before it was cut, thus saving all those cut ends from contamination.

As I have rushed from city to city in a sort of tour of examination lately I have been surprised to see how little influence the teaching about clean hands, given such wide publicity such a short time ago, has had. I have to refuse to think when I eat in certain places, and I am astonished that this simple elemental fact, which used to be taught as a social amenity, seems never to be thought of by scores of people who handle cooked foods.

It is a sad thing and then again laughable. I heard this anecdote not long ago. A hermit was quizzed about his cooking and asked if he ever used cook books. He replied that he did not think much of these. He said he had bought one once, but the first statement, "Take a clean dish," showed how worthless it was.

Cook's First Requirement.

My first requirement of cooks would be that they should have some sanitary knowledge. By this requirement I shut out nine-tenths of those who are classed as cooks. I could give a long list of illustrations to show why they have no such knowledge. In some of their operations they act as though they had, as, for instance, in cutting up a chicken or removing all the meat without first drawing it. In canning chicken this is considered the only safe way to proceed. In great kitchens presided over by chefs it may constitute one of the great extravagances which were all too common and which seem inevitable to not too well trained people who must serve large numbers.

There is great hope for cooking when people realize that only by safe cooking and right eating can health be maintained over long periods of time. More and more are people becoming conscious of lowered states of endurance, of states that stop short of prostrating illnesses, and more and more they are learning how to keep resistance high, not only by exercise and out of door air but by what is more fundamental, through food, the right food correctly prepared and eaten in correct proportions and combinations.

Why, to be a cook, looking at the job as a godlike task, is to be a creator! There is nothing common or mean about such work. There is nothing about such work to lower one's social status.

It is a glorious thing that great numbers of intelligent, privileged, and rich women are today studying cookery and cooking for their families and friends. I truly believe that within the last five years the numbers of such women have increased by leaps and bounds as a part of the great movement in making a more efficient world. I know a good many myself. I am not sure that it will not some time become a badge of genuine aristocracy to have food intelligence from the plant growing to the movement of hand and brain, which are evenly and continuously efficient only when such intelligence is possessed.

Easier Ways in Modern Kitchen.

It is possible today to have beautiful and more efficient cooking utensils than were formerly possessed, except by great kitchens where no expense was spared that gourmands might have pleasure and continue the tradition that eating good food is a most sinful indulgence.

Running hot water in the kitchen sink has lessened the task of dish washing 75 per cent. Those who complain of this work today have not given intelligent attention to mastering it. Elbow room may be scanty in our modern kitchens, but as a consequence about three-quarters of the energy formerly used in traveling over the floor is saved, whether we wash dishes or get a dinner.

Some of the people most greedy to eat that I know in the world are the most unlovely of mind and ultimately of body. If they had but turned that ever lively interest they have in food to creative effort concerning it they would not be the gross, selfish, unattractive people they are. Food takes a fair revenge upon them.

We must eat. We may like to eat. We cannot be highly intelligent about eating unless we know how food is prepared. Perhaps from these statements we might formulate a definition of what a cook is.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-halp pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

COOKIES AND OTHER DAINTIES.

Crisp Caraway Cookies.

Cream seven-eighths cup of butter or three-quarters cup of butterine with the hand, add one cup of sugar gradually, beating constantly. Add one egg, beat until well blended; add another egg, continue beating; then one quarter teaspoon of soda dissolved in two tablespoons of sour cream, and one-half tablespoon of caraway seeds mixed with two cups of bread flour. Beat thoroughly. Chill; then turn on a well floured board, roll to one-fourth inch in thickness, shape with a small biscuit cutter (measuring one and one-half inches in diameter), brush tops with slightly beaten white of egg, and sprinkle each cooky with colored granulated sugar; arrange on buttered cooky sheets and bake in a moderate oven.

This recipe makes sixty small cookies.

Jelly Jumbles.

Cream one-third cup of butter, add one cup of sugar gradually while stirring constantly. Add two eggs beaten (without separating) until thick and lemon tinted. Sift together two cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, and two teaspoons of baking powder; add to first mixture alternately with one-fourth cup of milk, add one-half teaspoon each of lemon and vanilla. If too soft to handle, add from one-quarter to one-third cup of flour (no more). turn on a floured board, knead slightly, pat, and roll to one-fourth inch in thickness. Shape half the cookies with a small round cooky cutter, place one-half a teaspoon of jelly or jam in the center of each. Shape remaining half with a doughnut cutter of the same diameter. Place one of these rings on top of each cooky, press edges lightly and sprinkle rim of dough with coarse granulated sugar. Bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

These jumbles are especially nice for the lunch box.

Sour Cream Seed Cookies.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add gradually one cup of fine granulated sugar, stirring constantly. Add two eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted. Sift together two and one-half cups of flour and one-half teaspoon of soda. Add one-half teaspoon of caraway seeds and gradually beat into first mixture alternately with one-half cup of thick, sour cream. Drop from the tip of a teaspoon two inches apart on well greased baking sheets. Sprinkle with tiny colored caraway candies and bake in a moderate oven.

This recipe makes four dozen small cakes.

Prairie Nuggets.

Cream three-fourths cup of butter, add gradually one and one-half cups of brown sugar, stirring constantly. Add three eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted. Dissolve one teaspoon of soda in two tablespoons of hot water; add to first mixture. Sift together twice three and one-half cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, one and one-fourth teaspoons of cinnamon, one-half teaspoon of cloves, one-fourth teaspoon of allspice, and three-fourths teaspoon of nutmeg. Divide the flour equally and to one-half add one cup of seeded and shredded raisins, one-third cup of currants, and one-fourth cup each of chopped candied cherries, pineapple, orange, and lemon peel. To the remainnig half, add one cup of hickory nut or hazel nut meats chopped. Add gradually to butter mixture, stirring and beating constantly. Add two tablespoons of orange juice. Drop from the tip of a teaspoon on buttered baking sheets one and one-half inches apart. Stick with bits of candied fruits and bake in a moderate oven.

This recipe makese six dozen small cakes.

Cinnamon Horseshoes.

Work together thoroughly on a smooth board or marble table, one pound of almond paste and three-fourths pounds of confectioners' sugar. To this add gradually the whites of three eggs, one at a time, slightly beaten, working them into the mixture with the hand at first, afterwards using the spatula. This will not only expedite the mixing of ingredients, but will help to keep the mixture from sticking to the table or board. Work in one teaspoon of cinnamon. Shape the soft mixture in a long roll, cut in one inch pieces, roll each separately to the thickness of a lead pencil, then roll in ground nut meats and shape like a horseshoe. Bake twenty minutes on a buttered tin sheet in a moderate oven.

Rolled Almond Wafers.

Cream one-fourth cup of butter, add one-half cup of powdered sugar gradually, and one-fourth cup of milk, drop by drop; then add seven-eighths cup of bread flour and one-fourth teaspoon of almond extract. Spread thinly with a broad bladed knife or spatula on an inverted buttered dripping pan, sprinkle with almonds blanched and finely chopped. Crease in three inch squares and bake in a slow oven until delicately colored brown. Remove from oven and place pan where it will keep warm. Cut squares apart with a sharp knife and roll quickly while warm over handle of small wooden spoon. If wafers become too crisp to roll, put pans back in oven for a moment to soften.

Peanut Bars.

Cream three-fourths cup of butter; add one and one-half cups of light brown sugar gradually while stirring constantly. Beat two eggs until thick and lemon tinted; add to first mixture. Add one-half teaspoon of soda dissolved in three tablespoons of milk, and half a quart of fresh baked peanuts which have been shelled, hulled, and chopped moderately, then mixed with salt and just enough flour to roll. Chill the dough, then take a portion of it, place it on a well buttered and floured baking sheet, or inverted dripping pan, and roll quite thin, sprinkle with remaining one-half quart of chopped peanuts, and bake in rather a hot oven. Cut in strips the size and shape of Saratoga wafers. This must be done as quickly as possible, while the baked sheet is still hot. On cooling, it will become crisp and likely to break and crumble.

WASHABLE WASTE BASKETS.

Pretty waste baskets always add to a room, and the sad part about most of our pretty things is that they become soiled all too soon. This is especially true this year on account of the enforced use of soft coal. With the waste basket pictured here the cover of chintz is snapped on and off and can be washed at your pleasure.

The frame is of wire, as pictured in Fig. 1. These frames, in many shapes, can be purchased in the department stores. Buy one yard of cotton or cotton and silk goods in a practical shade for your lining. Measure the base and top of your frame and cut this length in white taping one inch wide. You would better buy a bolt of this taping, as it can be used to advantage on many things. Measure your depth and cut your silk, shirring it on to the tape. Be careful to make your fullness even all along. Now take the lining and pin it in so that you will get it straight, rolling the tape over the upper and lower wire. Sew this with heavy, coarse thread. Bind the joining near one of the side wires.

From a heavy card board cover cut the size of the bottom of the basket, as shown in Fig. 2, covering with the lining silk and fitting it in by pressing it down firmly. Take your white tape once again and sew it along the edge of the four sides, fitting your tape over the wire as you did with the lining. The outer surface, or the one which rests on the floor when the basket is finished, is the surface to be taped.

For the basket pictured one and one-quarter yards of chintz of the rose pattern were used. Measure your depth or height, making it about one-half inch less (This is because the line of taped snaps which you will put on later will add this much to the measurements). Shir it to a length of white tape as you did with the lining.

To the edge of your tape, at both top and bottom of the chintz, sew your snappers, which you can buy on tape by the yard. They are just as decorative as a braid finish. Sew the clasp side to the chintz, carrying it down one side (as shown also in Fig. 3). Sew the snap side around the top and bottom of the lining of the basket. Also sew one line of the snap side on the side of the chintz, joining the side which carries the clasp line (as shown also in Fig. 3). All that remains is to snap on the cover.

Nothing is prettier for a boudoir desk than a chintz basket.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

REPLYING TO AN INVITATION.

THERE come many doubts and queries about the correct form for answers to different kinds of invitations. Perhaps these suggestions and directions will be of some assistance.

No reply is required in the case of a church wedding. To a reception following the ceremony, or to a house wedding and reception, a formal note either of acceptance or regret should be sent. For the latter this is considered in good taste: "Mr. and Mrs. John Jones regret that they are unable to accept the kind invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brown Jr. to the wedding and reception of their daughter Helen and Mr. William Smith on Monday, the 7th of November."

An affirmative response is unnecessary to an invitation to a formal tea, but if it is impossible to attend cards should be mailed to the hostess or hostesses on the day of the affair.

For a formal acceptance to a dance the following is correct: "Mr. John Brown accepts with pleasure the kind invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith for the evening of Wednesday, the 9th of June."

To a formal invitation to luncheon the acceptance may be: "Mrs. John Smith accepts with pleasure the kind invitation of Mrs. Henry Jones for Monday, the eighth of May." The form for the regret is similar, with "regrets that she is unable to accept" substituted for "accepts with pleasure."

But to an informal invitation to luncheon Mrs. Smith might reply: "My Dear Mrs. Jones: I shall be happy to come to luncheon on Friday next at 1 o'clock. Thank you very much for inviting me.—Cordially yours, Mary G. Smith."

When asked to card parties, tea dances, and dinners, the answers should correspond in form to the invitation—a formal reply for a formal invitation, an informal one for an informal invitation, and if given over the telephone, the acceptance or regret may be telephoned. As one flippant young reprobate neatly put it not long ago, "When in Rome, shoot Roman candles!"

R. G.: If your parents are willing, there is no reason why the boy should not visit at your home, particularly since he is an old friend of theirs and yours. However, it is better to let such an invitation come from your mother rather than from you. While he is with you make him feel at his ease, see that he has every comfort, and let him enjoy whatever gayeties there are going on. If you treat him as one of the family and give him a good, "homey" time, he cannot help having a pleasant visit and wanting to come again.

S. H. H.: Half past 10 is the proper hour for a young man to leave a girl's home after a call. If he stays longer, he is likely to bring down the wrath of her parents upon his head and to wear out his welcome. After a dance, if the young woman's mother is willing to sit up and act as chaperon, a boy may come in for a minute or two, but let him take care not to make himself unpopular with the "powers that be" by prolonging the allotted time.

* *

M. W.: When a woman is with a man the latter takes the outside of the walk. This custom developed from the fact that the one on the outside usually receives any jolts or jostling of an overcrowded street, and it is a man's place to protect his feminine companion from all such discomfort.

* *

K. E. W.: After attending the dinner at your home, it was the boy's place to make what is known as a "party call." However, if he left town so soon he did the courteous thing when he wrote you a polite little note thanking you for the good time he had had.

Better Housekeeping

By Mary Bronson Hartt.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME.

FIRST find the spots. Beat and brush the garments free of loose dirt so that grease spots which naturally retain a coating of dust shall show up conspicuously. In strong sunshine mark every spot with chalk or white thread, lest you miss some of them when the goods is wet.

Prepare your cleaning agents. If you use gasoline or benzine run a cotton cloth through it to take up the water in it. If it is not dried in this way the moisture will sink into the goods you try to clean, and it is well known that gasoline doesn't work on wet material. Used gasoline should be filtered to take out the dirt. Get a sheet of filter paper of the druggist, cut a circle out of this, crease it several ways across the center, slip the point of the cone thus formed into a glass funnel, and pour the dirty gasoline through.

For delicate work even water requires preparation. Cleaners' directions always specify "soft water." If in doubt whether your tap water is too hard test it by this simple method: Dissolve a little castile soap in alcohol and put a few drops of the solution into a small quantity of cold water. If it turns milky it is too hard to be good for cleaning dress goods. Soften it by boiling (which drives off the carbon dioxide, causing the water to drop its minerals). Then if you are working on light materials let the boiled water stand till any suspended impurities have time to settle. This last is necessary with water temporarily boiled or that from a muddy source.

How to Make Javelle Water.

Javelle water can be had of the druggist, but it is so easy to make it at home that it seems a needless extravagance to buy. Here is the rule: Dissolve in a graniteware pan one pound of washing soda in one quart of boiling water. In another pan dissolve one-half pound of chloride of lime in two quarts of water. Let this settle. Then pour off the clear liquid on top into the soda solution and pour into bottles. Keep in a dark place tightly corked with a rubber stopper.

General cleaning mixtures, good for spots of all descriptions, are not recommended by modern cleaning experts any more than "cure alls" are advocated by the modern physician. They recognize so many distinct varieties of spots. It may be convenient to have on the bathroom shelf a solution of ammonia, castile soap, and water for the inevitable first aid to grease spots treatment necessary in a large family.

Ammonia, however, likewise soap, has a tendency to make dyed goods "bleed." Soap bark will not bleed any color that will stand hot water; it forms an emulsion with grease or oil and dissolves sticky or sugary deposits; it works no prejudice to spots of unknown nature, which it fails to remove; when they are dry some other powerful solvent can still be tried on them. Therefore for general amateur spotting soap bark holds a high place. It can be had in convenient little boxes holding just an ounce. Put the chipped bark into a cheesecloth bag and pour boiling water over it. An ounce makes a pint of solution.

Precautions with Gasoline.

If you will use gasoline or benzine remind yourself that the great cleaning establishments are so in terror of explosions that they will not have a single window in the dry cleaning rooms open on the level of the street lest the fumes should flame up in the light of some passer's cigar and that employés are not allowed to wear boots with ordinary nails in the heels for fear of striking sparks on the concrete floor. Then take your precautions accordingly.

In gasolining a spot on suiting or broadcloth apply the liquid with a swab made from a piece of the same stuff; then there is no visible lint left on the goods. Lay the spot face down on a thick pad of old cotton or several thicknesses of blotter, so that the liquid will sink straight through, carrying the dirt along with it. Rub from the outer edges toward the center. Or begin your operations on clean material outside the soiled area and work inward in narrowingly circles to counteract the tendency of the dissolved grease to spread. Rub till the material is dry.

In cleaning spots on silk white broadcloth makes a good swab. It is safer for an amateur, however, to clean spots on silk with magnesia or French chalk to a thick paste with benzine, smeared on the spot and allowed to dry. This often removes the grease without risk of spreading. The most cautious method of all is to apply dry magnesia or French chalk to the silk, leaving it for hours, and repeating the treatment till the grease disappears.

Quick Sponging of Wool.

If a wool suit is not spotted, yet is suspected of general soil, a swift way to freshen it is this: Press it all over under cloths dipped in white soapsuds. The dirt has more affinity for the soapy cloth than for the wool, as you'll see by the grime that changes sides.

Light gowns of voile or marquisette, afflicted with general grime near the hem, can often be restored without laundering if powdered magnesia is sifted over the soiled parts, rubbed in, and allowed to lie over night. When it is brushed out a good bit of dirt comes, too.

Velvet collars may be cleansed with flour which has been wet in gasoline and allowed to dry thoroughly. A clever little dressmaker always carries a box of this gasolined flour.

The collars of men's suits should be sponged with soapbark solution, then if there is an ugly shine, the nap may be cautiously raised with fine emery paper. Sponging with a weak solution of alum—a small lump of alum to a pint of water—has a tendency to remove shine.

The secret of successful pressing is to press till the garment is dry. In hanging a pressed garment to air button all the buttons so as to bring it into normal shape. Tailors sometimes carefully baste together the buttonholes of a man's coat while it is being pressed so that the fronts may draw as one piece.

Prop a hot flatiron face up between two wooden blocks, lay a wet pad on it, and draw the velvet over the steaming surface while brushing it with a soft brush. If the pad is used instead of moistening the back of the velvet and drawing it taut across the edge of the iron, there is less danger of marks. Be sure and not let the fingers touch the pile while the velvet is damp.

BRIGHT·SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 in thrift stamps for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address Bright Sayings to Aunt Bee, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

I had given permission to my small daughter to spend the afternoon with either one of two little friends, but after getting her ready she seemed in no hurry to go. Finally I asked her why she didn't get started, to which she replied: "Well, I'm trying to make up my think which one I'd rather play with." M. O.

Old Santa found the following in his mail: "Dear Santa Clause: I want a bugy for Christmas and I want a pair of gloves to. I want a big red apple at the top of m stocking how are you how are you men today?" H. G.

Harvey was out with his mother looking at the toys in the store windows. A little girl approached, dressed in red and a red hood. Harvey pulled at his mother's skirt, exclaiming, "Look, mamma, look!" His mother asked him what he wished her to see and he replied, "There is little Red Riding Hood. I thought the wolf eat her up." MRS. L. S.

When Willamen went to the country she asked at once to see a calf she had grown fond of the previous year. When shown a large cow she was disappointed. Later to her mother she said: "Mamma, they haven't Nellie any more; she growed into a cow." C. S. C.

"Don't go out in the muddy garden, Effie," called out mother.

"I won't," Effie obediently called back, then as she came in with a handful of chrysanthemums plus a muddy frock and shoes she explained, "I's already goned." A. D.

Edward was on his way downtown with his mother. He was not walking fast and finally stopped. Mother turned around and he was quite a distance back. She said: "Hurry, Edward." Edward replied: "Well, I'se all out of gas." R. L.

Robert is small for his age and was not at all pleased with the suits the clerk was showing his parent. There was a military suit which was far too large for him, but he wanted it regardless. His mother explained that the suit did not fit him, but Robert anxiously explained, "But, mother, look at the years I can grow in it!" V. M. B.

Helen is sensitive when teased about her red hair. After patiently listening to her playmates' taunts for several minutes, she became angry and stamped her small foot, and loudly informed them, "I know I'se got red hair and I'se got a bad temper to match wif it, too. You better 'member that." Helen isn't teased any more. V. M. B.

Semi-Annual Clearance of Rugs

AMERICA'S leading makes are represented in splendid assortments in this great semi-annual clearance of high grade, dependable floor coverings. Since this is a clearance, quantities of some of the makes are naturally limited, but those early on the scene will find the choosing excellent. They'll find, also, that rugs, carpets, and linoleums, all are marked at reductions of the same extraordinary character that have made this semi-annual sale so looked-forward-to by Chicago home-makers. Fourth Floor.

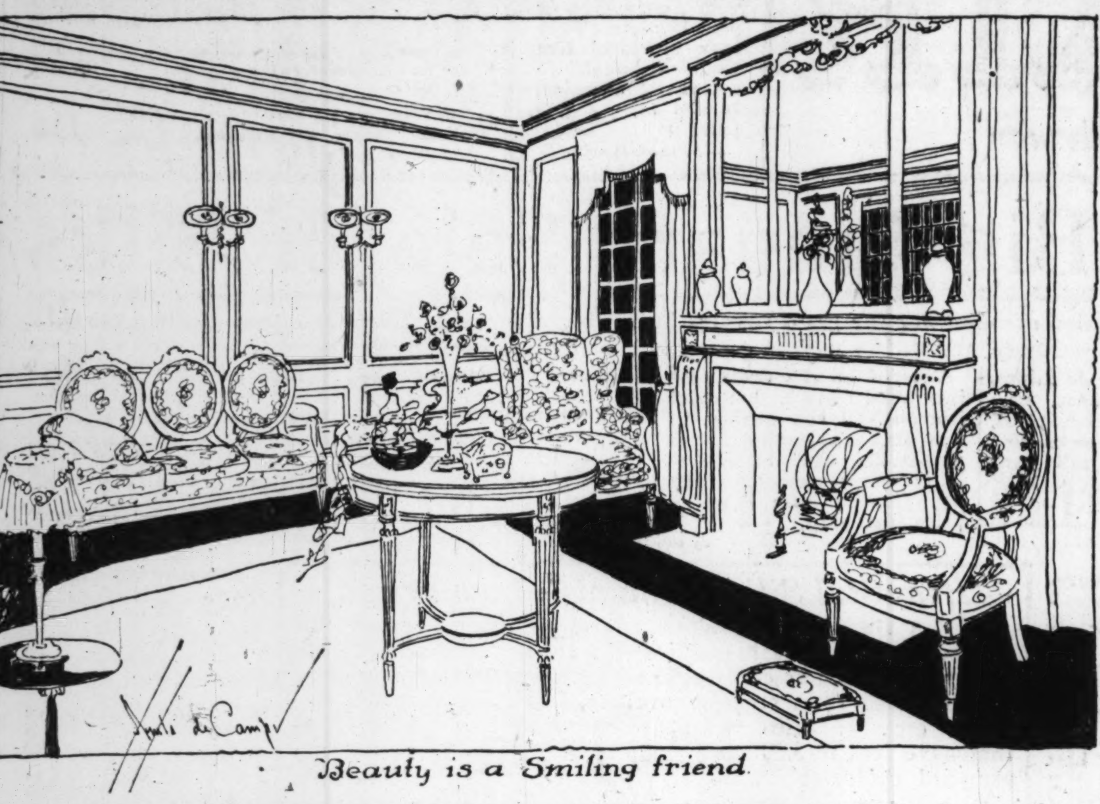
The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



Beauty is a Smiling friend.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

EVOLUTION IN FURNITURE.

SHE was a plain country woman, with a ponderous middle aged figure, complexion browned by wind and sun, and she carried that badge of provincial distinction, the brown hammock shopping bag.

She had wandered into the French room of a large department store, and she stood before a gilt and pink damask chair which had been carefully roped off that no weary wayfarer might molest its aged beauty. She shook her head. Here was something that made no appeal. Since it was not for her, how could it be of any possible service to any one else? She thought tenderly of her substantial farmhouse furniture.

"I wonder," she said, "how any one ever came to think of anything as foolish and frivolous as that?"

Which inspires an interesting story, since the furniture of the reign of Louis XV. represents a period of selfishness and frivolity the like of which the world had never known and will probably never know again. The mode was preëminently the result of the feminine influence—all these slender legged, gold finished, highly decorated chattels, and their kith and kin.

The masculine mind must have an element of femininity in its composition to appreciate them. The industrious woman who feels that life is work, aims, ambitions, and getting something done has no use for them at all. But for the woman to whom beauty is a smiling friend—no matter in what form it appears—the art products of the time of the Louises will always have charm. To her manner of philosophizing beauty itself is useful, since it offers a certain source of happiness to the eye and the soul. And if things perish, does not that make them all the more precious? Away with these practical minds that would have everything serviceable and everything everlasting! They have no imaginations within their substantial, unyielding walls.

Francis I. started France out on her road of art glory. Unlike others who had filled his job before him, he didn't set his mind on religious idealism. He developed a strong commercial social ideal. He became interested in architecture, lovely furnishings, and decorations. He swept away a large part of the old Gothic stuff and studied the Italian Renaissance. It fascinated him. He caught the glow and richness of it, and traveled his royal self to Italy, where he persuaded some of the best artists to return to France with him.

As Francis admired beautiful fabrics, he naturally was interested in finding beautiful carriers for these fabrics, so he invited to his court the loveliest of women. It is recorded that he was a flirtatious gentleman, but that is no business of ours. However, his love affairs developed a new attitude toward domestic and social relations, which expressed itself throughout the realm.

When Louis XIV. ascended the throne there were wild extravagances. Milliners, fabric makers, interior decorators, designers of robes and manteaux, all struggled to gain the good will and patronage of the court beauties. Admiration for the arts became the fashion, and there developed new forms of social etiquette. All this was dominated by feminine influences. The palace at Versailles became a vast stage setting for social pageants. The furnishings had not as yet assembled themselves into the French style and were so intermixed of mode as to be a bit untranslatable. The colors were a readaptation of the Italian Renaissance—dark green, blue, rich deep crimson tones, and gold. As the period progressed, colors lightened, and still further along more colors were used.

With Louis XV. came modifications of decorative effects. Special attention was given to walls and ceilings, lovely paneled effects were created, with suitable restful blank spaces for display of delicately lacquered and painted furniture. Furniture became smaller in scale and more graceful. The most expensive woods were used. Fragile taffetas and delicate brocades were applied. Chairs, divans, and consoles were beautifully shaped and carved.

There was usually a quality of refinement, as if each designer were endeavoring to be a bit more exquisite than his fellow craftsman. Sometimes he ran away with himself, as witness the application of metal ornamentation on fragile wood and on the rock shell motif combined with the Flemish scroll. Decorations were used so lavishly that they actually became the structural facts, defying the good old rule that structure must dominate decoration.

Then came along the naturalistic idea that expressed the social ideals for which the nation stood. In tapestries, brocades, and on woods appeared representations of gallant courtiers and beautiful ladies and garden scenes with Cupids hovering about. These scenes appeared not only on fabrics and furniture but also on fans, snuff boxes, and buttons, and this extraordinary treatment of decorative form was supposed to reflect the frivolous, flirtatious spirit of the time. Which, no doubt, it did.

The most refined and extravagant taste manifested itself in the texture and weave of upholstery materials. Damask, taffetas, and printed linens were gorgeous in effect and delicate in coloring, never insipid or without character. Colors evidently never gave out, and new combinations appeared, with beautiful variations. There was an imaginative element in all this that must have been inspiring, and a newness that must have thrilled. But it was not perfection, it was rather experimental.

But it was the beginning of what is now known as the French style. It was the formation of an esthetic ideal. And, needless to say, it all cost the French nation a great deal of money. When Louis XVI. came into power the people had started to do a little thinking—the people who had not rested upon golden divans and who had not carried snuff boxes of great value.

Everything in the way of wall decorations, furniture, hangings, and textiles was toned a bit. French art expression became saner. Greater regard was given to the assembling of household chattels. Walls and furniture found a certain relationship that they did not have in the first days of the palace at Versailles, where extravagance displayed itself without consideration for the complete effect. There were fewer inconsistencies. There was brought about a balance in motif, scale, material, and color. We wonder if the little Marie Antoinette, simple and childish, didn't have something to do with it. Certainly the costly, overdecorated stuff of the household of Louis XV. could not have appealed strongly to the little Austrian princess with her inherent desire for simple things.

Everything that had been confusion in the way of art design righted itself. Motifs were smaller. Color sought color with greater discrimination. Florette patterns followed the naturalistic designs that were not always in good taste. In all handicraft there appeared better understanding. And then the French style firmly established itself. As it was then, it is today; beautiful ideas are imperishable.

Answers to Inquiries.

B. C.: Do your woodwork over in old ivory throughout. Buy a plain taupe chenille rug. I should advise, too, the repainting of the furniture. Have transparent curtains at your windows, with inside curtains of linenized cretonne in large, striking pattern, printed on a ground almost the color of your sidewall. If possible, substitute a wooden bed for the brass one.

* *

M. C. C.: Get one big rug in preference to several small ones. Use plain marquisette glass curtains in deep cream color. Paint the woodwork in old ivory. Use a straw colored silk shade for the lamp beside your bed. For a day bed cover select figured linenized cretonne printed in colors on a straw colored ground. Use the long, narrow strip of brocade on your table. The toilet articles are kept on the dressing table and on the dresser is a formal arrangement of a box and two vases, or a bowl and two candlesticks, or any other simple group of things that you may have. Put a boxed cushion on your window seat.

JULIA S.: You have so many colors in your woodwork—oak, walnut, mahogany, etc.—that my only suggestion to you in the matter of draperies is to combine the many colors as well. Select something that will include yellow, red, autumn red, and brown, with perhaps a touch of olive.

* *

M. O. A.: Use a light shade of old blue in your living room. Either all blue or blue and taupe would be nice for the upholstery, and let the frames of the furniture be in American walnut.

* *

BEE: I think you will be better satisfied by having double pairs of curtains at each of the three windows. The fourth window also should have a double pair, even though it is smaller than the others.

* *

MRS. J. W. H.: You could use the old upholstery that has been on your wing chair as a pattern. Take that to the fancy work department and they will help you in selecting the materials to make your cross stitch cover.

THE FAMILY PIG.

Inquiries pertaining to the garden should specify its location and inclose addressed, stamped envelope, as space may not permit an answer in this column. Address Garden Editor, "Chicago Tribune."

EVERY kitchen, be it ever so frugal and its meals most carefully planned, is bound to have some waste. In the well managed household of average size, this is not sufficient to feed a pair of chickens, while in others huge twenty and forty-gallon garbage cans are filled daily to overflowing. One housewife prides herself in keeping down the cost of the cuisine, while another considers it an achievement to raise all the pork requirements with the kitchen waste.

This is expensive pork. It takes about four pounds of concentrates to produce a pound of pork. If that can be done with 10 cents' worth of corn, it is profitable; if it must be done with a dollar's worth of kitchen waste, it is highly unprofitable. Such a waste-fed porker would cost $200 to $225 on the hoof. It would be cheaper to select one at the stockyards for $35, three others at the same price to wait on his highness, and provide four taxis to bring them home in state.

If it is thought inelegant to practice frugality even now that all the world appeals to us for food, then by all means keep poultry or even hogs, proportioned to the degree of recklessness, to consume what would otherwise be utterly lost.

The prejudice against hogs on the home grounds is even less justified than that against poultry. We pen up a hog on bare ground, within an inclosure ten feet square, give it no other attention than to slop its feed into open troughs, and then hold our nose at the condition due to our own inertia. A horse, a cow, a dog, or any other animal similarly confined and maltreated would make even a worse mess of it.

That the hog thrives in spite of the customary neglect of hygienic and sanitary measures should open our eyes to its possibilities under proper care and environment. The poor beast wallows in mud not because of its preference for mud and filth, but because we fail to provide clean water or shade to keep it cool during the heat of summer.

It is entirely possible to raise a family's whole pork requirement in the midst of the most fastidious community without giving offense to our neighbors and without transgressing the spirit of the health regulations. And even the self-respecting country home should tolerate no less.

Until we appreciate the importance of such cleanliness the hog will be afflicted with cholera, tuberculosis, and all the other ills bred by man's abuse of a chief source of meat supply.

Until we cease forcing a naturally clean animal to live in filth, the Jews' antipathy to pork will be justified, in a measure, whether it is raised on a dairy farm or as an adjunct of the successful back yard garden.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Getting Rid of William.

It was many years ago in my father's pioneer cabin. One Sunday afternoon on looking out of the window I saw a young man whom I disliked coming in at the gate.

"I just don't intend to talk to Billy tonight. Get rid of him for me, Nancy," I said to my older sister, and dived under a bed at one side of the room.

Nancy opened the door and said: "Come right in, Billy. How are you and how are all the folks at home?" and so on until she had about worn the topic out.

"Is Susan at home?" she asked.

"O, yes; she was here just a moment ago. She will be in soon." And she then launched into neighborhood news, jokes, and everything she could think of to try to make me laugh.

Then mother came to the door opening into the kitchen and said: "Come to supper." On seeing Billy she insisted he should come and eat with them.

When he started toward the kitchen door he passed close to the bed and stumbled on my unlucky foot, which I had stretched out to rest me in my uncomfortable position. I screamed and, of course, the cat was out. I crawled out more embarrassed than ever before or since. Billy stayed for supper, but he never came back. E. R.

Not So Youthful.

A man who had an appointment with my employer was sitting in the outer office awaiting his turn to enter the private office and overheard me telling one of the other girls that I just had a letter from my "kid" brother in France, and I laughingly added that the so-called "kid" brother was three years older than I, whereupon the man mumbled, "Not much of a kid, I'd say."

The Turkey Had Flown.

Last year I prepared a big Christmas dinner and set the table with snowy linen and my best china and a big fat turkey browned to a turn as my "pièce de resistance."

The dining room, which opened onto a side porch, was warm, so I opened the door for a few minutes while I went to the garage to call my husband and son and two friends who were spending the day with us.

On returning to the dining room to my surprise and embarrassment my turkey was gone. Not a spot on the tablecloth.

Evidently some hungry tramp had tucked it under his coat and escaped to some back alley to enjoy it alone, but it made an embarrassing moment for me. A. N.

Dressed for the Ball.

I went to a ball and of course I took great care in dressing my hair in a "Psyche," so later in the evening when my escort said, "Your hair is coming down," I thought he meant the Psyche, so I said, "That's the way it's upposed to be." However, when I reached home I found it was coming down and I had danced with it the whole evening.

Nice on the Inside.

Several years ago I was appointed as teacher in a small country school. I had never visited this particular part of the country, so naturally I was a little curious concerning the surroundings.

One of the trustees of the school was driving with me to his home, at which place I was to board. After driving a few miles we came in sight of a dilapidated and forlorn looking house. I asked, "Who lives in that old shack?"

The man coughed, gave the horse a sharp lash with the whip, and finally said, "Why—er—that's where we live."

I was treated royally in the old home, which was pleasont enough on the inside, but there wasn't a day during the seven months of my stay there that the incident wasn't fresh in my memory.

A Game of Spirits.

One day in school during the absence of our teacher we decided to have a game of "spirits." We all stood around a small table waiting to hear what the spirits had to say. The silence was tense when I, tiring of the quiet, shouted, "And the door opened and in walked the devil!" The horrified looks on the girls' faces caused me to turn around just in time to see our teacher coming in the door. Needless to say I'll never forget my most embarrassing moment.

Mixed in the Bread.

After I had lived in the United States a few years I began to understand the English language, but sometimes I got the words mixed. One afternoon when I returned from work my landlady asked me to get her a stale loaf of bread. I went to the baker and asked for a stale loaf. When he was wrapping up the bread I remarked, "Be sure that it's fresh." At that time I did not understand why every one in the store smiled.

Not His.

When I got on a car that was crowded I was indignant to see a man and a little boy occupying a seat. So I said, "Mister, couldn't you take your little boy on your lap?" I was much embarrassed at having him reply, "But that's not my little boy."

Backsliders.

While attending a banquet at the church, where I was a member before I was married, my husband and I were talking with my former pastor. In the course of the conversation he asked us how we liked the church and pastor in the community in which we then lived. Not wishing to let him know that we had never been in the church and were "backsliders," I told him how much we liked the preacher and how we enjoyed going to that church. To my embarrassment my husband said, "When were we ever in that church?" Needless to say, he "got his" when he got home.

Camp Stories Contest.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories happening in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Not to Be Folled.

While on a tour of inspection the commanding officer of the camp came across a rookie who was doing guard duty. While passing he noticed the guard did not salute. He told the rookie who he was and the latter answered: "You can't fool me, big boy; you're one of them truck drivers—they all wear yellow leggings and a yellow hat cord."

Worse than Death.

A bunch of us had just that day had our second typhoid serum injection, and were trying our best to get off to sleep and forget our troubles. However, one fellow couldn't suppress his groans, and instead of the usual snores our barracks resounded with groan after groan from his direction. Finally some of the boys who had not had theirs began to direct such sarcastic remarks toward him as "Shut up down there!" "How did that woman get in here?" "Put a muffler on that lily-livered roughneck," etc. Finally the sufferer answered pathetically: "Fellows, I'm a sick man. I'm telling you there's been many a man died feeling better than I do."

Nice Enough to Eat.

My sister's sweetheart, who is in Camp Grant, always started her letters with "Dear little girl." She got tired of reading the same thing every time she got a letter from him, so she wrote him to start her letters with something else. The next letter she got started like this, "Dear little sweet potato."

No Danger of an Epidemic.

I wrote to my brother who has been in France since June telling him I heard many boys were getting the "flu" from kissing the French girls. This is the answer I received: "Don't think influenza comes from kissing, as I would rather face machine gun fire than kiss 90 per cent of what I've seen and most of the fellows feel the same."

At Target Practice.

A former soda fountain clerk was completely unnerved during his first day's rifle practice and exclaimed: "Shooting at these targets makes me realize what an awful thing war is. I'd die before I'd kill any one." Another man, who had watched him practice, said: "You certainly would."

Cleared the Floor.

One of the inspecting days, as the officer was going his rounds, inspecting the barracks, he discovered, against the rules, a number of suitcases on the floor in various places. He told the boys that on his next rounds he didn't want to see a single one on the floor. So when he came again he was much pleased to see the room in order, but as he was about to leave he glanced up at the ceiling and there were the suitcases tied to the rafters. He thought it pretty good and called a passing officer to see it. As he was in good humor it passed as a joke.

A Cow in the Tent.

My brother told us about an incident that happened in camp one evening. It is as follows:

"Had a good joke while at the range. It was a warm night and nobody cared to sleep. Some of the boys stayed awake until the others fell asleep, then they went out on the range and caught a cow. A rope was placed on the cow's neck and the other end tied to the tent pole. After a hard tussle the cow was led into the tent and the door flap tied.

"Gee, I wish you could have enjoyed the sight! The boys inside could not get out fast enough and in their hurry upset cots and everything."

Surrounded.

This is from a letter written by a soldier in the One Hundred and Seventh engineers, Thirty-second division, during the action around Cantigny in [illegible], the incident taking place in a large stone quarry twenty feet underground.

"One night there were a few prisoners in the cave for examination (my bunk was about fifteen feet from the examining table), but as the night grew, so did the number of prisoners, so that along toward morning all spare room was filled and some of the aisles were packed. Of course they were kept in "formation."

One Moroccan soldier had gone to bed in the evening on a table around which there were no boches, but he awoke in the early morning out of a sound sleep, and such a bunch of men around him confused and startled him. When he was awake enough he saw Germans all around him, so the first thing he did was to throw up his hands and yell "Kamerad."

Of course that's the proper thing to do when you have so many Germans around you and no gun, but the prisoners all saw the joke and gave the Moroccan the laugh. The boys joked him so much about his "surrender" that day that he got so sore he would hardly talk to any of them.

It Takes Time.

This is the way my brother explains the Frenchman's politeness:

"This morning I asked a Frenchman the way to the cathedral. After telling me in a speech of about three minutes that he would gladly impart the information to me, I leaned against a lamppost while he spent another five arguing with an imaginative person the shortest route to take.

"Having listened patiently to his address, I asked with the aid of my dictionary, 'How far is it from here?' I could have kicked myself for stopping to ask that, for I had to hold the lamppost up another ten minutes while the native apologized profusely and in a flowery manner for the folly of his ancestors in building the cathedral four blocks away. As I flung "merci beaucoup, monsieur," at him, as I hastened away, he looked sorrowfully after me and I knew that he felt hurt for my not staying while he would explain the historical and geographical causes behind the present location of the cathedral."

One of the Little Fellows.

One day a bunch of soldiers was going to a ball game which was given free to soldiers and Boy Scouts. There were two gates, one for the soldiers and one for the scouts. There was one small soldier in front who was going to go in the gate when the gatetender called out, "Boy Scouts, next gate!" much to the amusement of the rest.

Blamed on the War.

One morning at reveille the leader of the last squad was absent. A recruit who had fallen in at the end of the line was told in a whisper to report the squad, by saying the usual "all present, or accounted for." A moment later he sang out, "All present on account of the war."

Fooling the Cooties.

I wrote to my brother in France, who had been in action, asking if he had acquired "cooties." His reply came back, "Yes, indeed, I had cooties. One is not a regular soldier until he does have them, but I got rid of mine in this fashion: I sprinkled my clothes all over with salt, then laid them down on a river bank. The cooties became very thirsty and got off the clothes to get a drink, then I pulled them away quickly. Nine-tenths of the cooties died from mortification and the other tenth from lonesomeness."

A FRIEND IN NEED. : : : : : : By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be only too happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Phonograph with No Records.

"I have noticed several times in reading through your columns that you have published small items for soldiers and sailors in camp when they are in need of entertainment or amusement. We have sixteen men in our organization, which is the signal corps detachment at this camp. Last week we had a new phonograph given us, but we have no records. There are many people that have records that would gladly send them to us if they have no use for them. We would appreciate it much if you would publish something to that effect.

To Complete a Diary.

"I am coming again to you for help. Could you print the headlines of THE TRIBUNE for the days of Nov. 19 and 20? I just discovered a headline that I ddin't have and wonder if you can give it to me. It is Jan. 12. I know this is a long way back, but it's a day THE TRIBUNE didn't come, as it was during that blizzard. I would appreciate these headlines a great deal, as my diary would not be complete without them, and I think that this is the year of all years when a diary should be complete.

Miss Barrymore's Acting; Items About the Players

By Sheppard Butler.

STUDENTS of the art of acting—which, of course, includes every one who permits his intelligence to share his enjoyment of the theater—will find it eminently worth while to drop in at Powers' some night this week, if only to hear Miss Ethel Barrymore say three words.

The occasion is the second act of "The Off Chance," and you are asked to imagine yourself in the lounge of the Gresham hotel—potted palms, a string orchestra off stage, and the precarious privacy of an all but deserted corner in an otherwise busy place. To this setting comes Lady Cardonell, in the person of Miss Barrymore, about whom you know merely that she is an Englishwoman of abounding health and a penchant for poker and the races, divorced some years back from an impossibly priggish baronet, and, to all appearances, supremely contented now in a second alliance marked by easy, happy-go-lucky tolerance on both sides.

Comes also the Duchess of Burchester, a slim, cool young person as played by Miss Eva Le Gallienne, driven to a desperation she bravely conceals by the goings-on of a restive husband who is about to depart for Paris with a blowsy dancer. You know, and Lady Cardonell knows, that the young woman is Lady Cardonell's daughter by her first marriage, whom she has not seen since babyhood. In the first act you have heard Lady Cardonell chatting of the newlyweds' difficulties and assuring folks breezily that they may just leave it to her to straighten matters out. The subject has been airily dismissed—too airily by far, you probably will have thought—and the prospects seem good for a particularly aggravated case of mother-in-law interference and consequent catastrophe.

But of all these things the Duchess of Burchester knows nothing.

WELL, there's a dramatic situation. The duchess, leaving the lounge in exasperation after encountering her husband and his dancer at dinner, is halted by Lady Cardonell, who has been obliterating herself behind a newspaper.

"But I don't believe I know you," protests the girl with the chill courtesy one uses at such moments. "Do you mind telling me whom I'm speaking to?"

A moment's pause. Then——

"I'm your mother," remarks Lady Cardonell.

"Remarks" is just the word. You know actresses who would have declaimed it. Miss Barrymore does no such thing. The little nervous rush which is the Barrymore habit all but robs the quiet words of intelligibility. It is as casual as if she had said: "I'm your housekeeper."

As casual—almost.

The difference lies in the vaguest suspicion of a catch in the voice, the merest hint of trembling in the lips, the haggard look that creeps into the eyes for a fleeting moment and is gone before you have fairly seen it. It's over in a flash and Lady Cardonell is chatting blithely of this and that as her daughter tries to piece together the world that has tumbled about her ears.

But in that flash three words have told you the story of twenty years' heartache and longing buried under the mask of blithe worldliness, and a sudden conviction that setting things right for her daughter is now the one thing on earth that really matters. It is all said as plainly as if it were spoken, and you know there isn't going to be any mother-in-law contretemps.

I may be rhapsodizing over a trifle, but I think not. It is such acting as this that makes playgoing a contributor to the storehouse of one's worth-while memories, instead of merely a device for whiling away an idle evening. Some of us, I suspect, will recall the distinction Miss Barrymore confers on this shallow little comedy when many a mediocre presentation of a great play has been forgotten.

FIGURES are always appropriately discussed in connection with the "Follies." The manager of the Colonial, moved to help fill the columns of one of the Gotham journals, writes to its editor:

"Now that the 'Follies' have entered upon what easily promises to be the best Chicago engagement they have ever had, it has occurred to me that you might be interested in some of the unusual circumstances attendant upon, and just previous to, the opening.

"For the first time in the history of a Chicago theater I was compelled to open two box offices in the Colonial lobby, with six men at work. This number of men exceeds any staff ever used at any sale before in Chicago, not even excepting the grand opera.

"At the close of business on the day the sale opened we had for the 'Follies' (including the mail orders) $11,000. The sale for the remaining performances of 'Jack o' Lantern' kept up all that day, and for Fred Stone that day we took in a little more than $5,500. So our one day's sale totaled about $17,000, the largest amount ever taken in in one day at any Chicago theater. Of this there is not the slightest doubt."

Speaking of the "Follies" and New York, they simply can't be kept apart. Beginning last week a phonographic record of Will Rogers' comments on topics of the day is being made each night as he delivers them in Chicago and the discs are then shipped posthaste to New York, where their reproduction becomes a part of the performances of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic." They say it cheers them immensely along Broadway.

Booth Tarkington has been so favorably impressed with Miss Alexandra Carlisle's leading man in the Tarkington-Street comedy, "The Country Cousin," that he has written a play expressly for his use. The actor in question is Alfred Lunt, not especially well known in any theatrical capital. As the story goes, Tarkington saw him once (the player having been a late comer in the cast), pronounced him "the most distinct and unusual person on the American stage"—one who "requires a play written especially to suit his peculiar manner"—and straightway went back to Indianapolis to perform the task. George C. Tyler says he will produce the play shortly, perhaps in the spring.

Mitzi, pictured on this page, is the exotic little entertainer of many mannerisms who used to call herself Mizzi Hajos. Chicago first saw her—and liked her—some years ago in "A Barnyard Romeo," a travesty on "Chantecler," presented at what was then known as the American Music hall. She comes to the Illinois tonight in "Head Over Heels," a new play with music which, as its title hints, has to do with the engaging adventures of one of a troupe of European acrobats. Jerome Kern wrote the tunes, which is a favorable augury, and Robert Emmett Keane, Charles Judels, and Miss Dorothy Mackaye are of the cast. There's also what is described as "an ensemble of girls."

Muratore's Migration; Tattle of the Tuneful

By Frederick Donaghey.

WHEN, seven or eight years ago, Rostand's "Chantecler" was staged in the United States, the amazing result was Otis Skinner's success, although he was not in the cast, and, on the night of the première, was elsewhere in another play. The critics for the Manhattan newspapers were agreed, after the performance, that the rôle of Le Coq fairly crowed for Mr. Skinner, and that the life of the play would be long in the land if he were in it. He has been for a generation of theater-going a de-facto star, and, most of the time, a popular and prosperous one; but not in his career has he garnered such another crop of swell notices as those printed to say how fine he would have been in the part which Charles Frohman, shrewdly mistrusting the play's commercial worth, had turned over to Miss Maude Adams in the belief that her clientèle would make good the costs of importation and production.

Through going away in mid-season, Mr. Muratore appears to have made a success not unlike Mr. Skinner's with "Chantecler"; for each day brings new testimony to the esteem in which the tenor was held in Chicago, and to his importance in the scheme of the Opera. His admirers now are so numerous as to make easy the calculation that their regular attendance, at box-office rates, on Mr. Muratore's performances would have been not only an influence sufficient to keep him among us, but also a definite and tangible quantity in lightening the annual load for the almoners of the venture.

I resume the theme because of whisperings and of hints that circulate to imply that Mr. Muratore and I were unable so to adjust and order our respective notions of art as to make felicitous a longer existence in the one community, and that he went away that I might remain. Now, although one of us is unimportant to art, the idea is, perhaps, neat, if a bit ornate; and it brings up the pleasant anecdote of the boob at an actors' bazaar who, seeking to know celebrities, said to Raymond Hitchcock: "I beg your pardon; but, aren't you Mr. John Drew?" and Mr. Hitchcock's delighted reply——

"No—I am not Mr. Drew; but I thank you, just the same!"

FOR the short and simple record of Muratore and me is, for all the purposes of this chatter, in files of THE TRIBUNE that run no farther than the last four weeks. I am not of the belief that he turned his back on the season, its fair outlook and bettering prospects because of some lines I penned and printed to say that he had been untidy in an episode on the stage; and, knowing him reasonably well, I am of the belief that he would have gone away about the same time regardless of the episode or of my reluctant reporting. I liked Muratore, in the theater; and, liking him, it had been my effort, at this desk, to make him happy there, and, so, to try to hold him in the meager category of the city's æsthetic assets. So good a singer for his especial job there had not been since Jean de Reszke; and he had taken to the rôles in his Auditorium répertoire most of the qualities the authors had in mind as they wrote.

But he was the Hamlet of tenors: unrest and hot suspicion sat in his path; and always and ever he found something to be rotten in the state of Denmark. He owned the equipment of an artist and the mind of an actor; and he could not get them into just alignment. One of the newspapers in New York told him, last winter, that he had erred in this or in that bit of singing; and only his Maker might have shaken Muratore's blazing conviction that the critic had been paid to say so by a rival tenor. I think that he tried hard to orient himself to American usage and American thought in such aspects of his calling; and I know that he did not succeed.

I am, for the selfish and the excellent reason that I reacted glowingly to most of his performances, sorry he is gone; and, besides, I know that he was a potent if unwitting force for morale in the comic, burning politics of the Opera. Other tenors studied and copied him for style; and the baritones and the bassos, too, furtively made use of him as a rendezvous of much that sets the French opera-stage apart in the items of formal elegance and conscious grace. The somebodies among the women cared to sing with him, for like reasons: Farrar, Mary Garden, Galli-Curci have said so. He knew his business; and he took something of value to most of the parts that enlisted his regard.

Muratore, himself, is not quoted as indexing me with the reasons why he withdrew; and that means nothing at all: no more than when he tells the reporters in Manhattan that he quit because his voice was responding viciously to Chicago's smoke and soot. As one seasoned in scrutiny of the theater, I should say again that the desolation into which so many mourners have been thrown by the tenor's going could have been averted nicely by the well-known process of paying five dollars at the box office whenever he sang. Had he believed in himself and known the courage of his gifts, he would have been, I think, a happier and a more successful performer. Though he never come back, he will be remembered: for his assets, and not for his demerits. Whenever I think of Gounod's operas, the Faust and the Romeo of Muratore will be in my vision; and I shall forever savor him as he was in "Pagliacci," although many there are who tell me that I was all wrong, all wrong in caring for him in that, at any rate. We shall thrill for a long time in memory of the stark sacrament he made of the Marseillaise: the spirit of France flamed for us when, togged out as Rouget de Lisle, he voiced its strains—never, in my hearing, on pitch, and always in a fervor which made us vow to go right home and learn the words, that we might be there when next he moved us to join in.

Muratore was, while among us, the master of his fate; and he was not the captain of his soul. And I'm sorry—more than you, or than you!—that he is gone.

MR. DAVIS, who writes on and about golf for THE TRIBUNE, rightly regards as topical the printed bill of a concert he heard on Jan. 20, 1892, in Kimball hall: his reason being that among the contributors of song was Miss Mary Garden. What she sang was something by Godard. The concert was the "first annual" of the Chicago Cricket Association; and it may be that others who took part are, in retrospect, of interest to some who read this. Among them were Mrs. Charles D'Almaine, Mrs. Edward Coulter, Miss Grace Senior, Miss Grace Jones, John Morley, George H. Kelland, and A. P. Broadfoot, who, Mr. Davis testifies, was quite a fellow among the Scots.

An editorial utterance in Friday's issue of THE TRIBUNE was rightfully hostile to the plan of breaking up the Great Lakes band into petty and punchless units, and dwelt upon

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A new anti-scalpers' law has just gone into effect. It imposes a $500 fine, or six months' imprisonment, on the person found guilty of selling a theater ticket for more than a 50 per cent advance on the price stamped upon the face of the ticket. Also the speculator is obliged to pay a $250 annual license fee to the city and is forbidden the use of the curbstone and darkened doorways as office locations.

This law will undoubtedly tame many of the speculators who have been running wild of late, but it is quite as certain to put this thought into the minds of the managers: If my attraction was worth from $3 to $5 to the public that bought of the specs it still must be worth the same amount when they are buying of me. And why shouldn't I get it?

Whereupon he is quite likely to order a reprinting of his first floor tickets, stamping those for the first ten rows $3 and the others $2.50. If his public stands for this he will add another 50 cents. Thus, if the new law works out as anticipated, there will be comparatively little change in the cost of entertainment along Broadway, but the theaters and the producers of plays will divide the excess profits in place of the brokers.

As a prophet my rating is not over an even 70, but, just the same, I this day predict that within three months the established box office tariff on the best theater seats in New York will be $3 and $3.50, in place of $2, which ostensibly is the present basis of bargaining.

At the Astor Fay Bainter has scored her fourth personal success in as many years in New York in a crude and quite disappointingly unimaginative comedy drama called "East Is West." Which makes the triumph all the more pleasing to Fay Bainter. You may recall that when she came east only the buyers from Toledo, Des Moines, and stock company points west had ever heard of her. To walled-in Broadway she was not even a name. Then followed a mild success in "Arms and the Girl," a greater success in "The Willow Tree," a personal hit in "The Kiss Burglar," and finally her present achievement. In addition to which I happen to know she has recently been offered enough money by the cinema merchants to keep her in sables all the winters of her life—and refused the offers. Refused, at least, for the present. More later.

"East Is West" is one of those made affairs which become Chinese by grace of costume and setting and the fact that all the orientals speak pidgin English. Miss Bainter's part is that of a fair young Chinese maid who, in the prologue, is dragged by her cruel father to a "love boat" on the Yang-tse, there to be sold to whomever will buy.

In a group of American tourists present is one Billy Benson, personable adolescent with ideals, and Bill is much taken with the fair Chinee. He would, in fact, buy her for himself were it not for the looks of the thing and the crushing knowledge that the folks at home would be most certain to object. He canot stand idly by and see her sold to another, however, so he induces his old friend, the honorable Lo Sang Kee, keeper of an art store in San Francisco's Chinatown, to pay the price and take the maid, called Ming Toy, home with him.

The play proper concerns the adventures of Ming Toy after she arrives in California. For a year she lives as a daughter of Lo Sang Kee, but allee time she is velly much inte'lested in Melican way. She takes readily to winking him eye at passing gentlemen, and the dances she sees in Kelly's cabaret, across the way, inspire her with a great desire to enjoy the freedom of Melican women. Of course she is in love with her friend Billy Benson, and luckily for her he happens along just as the civic reformers of San Francisco have decided that Lo Sang Kee must be rid of her, seeing that the young of the neighborhood are not safe so long as she continues to wink him eye in the window.

When Ming Toy is about to be turned over to Charlie Yang, the chop suey king, Billy Benson steals her and takes her home with him to become his sister's maid. There she just keeps everybody roaring with laughter until young Bill decides to marry her. After which there is trouble until Charlie Yang's Tong men come to reclaim her and the chief reclaimer recognizes her as his daughter. She is, however, only his adopted daughter, he having stolen her from a missionary. She is really none other than the long lost infant offspring of a thoroughly respectable American minister.

To overcome the handicaps of so shallow a story as cleverly as Miss Bainter overcomes them is to give further proof of a real talent and a personal charm that is, during its vogue, quite irresistible. She is assisted principally by George Nash, Forrest Winant, Hassard Short, and Lester Lonergan, who can hardly keep from laughing at themselves, but succeed in playing their parts very well. Samuel Shipman, part author of "Friendly Enemies," and John B. Hymer wrote "East Is West," to which the populace is just now flocking in crowds.

Rita Wellman's play, which continues at the Vanderbilt theater, was originally called "The Goy Wife," "goy" in Yiddish signifying the Christian wife of a Jew. At the last moment, however, Arthur Hopkins, the producer, decided the word was too obscure to be generally understood and discarded it, renaming the play "The Gentile Wife."

Emily Stevens is playing the heroine, an unhappy student of opera who falls in love with a young scientist and, after living with him while he is completing arrangements for their more or less secret marriage, marries him. On the honeymoon he asks her to meet his people, though he had promised her she would not have to, seeing that she had a fixed prejudice against "in-laws." At the same time he confesses his Hebraic origin, which she previously had not suspected.

From the moment she meets the kindly but excessively characteristic Jewish mamma, the patriarchal diamond merchant papa, and the young Jewish sisters, and more particularly from the moment she tries to live with them, the shattering of her love dream is obviously forecasted. Living up to the highest traditions of his race, worshiping his kin and his ancestors, David, the husband, places a barrier between himself and his wife that she is unable either to displace or forget.

In a moment of weakness and heart hunger, and while under the spell of a tempter of her own race, she walks into the garden where passion flowers grow, and as a result of that indiscretion, and her later confession to her husband, murder is done. David shoots the despoiler of his home and goes to the asylum for the criminally insane for the crime.

Before the completion of his trial a reconciliation is effected with the wife, and she arranges his escape. Together they are to sail for South America and start life anew. But when all the plans are laid, when the success of their adventure is a matter of moments, David's aged aunt, who is dying, calls him and he goes to her. By which act the Gentile wife recognizes again the call of the blood of Abraham and Isaac that shall always be stronger than any love in David's life, and leaves her Jewish husband.

I hear, however, that Mr. Hopkins contemplates a change that will make the ending happy—and meaningless—in which love shall conquer and racial traits and traditions be permitted to go for nothing. Miss Wellman [who, by the way, is a daughter of the late Walter Wellman, correspondent and explorer] presents her thesis with the conviction of a crusader, and her intent is evidently to treat fairly both Jew and Gentile in the discussion of this phase of their racial incompatibility.

COMING TO THE LA SALLE

Views, News, and Gossip

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, it seems, will not be at the Garrick next week in their new comedy, "Keep Her Smiling," as had been arranged. Instead, they will be installed at the Woods, following upon the heels of "The Crowded Hour," and the run of "Business Before Pleasure" at the Garrick will be permitted to continue without interruption. "Mr. Woods," it is explained, "will not enforce the rule of presenting his own attractions at his own theater until later in the season."

A new name appeared on the roster of the Great Northern players last week—that of Miss Celeste Scudder, who had been playing in vaudeville with Derwent Hall Caine and before that enacted the principal rôle in "The Bird of Paradise" in a company that toured Canada and the south. Miss Scudder's from New Orleans.

The Morosco production of "Cappy Ricks" has come to a halt down Boston way, and the report is that the producer has gone gunning for a typical cast to introduce the play in New York some three weeks hence. One story is to the effect that those seasoned co-laborers, Thomas A. Wise and William Courtenay, have been engaged for the leading rôles.

"The Better 'Ole," a much discussed bit of a play fashioned out of the war cartoons of Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, is reported to be due at the Illinois along toward the end of February. Maclyn Arbuckle will have the leading rôle.

"Dark Rosaleen" is scheduled as the next play to be staged by David Belasco. Its author is Whitford Kane, the possessor of some reputation as a stage director and actor, but not before known as a playwright.

Frank Craven as Robert Street in "Going Up" at Cohan's Grand is forced to make a flight in an aeroplane. A mechanician, named Robinson, has been engaged to give him some flying lessons, and Street's friend, Hopkinson Brown, asks Robinson (who weighs in the neighborhood of 400 pounds), "How would you start to teach Bobby to fly?"

ROBINSON—I can teach him to fly right here in this room.

BROWN—In this room?

ROBINSON—Yes, and then he can polish up on the real machine.

BROWN—How would you begin?

ROBINSON—I'll show you. All stand and please get me a whole lot of chairs.

BROWN—What for?

STREET—He wants to sit down.

Impending joys:

"The Little Teacher," the last of the plays by the late Harry James Smith, at the Olympic, Jan. 12. Mary Ryan is the schoolma'am.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew (of the movies) in a spoken comedy called "Keep Her Smiling" at the Woods Jan. 12.

"Tiger Rose," a Belasco melodrama of the Canadian northwest, at Powers' Jan. 13. Lenore Ulric plays the name part.

"Chu Chin Chow" at the Auditorium Jan. 27.—Marjorie Wood will have the slave girl rôle played in the east by Florence Reed.

Playbills of the Week

OPENINGS.

Illinois—Mitzi and a populous company of singers and dancers in "Heads Over Heels," a play with music by the deft Mr. Kern, who was responsible for the melodies of "Oh, Boy!" and "Leave It to Jane." First time tonight.

Cort—"Old Lady 31," a comedy by Rachel Crothers, with Miss Effie Ellsler, famous in another generation, playing the leading rôle. The play served for two seasons as a vehicle for Miss Emma Dunn, but for some obscure reason Chicago didn't see it. Father, perhaps, will remember Miss Ellsler. For many years she enjoyed high favor as the actress of "Hazel Kirke." First time tonight.

Miss Blanche Ring
at the PALACE

La Salle—"See You Later," a new musical comedy by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse, and Gene Schwartz. The players include T. Roy Barnes, Victor Moore, Miss Frances Cameron, Miss Katherine Stewart, George Graham, and Robert O'Connor. First time Saturday night.

DRAMA.

Powers'—Miss Ethel Barrymore in "The Off Chance," a mediocre English comedy given distinction by the brilliant playing of Miss Barrymore and her associates. Last week.

Blackstone—Miss Laurette Taylor in "Happiness," a delightful play, well acted by an excellent company.

Studebaker—"The Copperhead," an uneventful play by Augustus Thomas, with power and creative realism in the acting of Lionel Barrymore.

Garrick—"Business Before Pleasure," another of the Potash and Perlmutter plays, featuring Alexander Carr and Barney Bernard. On the whole, the best of the series.

Woods'—"The Crowded Hour," a distinctive war play somewhat shattered as to cast by the transfer to New York of several of the players. Last week.

Olympic—"Three Faces East," an ingenious mystery play. Last week.

Princess—"She Walked in Her Sleep," a clever and laugh provoking farce by Mark Swan.

Victoria—"Eyes of Youth," with Miss Mabel Brownell.

National—"The Bird of Paradise," with Miss Florence Rockwell.

Imperial—"Fair and Warmer."

WORDS AND MUSIC.

Colonial—"The Ziegfeld Follies." We expect them every year and they're always just what we expect.

Cohan's Grand—"Going Up," a musical comedy with the best music current in the theater.

VAUDEVILLE.

Majestic—Miss Eva Tanguay, Little Billy, Jonani and Berry, and others.

Palace—Miss Blanche Ring, James J. Morton, James Watts, etc.

Rialto—Leigh Delacy and company, Karsey's marimbaphones, and others, who play in the "continuous."

McVicker's—"The Winter Garden Revue of 1919" heads the bill.

Great Northern—The Great Northern players in "The Bishop's Candlesticks"; Miss Leila Shaw and others.

Wilson Avenue—Miss Emma Carus, Walter Leopold, et al.

BURLESQUE.

Columbia—"Cheer Up, America," with Miss Frankie Niblo.

Star and Garter—Irwin's Big Show.

TRAVEL.

Orchestra Hall—Mr. Newman on "Wartime England."

POP. MAT. THURS.

To The Theater-Going Public of the City of Chicago:

An event of far-reaching importance, never before equaled in the history of the city of Chicago, is about to take place in the near future in this city.

For the past six months we have been endeavoring in vain to make some arrangements whereby we could bring to the city of Chicago the world's most beautiful production, the world-famous and wonderful "CHU CHIN CHOW," the gigantic musical extravaganza of the Orient, which we presented all of last season at the Manhattan Opera House and Century Theatre in New York.

The prime difficulty encountered in bringing this colossal theatrical production to Chicago was to find a stage large enough to hold the enormous scenic equipment and to find a place with sufficient dressing rooms for the 300 people employed in its presentation.

The stages of the leading theatres of Chicago, large as they are for ordinary attractions, could not hold one-third of the immense scenic equipment of "Chu Chin Chow."

Of course the ideal home for "Chu Chin Chow" is the AUDITORIUM THEATRE. But the season of Grand Opera made it impossible to settle negotiations until the END OF THE GRAND OPERA SEASON WAS IN SIGHT.

We are now happy to announce that we have just concluded arrangements with M. Cleofonte Campanini and the Chicago Opera Association, whereby immediately after the close of the Grand Opera Season at the AUDITORIUM we will present "CHU CHIN CHOW" there for a limited engagement, beginning MONDAY NIGHT, JANUARY 27.

"Chu Chin Chow" is a musical extravaganza of the Orient, produced three years ago by Oscar Asche, at His Majesty's Theatre, London, in association with the late Sir Herbert Tree. It was the last production sponsored by Sir Herbert before his unfortunate death. "Chu Chin Chow" has been running continuously for more than three years in London and is still playing to capacity there.

"Chu Chin Chow" was brought to America one year and three months ago, every scene and costume having been exactly duplicated in London under the personal direction of Mr. Asche. Every detail of the production, DOWN TO THE VERY LAST SPANGLE, has been accurately reproduced in America.

On the night of the first performance of "Chu Chin Chow" in America, October 22d, 1917, at the Manhattan Opera House in New York, many patrons paid as high as FIFTY DOLLARS for a single ticket, so great was the demand for seats.

"Chu Chin Chow" is in fourteen scenes, presented by a company of 300 people, and is positively the biggest and most expensive attraction ever sent on tour in the history of theatres in America.

For this notable engagement of "CHU CHIN CHOW" at the AUDITORIUM THEATRE, beginning MONDAY NIGHT, January 27, MAIL ORDERS will now be received. Prices, evenings (including Sunday) and Saturday Matinee, 50 cents to $2.50. Popular Matinee every Wednesday, 50 cents to $1.50. Make remittance payable to AUDITORIUM THEATRE, and enclose self-addressed stamped envelope for return of tickets.

The forthcoming engagement of "Chu Chin Chow" at the Auditorium Theatre will be the biggest theatrical event ever known in the history of theatres in Chicago.

(Signed) WM. ELLIOTT, F. RAY COMSTOCK, MORRIS GEST,
Producers of "Chu Chin Chow" (per Morris Gest).

Mary Garden as Carmen

Miss Garden will be heard again in Bizet's great opera for her second appearance of the season, an extra on Thursday. In the oft-expressed belief of "The Tribune's" musical roundsman, her Carmen is a logical reason for paying five dollars to see Mary Garden.

the stimulating services of the tromboning cadets in stirring up and fortifying wartime morale. John Sousa, who reënlisted for the needed work of organizing and instructing the boys, is preparing to resume his professional pastimes as the hetman of his own band. He was ill when he left Chicago, two days before the armistice was signed, to take the Battalion Band from Great Lakes to Toronto; and the trip into Canada was of so little benefit to him that until a week or so ago he had been classified as a casualty.

To Sousa's services at the Lake Bluff station was due, without question, the fresh and fine interest in the value of music for the men betrothed to battle; and that interest went east from Chicago to beyond the fringes of the fleet and into the heart of our cantonments and camps in France.

"Gismonda," the new opera by the composer of "Monna Vanna," is to be staged a week from Tuesday. Vis-à-vis, with Miss Garden, will be Mr. Fontaine, in the rôle which Melbourne Macdowell played when the late Fanny Devenport gave Sardou's furious melodrama in the United States. Twelve other singers will be in it—Maguenat, Journet, Huberdeau, Dua, Proctor, and, for her debut in opera, Fredericka Gerhardt Downing the contralto. Campanini will conduct.

Concerts and Recitals

HELEN STANLEY comes as soloist and Ossip Gabrilówitsch as conductor for the twelfth Friday-Saturday program of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. She is to sing arias by Debussy and Saint-Saëns. Mr. Gabrilówitsch, in his new aspect as a batonist, is to concern himself with Brahms' first symphony, Tschaikowsky's fantasia called "Francesca da Rimini," Saint-Saëns' "The Spinning-Wheel of Omphale," and the overture to Smetana's "The Bartered Bride."

The Orchestra, under Mr. DeLamarter, plays tomorrow at Great Lakes.

Today.

3:30—Yolando Mérö, the pianist, in recital: her first. Orchestra hall.

3:00 and 4:15—Chicago Concert Ensemble: twelfth program. Fullerton hall.

Tuesday.

11:00—Gabrielle Gills, soprano, and Efrem Zimbalist, the violinist, in recital: fourth in Miss Kinsolving's series. Blackstone hotel.

8:15—Pietro A. Yon, organist, in recital: his first time in Chicago. St. Patrick's church.

Thursday.

4:30—Organ recital by Edwin Stanley Seder. No fee. Fourth Presbyterian church.

8:15—Florence Ffrench, soprano, and Earl Blair, pianist, in recital: Miss Ffrench's first. Edgar Nelson is her accompanist. Orchestra hall.

Opera: Eighth Week

AN opera new to the United States, Alfredo Catalina's "Loreley," is an item in the eighth week of Mr. Campanini's Chicago season of ten. The piece, which is staged for the special uses of Rosa Raisa, deals with the Rhine legend suggested by the title. Garden's Carmen will be heard for the first time in a year, with Fontaine as Don José, and little Miura unexpectedly comes back for another hearing as Butterfly. Raisa's notable Aïda, too, is listed again.

The arrangement of operas and singers is:

8:00 Monday—"Loreley," with Raisa, Macbeth, Dolci, Rimini, Mr. Lazzari. Mr. Polacco, conductor.

8:00 Tuesday — "Manon" (second time), with Gall, Fontaine, Huberdeau, Maguenat, and cast as before. Mr. Hasselmans, conductor.

8:00 Wednesday—"Werther" (second time), with O'Sullivan, Pavloska, Sharlow, and cast as before. Mr. Hasselmans, conductor.

8:00 Thursday—"Carmen" (third time), with Garden, Fontaine, Baklanoff, Sharlow, and others as before. Mr. Hasselmans conductor.

8:00 Friday—"Madama Butterfly" (third time), with Miura, Pavloska, Lamont, and cast as before. Mr. Polacco, conductor.

2:00 Saturday—"Monna Vanna" (second time), with Garden, O'Sullivan, Baklanoff, and cast as on Friday last. Mr. Charlier, conductor.

8:00 Saturday—"Aïda" (third time), with Raisa, Dolci, Van Gordon, Rimini, Arimondi, Mr. Lazzari, Noe. Mr. Polacco, conductor.

I KNOW of nothing more sure to draw your attention to this column on a Sunday morning than to flaunt the name of Tom Moore before your casually glancing eyes. If you are a fan at all—especially a feminine fan—you won't be able to resist pausing to see just what the news is regarding him. It's good news this time, so read on, read on!

You've seen this picturesque Irishman in a variety of rôles, ranging from society youth to chauffeur. He now adds to his collection a sheriff's star, accompanied by the sombrero, leggings, and spurs, suposedly worn by all such wild western officials.

Not that he was born into sheriffocracy! Heavens, no; anything but that! He's the son of a noted eastern financier, president of various important concerns, and has for a mother a lovely and patrician lady, beautifully portrayed by Mollie McConnell. (I love that Mollie McConnell!)

A little difference with father arouses the fighting blood in young Dick Latham and leaving home, father, mother, and all of his belongings, save one suit consisting of white trousers and white sweater—and some undies I presume—he sets forth for Frisco. He leaves a note, being a sarcastic reminder to his father that the suit he wears has been bought with his own money won at a polo match. His mode of transportation is the much abused freight car, which in pictures always carries everything but freight.

Well, he doesn't get quite to Frisco, but lands instead in a sinful little burg controlled by an outlaw outfit that has for its silent partner one of the leading lights of the town. This light, whose name is Hugh Godson, believing that in the young stranger is a sheriff he could use, causes the boy to be appointed to that position upon the resignation of the present incumbent. Never so fooled in his life was this Mr. Hugh Godson! He elected a sheriff and he got a sheriff, and a real sheriff was just the one thing on earth he did not want!

Well, there's a girl on a ranch near by. She's a very pretty girl and lives with her father. They have been receiving offers from Godson to buy their ranch. The girl urges her father to sell, as they are badly in need of money, but dad, wise in his day and generation, is rendered suspicious by the large sum offered and thinks he'll hedge awhile until he finds out just what makes his little old last year's property so valuable all of a sudden.

Well—along comes this sheriff—which is all I'm going to tell you about the story.

"Go West, Young Man," is just the kind of a picture I think you'll all be sure to like. It has humor, romance, lots of outdoors, a pretty girl, Tom Moore, and a cracking supporting cast. Harry Beaumont, formerly with Essanay, directed it and has done just as well in the present case as he did with "Thirty a Week," which, you know, was some picture.

Nazimova's coming picture, "The Red Lantern," will have a Chinese background. Much of its action will take place in a quaint coffin shop in Peking, and the settings of this were completed for the screen only after months of earnest research, the idea being to make the picture a replica of the original in China.

Been wondering where William Garwood is? He is working on his raisin ranch in Chowchilla, Cal. Onions used to be his fad.

Mabel Normand says she is responsible for Charles Chaplin's getting into pictures. "I saw him one night at Hammerstein's Victoria," she said, "and went straight out and telegraphed Sennett to get him."

"Charlie needn't try throwing pies around home," says Mrs. Charles Chaplin. "I not only eat pies, I make them, and woe unto him if he tries any funny business around my kitchen!" She's starting right in to train him up in the way he should go, isn't she?

Have you noticed, when they Need a certain player for a play, how
They go right out and borrow
From the studio 'cross the way?
Borrow leads and borrow extras,
Stars and villains give and get?
But no one has Ever borrowed Charles or Bill
Or Mary—yet!

Charles Chaplin was recently visited in his Hollywood studio by Axel, Prince of Denmark.

The Thomas Santschi fans will be glad to hear that he is soon to be seen in the Mitchell Lewis production, "Code of the Yukon."

We await with considerable impatience the debut of Mr. Thomas Moore as a cowboy, which he will be in his coming picture "Go West, Young Man."

Bert Lytell has announced his intention to raise live stock during screen productions. He's been raising grapes but he finds this too tame, he says.

Metro tells me that the plays of the late Harold Lockwood are greatly in demand. His popularity it seems did not wane with his life.

They tell me that Earle Williams made a name for himself in Los Angeles recently. He acquired a good old fashioned cold and never once referred to it as the "flu."

There's a new photoplay company known as the Plimpton-Fischer Photoplays, Inc., that announces as a novel policy that it will absolutely produce its features without stars. The first picture has already been filmed at the Plimpton Epic Pictures studios in Sherwood Park, Yonkers, N. Y., and is now being assembled. The cast includes Dixie Lee, Ashton Newton, Vincent Coleman, Frances Ne Moyer, Virginia Thorne, Harold Salter, Frank Readich and Charles Martin. Ever hear of any of them before?

Monroe Salisbury is growing a beard. His press agent says he is. He will probably murder his press agent.

Enid Bennett has just signed a new two year contract with Thomas H. Ince. So has Dorothy Dalton.

Winifred Westover has returned to comedy. Not so long ago she vowed never to forsake the drama. Fatty Arbuckle, however, was needing a film sweetheart and, being both willing and able to pay well for this commodity, Miss Westover decided it was up to her to be it.

Charles Ray has a lame right arm, due to strenuous pitching in the base ball story on which he has been working.

Vitagraph will show Alice Joyce in "The Lion and the Mouse" in February. Sounds interesting.

She Belongs Here

Florence Ffrench

Miss Ffrench is to be heard in recital, her first, on Thursday night. Her program ranges from Handel and Giordano to Foudrain, Puccini, and John Carpenter, and takes in a group of songs Irish in sentiment. She has been engaged for next season as a soprano of the Chicago Opera.

Comment by Mme. X.

New Year Greeted by Gay Parties at Home and Club

By Mme. X.

MY friend, the professor of English at the University of Chicago, grieves over the seriousness of this col's recent exordiums—or is it exordii?—saying "Wherefore so pious?"

Swept by the wind of his criticism our literary bark was careening in lopsided fashion towards frivolity when another friend—noted for her gay outlook on life and her chic entertainments—blew us violently in an opposite direction by remarking: "You don't take your column seriously enough; you don' realize the influence you exert."

To the professor we beg to announce that the latest mode in Paris is "bas de soie gris," and that, while her pretty little French legs are clad in gray silk stockings, the true Parisienne blows her pretty little French nose on mouchoirs of any color but white.

The rage for these exotic hankies has spread to our own shores. So great has been the run on them that Gotham shops are said to be entirely out of them. But then Fifth avenue and the adjacent shopping districts are so glutted these days with wandering hordes with money to burn that the supply of all wares is growing low.

Public Places Packed.

Returned wayfarers report Mammon as ruling our famous metropolis. The great American public seems inclined to celebrate peace by extravagant expenditures along many lines. New York restaurants are packed with people. New York theaters ditto. And such plays! "Tiger, Tiger!"

To the gay hearted lady of the chic parties I venture to confess that could I indulge my propensities, instead of dwelling on the ornamental side in life, instead of mirroring matters social and emphasizing personalities, I should continually remind the world that amuses itself that it is but part of a vast picnic party, disporting itself in a sunny, flowery meadow—a meadow, however, surrounded by dark woods. And in those woods hungry, Bolshevistic wolves are darting in and out among the tree trunks, looking at the picnickers with glowing eyes and drooling fangs.

The picnickers know the wolves are there. A few talk of the restless pack and call attention to the howls, but a silent convention among the majority makes it bad form to make this lurking menace a topic of polite conversation. But such a line of writing in a society column wouldn't be popular.

Joyful Greeting of New Year.

Instead, let me record that not in four years has the new year been ushered in with such light hearts by Chicago's "socially prominent." Some greeted it at the Saddle and Cycle club, others at the Casino. The South Shore Country club and the Chicago Athletic club were crowded with merrymakers, while every seat in every restaurant in the loop was full, though report says the revelers were not as full as in previous years. The loop streets also were noticeably less noisy and crowded.

Aftermath of New Year's eve and strange relic of the customs of an earlier epoch was the lone reveler who on Wednesday at 1 p. m. was seen tacking down Rush street. Clad in evening dress, with a light overcoat thrown open, and hat set jauntily on one side of his head, this herald of 1919 carried a small tin horn. As he passed each of those aristocratic mansions—many of them melancholy reminders of past generations—he raised his horn to his unsmiling lips and earnestly blew a blast.

There were few to note his zigzag course, as the world mainly was at its midday meal. Whence he came and whither he went will always remain a mystery. It is highly improbable that such a figure will ever again pass down Rush street by broad daylight on New Year's day. He was the last of his kind.

Woman at Chicago Club.

The Chicago club, that supposedly impenetrable retreat of our greatest magnates, is reported to have suffered a severe nervous shock some time ago when a woman was seen one morning sitting in one of those cavernous leather chairs close to the window looking out on the Boul Mich. It seems that in the simultaneous absence of the door man and the desk man she calmly entered the club thinking she was going into the nearby Auditorium hotel. The mistake is frequently made by out of town folk, but always corrected before the sacred portals are passed.

This unknown dame shares with Mrs. Marshall Field the proud distinction of being the only representatives of their sex to gain admittance to the club. The latter, on a quiet morning when the club was comparatively untenanted, was escorted by a prominent member to the downstairs room where hangs Anders Zorn's superb portrait of her first husband, the late Arthur Caton, by many considered the best piece of work of its kind in this country. In it Zorn—a truly great artist—has outdone himself, and presented to the world a distinguished likeness of an American gentleman in the old fashioned use of the term.

Rich, handsome, genial, elegant, unfailingly kind, Arthur Caton has no successor in Chicago, though in his set and time there were other men of the same type, such as the late John Crerar, the late Col. Huntington Jackson, and the late N. K. Fairbank. What is there in modern times that tends to exterminate this species? The urbane, the ornamental, the polished in society is out of date.

Arts Club Favorite Resort.

The Arts club is daily growing more popular and its new quarters at 610 South Michigan avenue are getting to be a favorite rendezvous for both the fashionable and artistic folk—especially at the lunch hour, when the members wash down [illegible]li, spaghetti, and risotto with "vero vino chianti."

It is a favorite lunch place for men as well as women. Arthur Aldis, Robert Allerton, Arthur Eddy, Frederick Bartlett, Edgar Lee Masters, John H. Winterbotham, Rosecrans Baldwin, Hugh McBirney, Walter Brewster, and John Carpenter were often "among those present" last week.

The two exhibits now there offer for your consideration a great variety of style and subject. Miss Mary Foote's portraits and gay flower pieces are a strong contrast to Robert Jones' bizarre, fantastic water colors, sketches, and black and white studies in design.

Both artists were the house guests of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson for several days, and she gave a buffet luncheon for them last Sunday, when thirty or forty of her friends turned out to welcome her and meet her visitors.

Since her return from France Mrs. Ryerson has achieved much renown as a public speaker. Her simple narrative of her experiences in the war zone is better than the most elaborate oratory. She is alternately humorous, touching, and vivid.

One message her hearers invariably carry away with them is that France needs our help—though never by look or word asking it. The feeling that the French have for Americans is something Mrs. Ryerson especially emphasizes. We have not yet earned the passionate gratitude and affection they manifest toward us, but we must try to.

Mrs. Ryerson spoke in New York at the Colony club and at the Hippodrome, and in Philadelphia at the Bellevue-Stratford. Invitations to address meetings come to her from Milwaukee, St. Louis, and other midwestern cities.

When she speaks in public she wears her service uniform, a good looking costume, which, with her nobby little walking stick (the one that turns into a seat) makes a smart outfit.

Luncheon for Miss Barrymore.

Never did the charming Mrs. Colt—Ethel Barrymore—look better or more radiant than she does on this visit to Chicago. She has lots of friends here and is the "main attraction" at many social functions. Mrs. Joseph Coleman, an old "pal" of hers, is giving a luncheon in her honor today.

An interesting little group of foreigners passed through Chicago last Wednesday evening—the former Swedish minister to Japan, Count Bonde, two young women, the Misses Linden and Carlson, and two or three Swedish engineers.

Nearly a year ago they left Tokio to return to Sweden by Siberia and Russia. They got, with the utmost difficulty, as far as Omsk, a town in central Siberia. Finally, after waiting some time there, they were obliged to turn back and slowly and painfully retrace their steps to Japan Thence, via this continent, they are wending their way home.

Count Bonde is a cousin of Count Claes Bonde, who, four years ago was for some time the Swedish consular representative here and was a great social favorite. His present successor is Consul General de Goës, who, with his wife (a charming Australian) and his little son, is established at 1235 Astor street.

New Year's at Fairbank Home.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's New Year's day luncheons have been annual events for—well, I suppose it must be fifteen or sixteen years. The hours—for they are buffet affairs—are from 1 to 3, but the first guests usually arrive well in advance of 1 o'clock, while last Wednesday it was a quarter after 6 ere the last one made his farewells.

The guests come from the gold coast, the suburbs, the far south side, the opera company. They represent the smart set, the literary, musical, and artistic circles. There is singing and playing and much good talk, and there is really nothing quite like them in the whole course of the winter's festivities.

Last Wednesday—to pick them out at random—there were there the Hugh McBirneys, the David Adlers, the Norman Williamses, the Julian Masons, the Joseph Ryersons, the Weber Linns, the James Keeleys, the John H. Winterbothams, the Henry Harveys, the "Crans" Baldwins, the Augustus Peabodys, the Robert Carys, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Cecil Davis, Miss Helen Birch, Mrs. Henry Stimson, Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. William Prescott Hunt, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Miss Dudley, Eames MacVeagh, Robert H. McCormick, John Carpenter, Maj. Frederick McLaughlin, Willard Kitchel, Frederic Bartlett, and Robert Allerton, besides a hundred more.

It was with many a sigh last Wednesday afternoon that the friends of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Monroe sipped the delectable punch which for several years Mr. Monroe has brewed on Jan. 1 and for which he is justly renowned. It will be a long time before its like will be served again on the year's threshold—not until we in this country have learned the difference between excess, prohibition, and temperance.

In this connection it is of value to note that Maj. Frederick McLaughlin, just returned from the front in France, reports that almost without exception, as far as his experience goes, the officers and men in our overseas army advocate prohibition for Americans. Even the light wines of France hold danger for our soldiers.

Hackett to Speak in Chicago.

An ex-Chicagoan, once a vivid figure here, now a potent force in New York—Francis Hackett—is coming to town the middle of January to give some talks on matters literary and political, the first one to be before the Book and Play club.

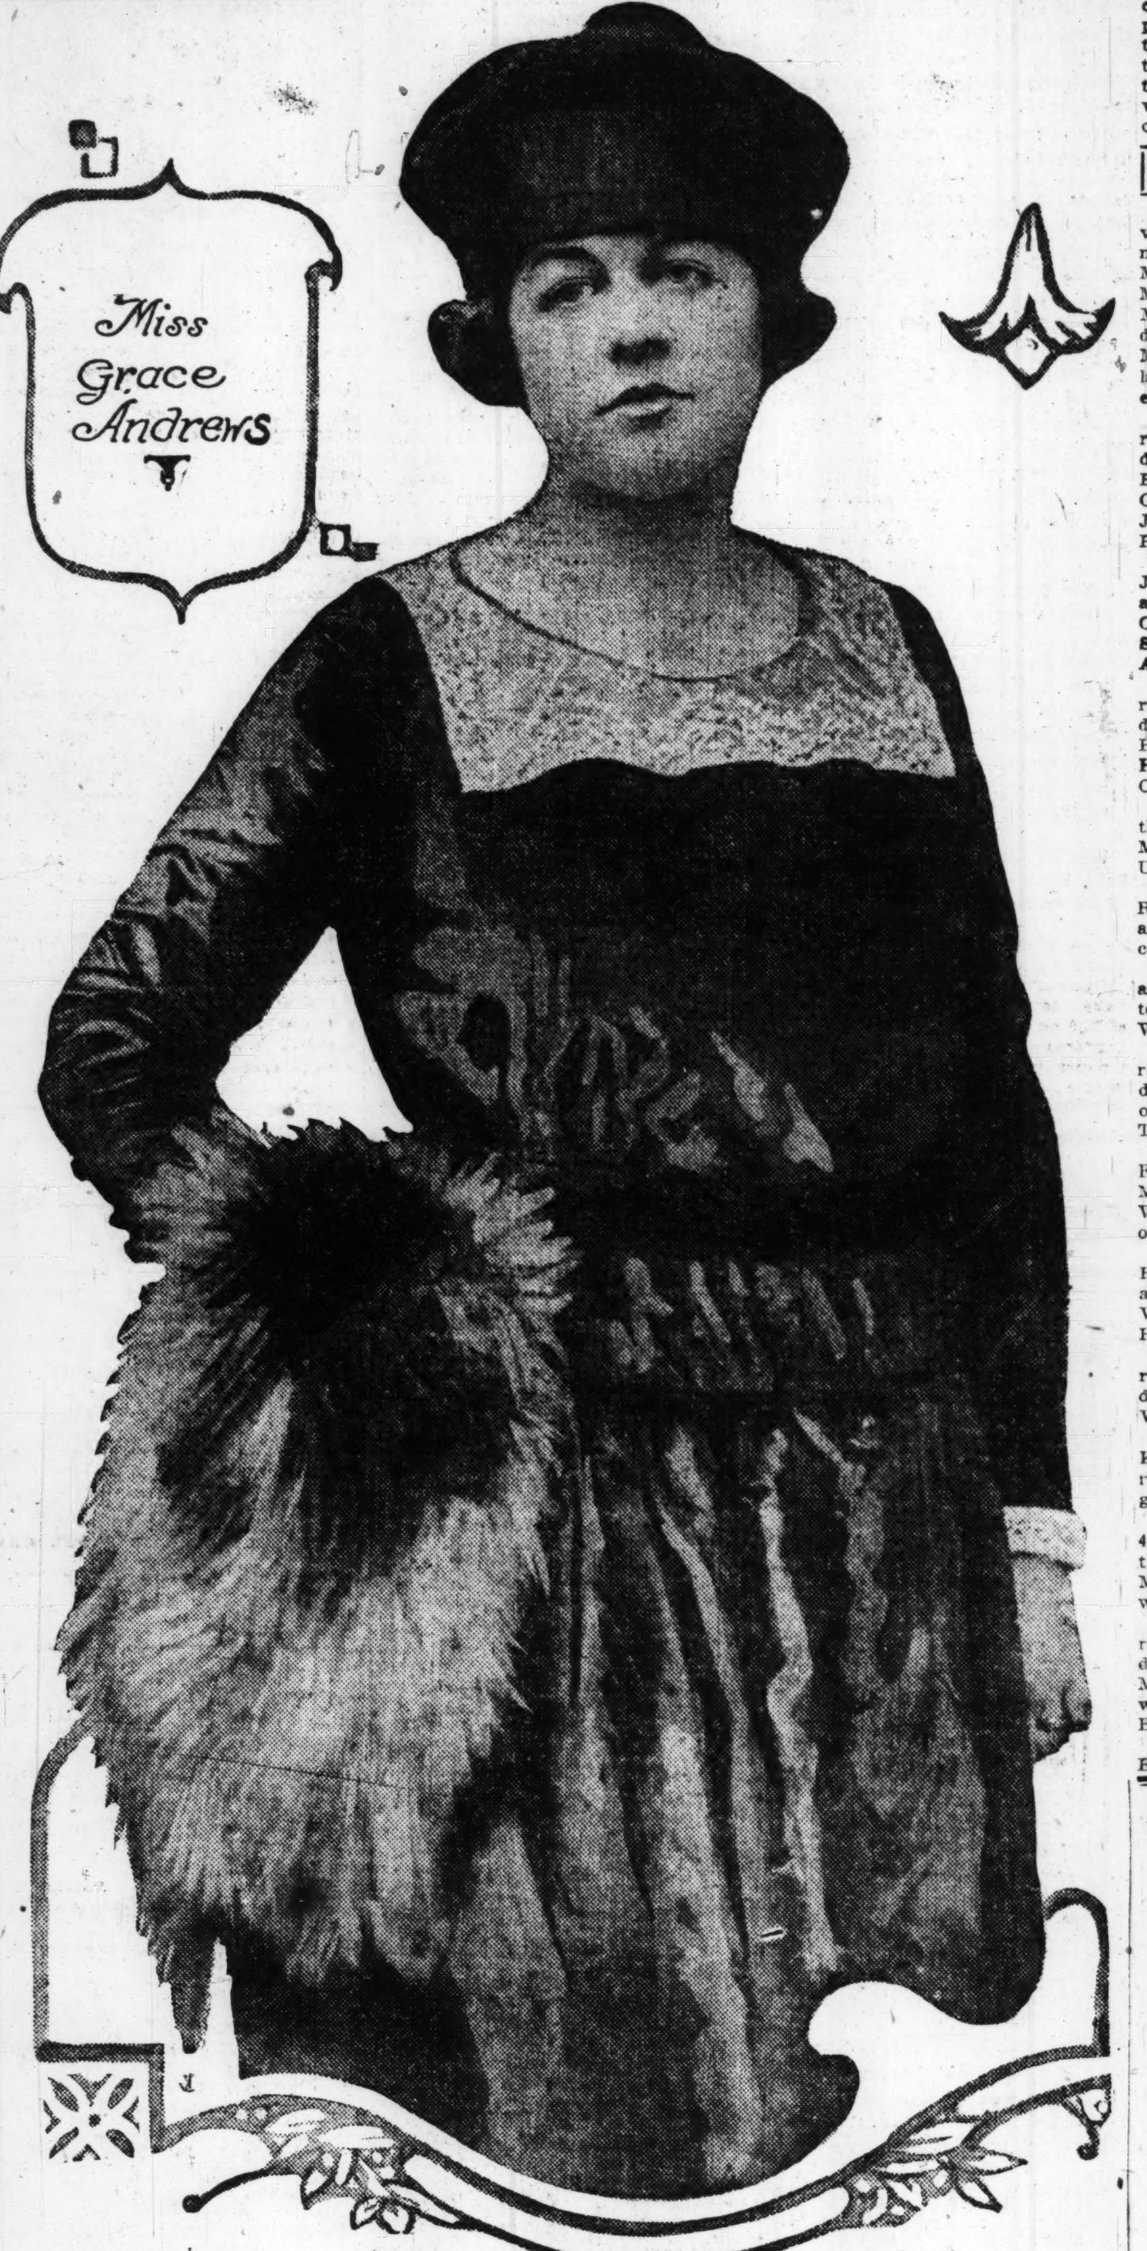
Mr. Hackett astonished his many friends a few months ago by committing matrimony, his bride being a lovely young blonde, a graduate of Cornell, whose name—Miss Signa Solveg—attests her Danish ancestry. She is of the moderns modern, and is said to keep her name of Solveg in preference to the good Irish name of Hackett.

In doing this she is following the footsteps of the well known South African writer, Olive Schreiner, who when she married a man named Kronwright, said: "I have made my name more famous than you have yours, therefore we will be known as the Kronwright-Schreiners." And they were. So far, however, Mrs. Hackett-Solveg's chief claim to fame is having married Francis Hackett.

Knitting needles are stacked and card tables are being taken once more from their seclusion. An important bridge event is the tournament being organized for Jan. 18 at the Casino by Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Robert Dunham, Mrs. Richard Fox, and others. The entertainment is for the benefit of the Red, White, and Blue club, that appealing institution in Paulina street, near Milwaukee avenue, which gives young Polish boys and girls a chance for happy, friendly, wholesome sociability.

The club was run a whole twelve month on the proceeds of a similar card party Mrs. Coleman and her aids organized last winter, and it will depend on the money raised by this entertainment for its coming year's activities. It is a great asset in the nation-wide Americanization campaign, which is one of the war's chief legacies.

A "Sub-Deb" Who Has Been Entertaining During the Holidays



Miss Grace Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene E. Andrews of 1210 Astor street, belongs to the "sub-deb" set which has been extensively entertained during the holidays. Miss Andrews attends school in Connecticut and will return there on Tuesday.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Hold Home Lines Is Big Job Now for All to Share

By Margaret Bentley.

[Social service department, woman's committee, State Council of Defense.]

THE next question is, What is it that the private citizen must do? Well, in a word, he must hold the home lines. The battle line is no longer endangered. Our men in service are no longer under fire, our people at home are no longer in fear of conquest. But, nevertheless, a thousand evil forces are still arrayed against our returning heroes and their last line of defense—the home.

There is nothing mysterious about this new peril; every one has been preparing for it in a general sort of way. But what some of us do not recognize is the fact that it is just as destructive to life and property as are shot and shell, and that, like the German menace, it must not be combated by ignorance and it cannot be defeated by inactivity.

This enemy is the social disorganization that always has been resultant on war and always will be—the unrest of a nation adjusting itself to new conditions, the excitement of victory which may play havoc with our youth, the reckless, uncontrolled thirst for adventure that may make juvenile criminals of our children.

How can we oppose all this? How can we meet it? Simply by providing legitimate recreation, by offering civic and domestic education, and above all, by making possible every form of Americanization.

If you have been rolling bandages and are no longer needed there, come and volunteer with us at the social service department of the Council of National Defense, 120 West Adams street; if you have been leading a group of Boy Scouts, keep on. When your war work stops come to us, men and women, soldiers and civilians. If by some strange chance you have never yet done any national work, don't lose another minute—it is high time you began.

There is nothing you can do that we cannot use in our splendid business. Can you play the piano, the pipe organ, or the piccolo? Have you a motor car? Do you like children? Can you sew? Are you a civil engineer? Would you like to teach cooking? What do you know about the legal profession? Are you a masseuse? Can you cure a child of stammering? Do you like to dance? Can you coach a play? Have you any money you feel you must give away? Can you sing? Do you know how to weave baskets? Can you speak any foreign language? How about a little sleight of hand or juggling? Can you teach? What do you think of doing something for a blind person? Do you prefer to make calls and do friendly visiting? Can you keep a group of active boys interested? Would you like to train yourself to be an expert (volunteer) social worker? Do you know how to trim a hat? Can you address envelopes? Would you like to get rid in a useful manner of your old clothes and furniture? Are you a doctor? Are you a typist? Are you an actor? Are you a kindergartner?

In short, are you an American? For if you are that we can surely use you, and, what is more, we should enjoy it, and we think you would, too. At any rate, come in to our office at 120 West Adams street on the fourth floor and talk over your opportunities, preferences, and possibilities with our executive secretary, Miss Curtiss.

Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, chairman of the woman's committee, State Council of Defense, has given out this statement:

"The woman's committee will continue its work with unabated vigor until peace is declared, ratified by congress, and proclaimed by the president of the United States. At that time the State Council of Defense will by law go out of existence and the woman's committee of the state council will also go out of existence. The woman's committee, however, as the Illinois division of the woman's committee, Council of National Defense, will continue its work just as long as the National Council of Defense, of which it is a part, continues in Washington."

All members of the club who have friends or members of their household who have not declared their intention to become citizens are invited to bring these friends to the clubrooms at 2 p. m. At 2 p. m. the sanitary district committee will meet at the rooms of the sanitary district board. On Friday at 4 p. m. the Americanization committee will meet. On Saturday at 9:30 a. m. the Americanization committee study class will meet. At 2 p. m. the public institutions committee will visit the Chicago State hospital.

The Chicago Association University of Michigan alumnae will have its holiday luncheon at 12:30 p. m. on Saturday at the College club. Under the direction of the president, Dr. Sara Craig Buckley, the association has remitted to Ann Arbor to the university trustees a scholarship fund to assist in the education of some girl from Chicago or vicinity.

Demonstrations will be given at the School of Domestic Arts and Science, 6 North Michigan avenue, on Tuesday at 11 a. m. on "National and Historical Soups," by Miss Ruth Hagerty; on Thursday at 2:30 p. m., and on Friday at 11 a. m. on a luncheon menu, by Miss Hagerty, and on Friday at 2 p. m. on "Cutting Food Costs," by Mrs. Elizabeth Williams.

On Saturday, under the auspices of the educational department of the Political Equality league, talks will be given on "Better American Speech," by Mrs. Katharine Knowles Robbins, and "Americanization," by Dr. Edward A. Steiner of Grinnell college, Grinnell, Iowa.

The Service League for the Handicapped will launch a "stump sock" drive tomorrow at the headquarters, 54 West Adams street, in charge of Mrs. Frank Allport, general chairman. Mrs. Chauncey Martyn, chairman of the speakers' committee of the league, will supply speakers for meetings. Fifteen hundred hand knitted stump socks a month are requested by the government for the men in hospitals who have lost arms and legs in the war and this number the league will endeavor to deliver. A model of the sock which has been accepted as perfect by the Walter Reed hospital at Washington will be on exhibition at the headquarters during the drive and an instructor will demonstrate and give information to all who are interested.

Girls Learn Art of Making Homes at This School

"REMEMBER, girls, if you know how to make yourselves and those about you comfortable you'll be much happier, have many more friends than might otherwise be the case." So the sister in charge of the domestic science school of St. Mary's Home for Children (Episcopal), 2822 West Jackson boulevard, frequently reminds her pupils. Not because this is the highest argument available but because it is an argument that appeals to comfort loving youngsters and because it is an argument that almost every one can understand.

The domestic science school doesn't give diplomas, but it starts every student out in life with a thorough knowledge of housekeeping and home making couched in modern terms and dealing with modern problems. At the conclusion of its two year course any bright girl graduate knows how to manage a home successfully; few but could manage a restaurant, lunchroom, small hotel, or laundry to good effect.

The least gifted girl is turned out an efficient household worker — which means much, considering the present state of the domestic service problem. Every girl, beginning with her first day in the school, "takes turns" at doing all the big and little tasks necessary for successful household management, keeping careful notes and understanding always just how and why she does things. Fortnight by fortnight she cooks, sews, serves in the laundry, makes out menus, plans and supervises the work of the establishment, does everything that the working housekeeper or director of a home must personally or vicariously accomplish to attain most satisfactory results.

The Domestic Science school has been three years in successful operation. Its pleasant living and work rooms, the spotless, airy sleeping rooms shared each by two girls, offer a capacity of fourteen pupils. There are at present but five vacancies, this being an unusual number. The pupils are drawn from many Chicago localities and widely varying social groups.

St. Mary's Home for Children, of which the Domestic Science school is an outgrowth, takes residents to the number of 125, from infancy to the age of 14. The residents attend the adjacent public school, and just what to do with them after their grammar grades graduation long remained a problem to the home authorities. A girl of 14 or 15 is too young to go out to work unsheltered, in the opinion of the sisters of St. Mary and their sustaining outer world friends and associates.

Whenever a resident of the home manifests unusual ability an effort is made, by aid of interested friends and benefactors, to continue her education. Several "St. Mary's girls" have gone through the Chicago high schools to Chicago and Northwestern universities. Several have become kindergartners, teachers, or trained nurses. But for the majority of the children cared for in the home such course is not easily possible.

The Domestic Science school originally was opened in order to keep the girls without personal homes and otherwise unprovided for in safe haven a year or two longer. Now it has become a fostering home and school for girls whose school life, for whatever reason, has been abnormal, though some normally educated girls are taking the domestic science course for purely economic reasons.

Parents or guardians of such girls pay $4 weekly for the room and board of each when possible, but where money for living expenses is not forthcoming the secret remains in the breast of the school superintendent.

LOOKING FORWARD TO 1919 AMONG THE CHURCHES

Financial Plans Suggestive of the Huge Budgets of the War Are Projected by Leaders of the Various Denominations This Year.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

[Religious Editor of The Tribune.]

Plans commensurate with the scale on which the war has been waged are being made by the churches for the year 1919.

Certain denominations have definitely announced their plans, while all of the churches realize that to meet the new day which peace has brought will require extraordinary efforts.

The Baptist northern convention through its laymen has planned a victory campaign which will end April 1, the financial objective of which is the raising of $6,000,000 for work outside the local churches. This will mean the raising of $2,500,000 more than last year.

The laymen were responsible last year for a special budget of an extra $1,000,000 because of war emergencies. An enlistment week, having for its object spiritual results, was held in many churches last November, but will be continued into this year because so many churches were hindered from completing their plans by the influenza epidemic.

For Ministers' Pensions.

The Congregational churches will seek to raise a fund of $5,000,000 for old age pensions for ministers. This is to be the permanent Pilgrim memorial fund, in celebration of the ter-centenary of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, Mass., in 1620.

The Congregationalists put on an every member drive on Dec. 8, in which it was the intention to reach every member of every church throughout the denomination. It was estimated by the secretary of the National Council of Congregational Churches that 80 per cent of the churches either did or will soon make the canvass and that there will be at least 100,000 more persons in the Congregational churches who will contribute to missions this year who did not contribute last year.

The Disciples of Christ completed last year the men and millions fund of $6,300,000, plus $1,000,258 emergency war fund, subscribed on the installment plan. This fund of $6,300,000 was begun before the war by a pledge of $1,000,000 by R. A. Long of Kansas City.

For next year the organization perfected by this drive will be utilized to obtain the estimated budget for general benevolent objects of $2,237,737.

Task of Lutherans.

The Lutherans completed last year the merger of the general synod, the general council, and the united synod of the south, forming the United Lutheran Church of America with a baptized membership of 1,250,000. The special task of this year, the leaders say, is to perfect the working details of the merger so as to produce symmetry and unity. Other mergers of synods are hoped for. A national Lutheran council has been formed representing synods which have a baptized membership of 2,500,000.

The Lutheran churches raised for war work last year $1,865,000. They plan enlarged missionary activity for next year.

The Methodist Episcopal church will celebrate this year the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the home and foreign missionary societies with a centenary program which calls for the raising of $85,000,000 in five years. The Methodist Episcopal church, south, is coöperating in the campaign, as the churches were one denomination 100 years ago, and will raise $35,000,000.

May Be Oversubscribed.

It is expected the canvass for the entire amount will be made next spring, and it is predicted the amount will be oversubscribed. The original goal for the Methodist Episcopal church was $80,000,000 and the $5,000,000 additional was added for the war emergency fund.

Some features of the centenary will be the utilizing of at least 25,000 four minute men to present to the churches the claims of the centenary.

In rural reconstruction 1,000 centers have been decided on for the establishment of community churches where recreational facilities will be installed. Several hundred thousand dollars will be used for the giving of a college education to returning soldiers and sailors. Other thousands will be used in reconstruction in France, where work has already begun.

Begun Ten Years Ago.

Preparations for the observance of the centenary were begun ten years ago by a survey of the entire field, home and foreign. The Chicago rally will be held in Orchestra hall Jan. 23 and 24, at which John R. Mott, Bishop W. F. McDowell, Bishop L. B. Wilson, S. Earl Taylor, Fred B. Fisher, C. F. Reisner, and other leaders will be present.

Another project of the church is the completion of its $20,000,000 fund for retired ministers, which has already reached a total of $15,000,000.

The centenary officially opened last evening with watch night devotional services in practically all Methodist churches. The year's program calls for extensive spiritual as well as financial results.

Presbyterian New Era.

The Presbyterians have organized a new era movement and will seek to raise a budget this year of $13,000,000. This will be an increase of 100 per cent over last year. A victory appeal to cover the budget will be made in the spring to culminate at Easter. It is planned to spend $500,000 on the returning soldiers who went out of Presbyterian homes and $500,000 for reconstruction work in France.

The Presbyterian church in the United States, the southern branch, and the Canadian Presbyterian church are coöperating with the northern church in a series of rallies in the interest of the war reconstruction program. Meetings will be held, it is expected, in Toronto, Canada, Chicago, Atlanta, Ga., and probably in Philadelphia.

Roman Catholic Plans.

The Roman Catholic church will be occupied in war work in carrying out the plans made possible by the united war drive, approximately $36,000,000 going to the church. Before the latest drive the National War Work council raised $24,000,000. One of the features in Chicago was the establishment of the Columbus hotel for the exclusive use of soldiers and sailors.

One of the achievements of the Catholics in Chicago last year was the raising of $500,000 for the Chicago Associated Charities. The goal set was $250,000. Next year it is intended an additional $1,000,000 will be raised for this purpose.

The dedication of the Quigley Memorial Preparatory Seminary will take place next June, and at the same time the diamond jubilee of the founding of the archdiocese will be celebrated.

Archbishop Mundelein is giving especial encouragement to foreign missions, and the work of such schools as the one at Techny, Ill., which prepares priests for the foreign field.

Church Federation Active.

The Chicago Church federation, composed of 600 Protestant churches and representing nine different denominations, has greatly enlarged plans for the coming year. The Rev. Herbert L. Willett of the University of Chicago was elected administrative president and the Rev. W. B. Millar will retain his position as executive secretary and both leaders will give their time to the carrying out of the program.

Permanent commissions have been authorized to deal with the following branches of church and reform work: evangelism, church comity, church and labor, public morals, international fellowship, and good will and advertising and publicity. The financial budget will be, it is estimated, $12,000.

FUTURE EVENTS

This week will be quiet, for all of the school girls and boys who have contributed much to the gayety of the last two weeks have returned to their studies and every one left at home is resting and recuperating from the holiday festivities. California and Florida are beginning to lure many people who already have had enough of winter weather, and every train that leaves for the south and southwest carries Chicagoans who are seeking fairer and sunnier lands.

Capt. Charles Merriam, who recently returned from Europe after making an extended study of Italian reconstruction problems, will speak at the South Shore Country club tonight on "Italy's Part in the War." Throughout January the club will continue its Thursday evening dinner dances as well as the usual Saturday evening parties.

E. Robert Schmitz will give a program of French music this evening at the Arts club following the regular Sunday evening Italian dinner, which will be served at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Walter S. Brewster will entertain at luncheon tomorrow for the chairmen of the Fatherless Children of France committees, who will be here to attend the conference that will be held tomorrow at Mrs. Brewster's residence, 1220 Lake Shore drive.

The winter series of talks on current events given by Mrs. E. S. Adams and Miss Julie R. Adams will begin this week. Mrs. William W. Gurley of 1416 North State parkway will be hostess to the north side class tomorrow morning; Mrs. Rollin A. Keyes of 1210 Forest avenue to the Evanston class on Tuesday morning, and Mrs. Charles S. Dennis of 4554 Greenwood avenue to the south side class on Thursday morning. At the meetings this week the problems of the peace conference will be the principal topics discussed.

The fourth of the Kinsolving morning musicales will be given on Tuesday morning at the Blackstone hotel. The proceeds of the musicales this year go to the Chicago Day Nurseries association. Mme. Grabrielle Gills, soprano, and Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, will be the artists on Tuesday.

M. Henri Fevrier, the composer of the operas "Monna Vanna" and "Gismonda," will speak at Le Cercle Francais on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. M. E. Robert Schmitz, the French pianist, will interpret several compositions of M. Fevrier, and Mlle. de Fremont, who has received the croix de guerre for bravery at the front line hospital at Verdun, will speak.

The charity ball for the benefit of the Illinois Children's home in Evanston, originally planned for Dec. 23 and postponed on account of the influenza, will be given on Wednesday night at the Evanston Country club.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Saxe of 2926 Pine Grove avenue will give a reception next Sunday for their daughter, Beatrice, whose engagement to Lieut. Sidney J. Blum is announced.

PERSONALS

Mrs. Chauncey McCormick and children of 1519 North State parkway will go to Miami, Fla., on the 15th of this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Willson have returned from New York, where Mrs. Willson went to meet Mr. Willson, who was returning from abroad. They are with Mrs. Willson's mother, Mrs. Archibald E. Freer of 1420 Lake Shore drive, for the present but expect to take an apartment soon.

Mrs. George M. Pullman of 1729 Prairie avenue will leave today for Pasadena, where she will remain for the rest of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gould Shumway left on Friday for California, where they will pass the remainder of the winter.

Mrs. Julius French Janes of Cleveland, O., is visiting Mrs. Joseph B. Long of 48 Banks street. Mrs. Janes will be here for about ten more days.

Lieut. A. Ballard Bradley, who has been stationed in Washington, received his discharge from the army about Dec. 1 and he and his wife and family spent the month of December at the Sisson hotel. They are now living in Winnetka, where they have taken a house. Mrs. Bradley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Shedd of 3812 South Michigan avenue.

Mrs. Robert S. Hotz, who spent the holidays with Mrs. J. Whitney Farlin of 1244 Lake Shore drive, returned to New York, where she is spending the winter, on Thursday.

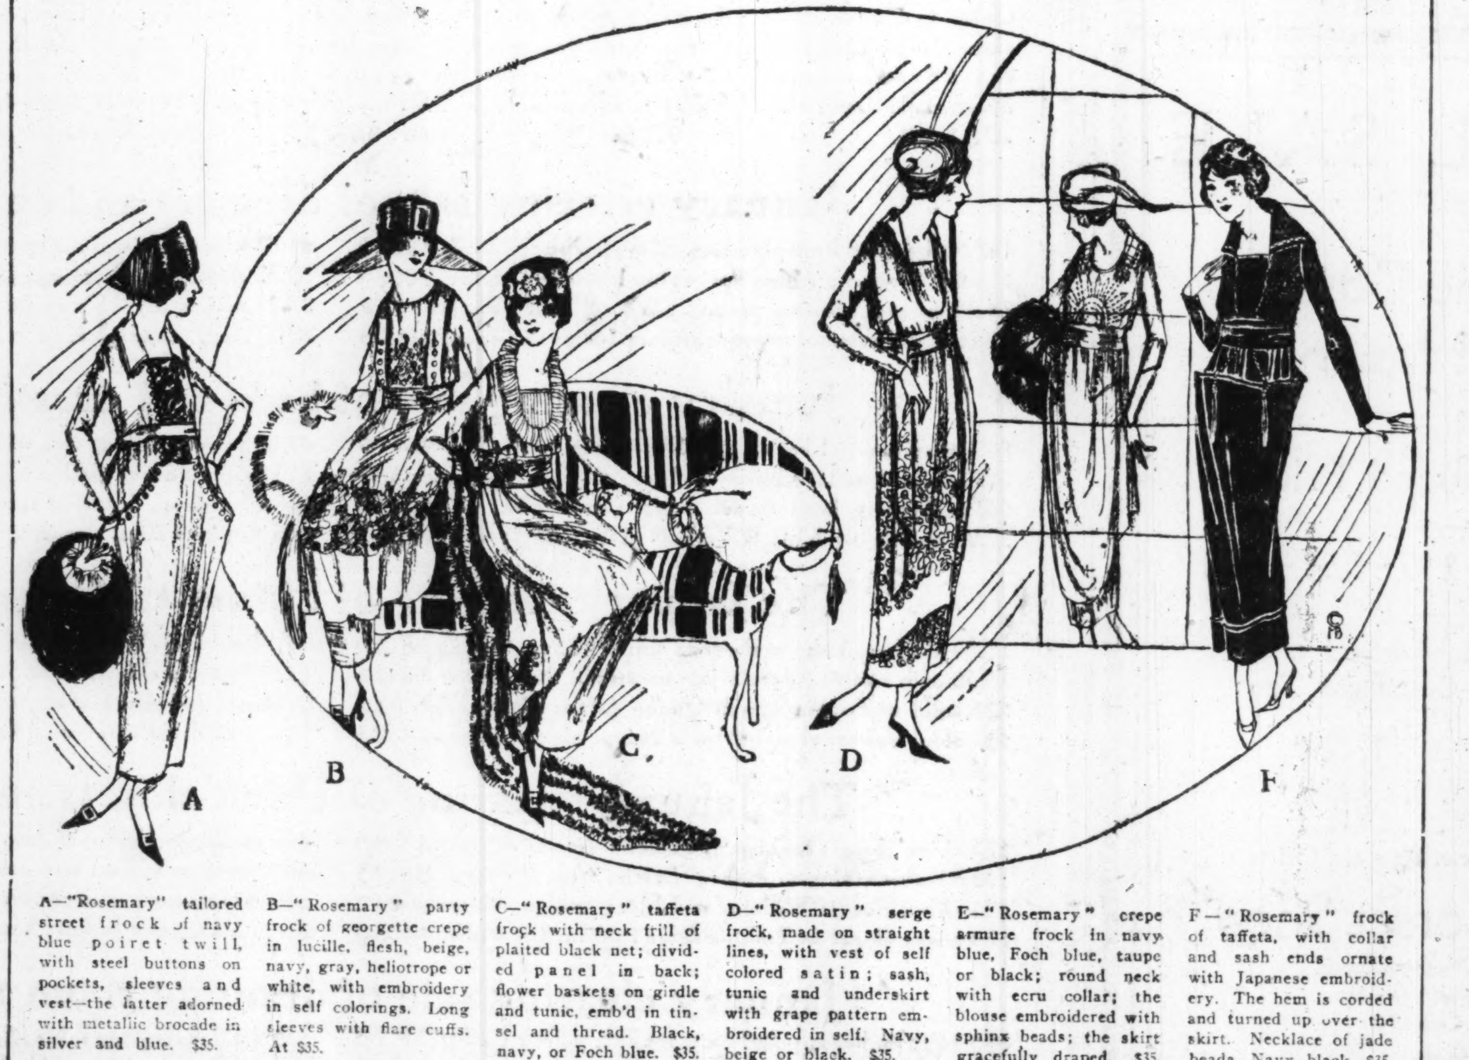
"Rosemary" frocks in springtime modes for women and misses—$35

—advance showing, pronounced in fashion interest

Realizing that the appeal of style, the charm of line, is most fascinating in its very earliest showing, the "Rosemary" dressmakers release, for immediate wear, six of their most advanced modes in the 1919 fabrics to be vogue for spring. A collection exceptional in materials, fashioning and needlework.



A—"Rosemary" tailored street frock of navy blue poiret twill, with steel buttons on pockets, sleeves and vest—the latter adorned with metallic brocade in silver and blue. $35.

B—"Rosemary" party frock of georgette crepe in lucille, flesh, beige, navy, gray, heliotrope or white, with embroidery in self colorings. Long sleeves with flare cuffs. At $35.

C—"Rosemary" taffeta frock with neck frill of plaited black net; divided panel in back; flower baskets on girdle and tunic, emb'd in tinsel and thread. Black, navy, or Foch blue. $35.

D—"Rosemary" serge frock, made on straight lines, with vest of self colored satin; sash, tunic and underskirt with grape pattern embroidered in self. Navy, beige or black. $35.

E—"Rosemary" crepe armure frock in navy blue, Foch blue, taupe or black; round neck with ecru collar; the blouse embroidered with sphinx beads; the skirt gracefully draped. $35.

F—"Rosemary" frock of taffeta, with collar and sash ends ornate with Japanese embroidery. The hem is corded and turned up over the skirt. Necklace of jade beads. Navy, black. $35.

However youthful its lines and motif, every "Rosemary" model is available in every size—for women, 34 to 44 bust; for misses, 14 to 18 years.

News of the Religious World

Goodell to Tell Evangelism's Part in Reconstruction

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE REV. CHARLES L. GOODELL of New York, recently elected superintendent of the department of evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, will speak tomorrow noon at Powers' theater, 124 West Randolph street, at a union meeting of ministers to which all laymen are also invited.

The meeting will be the first of the series arranged by the commission on evangelism of the Chicago Church federation. Dr. Goodell will describe the place of evangelism in national reconstruction. Announcements of the plan for the simultaneous evangelistic campaign in Chicago which begins Feb. 1 will be made at this time.

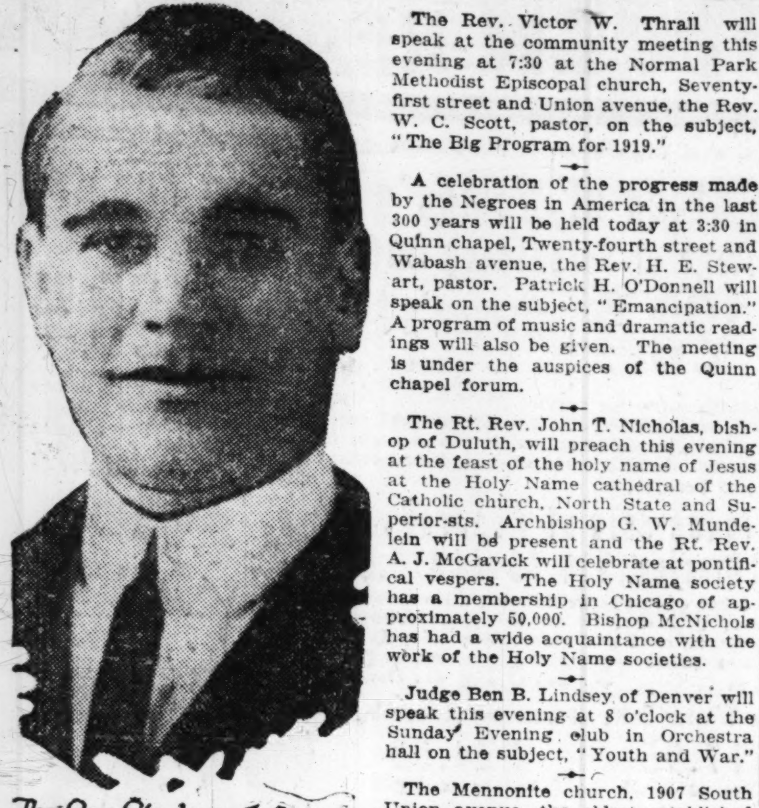
Dr. Goodell is the most widely known pastor evangelist in his denomination and one of the most sought for pulpit orators in America. He is the author of several books, among them "Pastoral and Personal Evangelism," "Pathways to the Best," and "Followers of the Gleam."

The Morton Culver Hartzell Memorial Methodist Episcopal church will be dedicated in Pasadena, Cal., with services beginning today and continuing through next Sunday. The church is named in honor of the late Rev. Morton C. Hartzell, formerly a pastor in Chicago, and who was widely known by reason of his crusade here against vice. He was the son of Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell. Dr. W. E. Quine, who recently deeded his residence in Indiana avenue to the Chicago Home Missionary and Church Extension society of the Methodist Episcopal church, also named his home the Morton Culver Hartzell Memorial. Dr. Hartzell was Dr. Quine's pastor when he was in charge of the South Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Hartzell was pastor of the Pasadena church for two years just before his death and raised $10,000 with which the lot on which the church was built was purchased.

The Rev. Arthur J. Francis, formerly pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church and secretary of the Chicago Community Trust, will speak at 10:30 today in the place of Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch at Sinai temple, Forty-sixth street and Grand boulevard, on the subject, "The Reign of Law."

The Oak Park pastors' union will observe the week of prayer with the following speakers in the First Methodist Episcopal church: Tomorrow and Tuesday evenings, Prof. E. A. Steiner; Wednesday, Prof. Cleland B. McAfee; Thursday, Prof. George L. Robinson; Friday, President Ozora S. Davis.

The Rev. Walter Hanning will be installed today at 3 o'clock pastor of the St. James' English Lutheran church, Drake and Wrightwood avenues. The Rev. S. P. Long and the Rev. C. R. W. Kegley will speak.



The Rev. Stephen A. Lloyd
HYATT PHOTO

The Rev. Stephen A. Lloyd will preach today his first sermon as pastor of the First Congregational church of Wilmette. He comes from the pastorate of the First Congregational church at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Mr. Lloyd was first fitted for the ministry in the school of hard knocks, having worked the eight years of his youth as a coal miner. He then went to Wyoming seminary for preparatory work, entering Syracuse university at the age of 24, where he graduated. He took graduate work at Columbia university and studied theology at Union and Auburn theological seminaries. He was ordained in 1903 and became pastor of a rural church at Plainville, N. Y. Before going to Poughkeepsie he was pastor at Cortland, N. Y. He had made a special study of child psychology and has been a frequent speaker at Sunday school conventions and before parent-teacher associations.

The feast of the Epiphany will be celebrated tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Church of the Fathers of the Blessed Sacrament, Sibley street and Oregon avenue. The sermon will be preached by the Rt. Rev. G. M. Legris of St. Viator's college, Bourbonnais. This will be the sixty-second anniversary of the first exposition of the blessed sacrament in the congregation of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

The Rev. R. A. White, pastor of the People's Liberal church, Sixty-fifth street and Stewart avenue, will preach at 10:30 today on the subject, "A Defense of Lot's Wife."

The Rev. Victor W. Thrall will speak at the community meeting this evening at 7:30 at the Normal Park Methodist Episcopal church, Seventy-first street and Union avenue, the Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor, on the subject, "The Big Program for 1919."

A celebration of the progress made by the Negroes in America in the last 300 years will be held today at 3:30 in Quinn chapel, Twenty-fourth street and Wabash avenue, the Rev. H. E. Stewart, pastor. Patrick H. O'Donnell will speak on the subject, "Emancipation." A program of music and dramatic readings will also be given. The meeting is under the auspices of the Quinn chapel forum.

The Rt. Rev. John T. Nicholas, bishop of Duluth, will preach this evening at the feast of the holy name of Jesus at the Holy Name cathedral of the Catholic church, North State and Superior-sts. Archbishop G. W. Mundelein will be present and the Rt. Rev. A. J. McGavick will celebrate at pontifical vespers. The Holy Name society has a membership in Chicago of approximately 50,000. Bishop McNichols has had a wide acquaintance with the work of the Holy Name societies.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver will speak this evening at 8 o'clock at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall on the subject, "Youth and War."

The Mennonite church, 1907 South Union avenue, the oldest established mission of its kind of the denomination, will dedicate its new building today. The church cost $35,000 and has been built by funds contributed outside of Chicago as the denomination is almost wholly confined to rural communities. The new building is two stories and contains a residence for the superintendent and mission helpers. This the first permanent building of the station, which was opened in 1895. The superintendent is A. H. Leaman. The sermon at 11:30 will be preached by J. S. Shoemaker of Freeport, Ill., and the dedicatory sermon at 3 p. m. will be preached by S. F. Coffman, Vineland, Ont. The speakers at the evening service will be C. A. Hartzler, Tiskilwa; W. D. Weaver, Elkhart, Ind., and I. W. Royer, Orrville, O. Three sessions each day dealing with mission themes will be held Monday and Tuesday.

The new auditorium of St. Paul's on the Midway Universalist church, Sixtieth and Dorchester avenue, the Rev. L. W. Brigham, pastor, will be opened today at 11 o'clock with special services. Its formal dedication will take place in the spring. The building is of colonial architecture and was designed by Coolidge & Hodgdon. It is the last of the structures which constitute the plant of the Universalists at the University of Chicago. Other buildings are the Swan Memorial library and the gymnasium and social hall.

An organ recital by Emory L. Gallup, in which will be played compositions of the modern French school, will be given today at 4 o'clock in St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, 1424 North Dearborn street.

Women of America!

Eggs keep going up. You feel that you've got to have them so you continue paying unreasonable prices. Now, Mrs. Housewife, you can do your part to overcome this condition by using SA-VAN-. It will take the place of eggs for nearly every baking and cooking purpose.

Boycott High Egg Prices By Using SA-VAN-

SA-VAN- is a pure, wholesome compound made of milk and grains. Wherever an egg is needed in baking, use one teaspoonful of SA-VAN- in its place. A 25c package of SA-VAN- contains 36 teaspoonsful. Use SA-VAN- and you will be quite independent of the egg market.

ROTHSCHILDS JANUARY SALES FOR 1919 OFFER VERY REAL BARGAINS

A Curtain Bargain! Sectional Lace Panels, Ea. 50c

Owing to the irregularity in window sizes, the demand for sectional lace panels is growing. Fifth Floor

This year we have made provision in our January sales to supply a large quantity of these beautifully designed curtains at a small price.

Though the variety is large we can illustrate one pattern only to indicate the character of the designs. The panels are nine inches wide and as many can be had as desired for the window width. The lengths are 2½ yards and the grades of net are not only substantial but some of them are worth several times the price. Choice at, each, 50c.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Work of Famous Designer Shown at Arts Club

Mummers are we—
  The world our stage
Where the same characters
  Pass, age by age,
Till Death for each
  Puts "Finis" to the page.

Child, youth, and man—
  Indifferent, bad, or good—
Our parts we play
  As it was ruled we should,
Puppets who dance
  In answer to His mood.

Scan you the centuries,
  A rippling range
Of years that mount
  Like some low mountains strange—
But see—Life, everywhere the same—
  The settings only change.

PROBABLY the most famous designer of stage settings in this country today is Robert Jones. To him is due much of that weird charm which enchants one at the rise of the curtain upon the Russian ballet. It is to him, too, that we owe the fascinating background against which the richly costumed characters in "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife" stand like so many more strokes of color from the same magic brush.

There opened last week at the Arts club an exhibition of Mr. Jones' work and of paintings by Mary Foote. A group of sketches drawn by Robert Jones for a recent Red Cross drive fairly haunts one. There is "Rapine," an ape with a huge, gaping, scarlet mouth; "Pestilence," a woman's figure dripping abominations from fingers and robe, like a gigantic snow idol of evil melting into impotency under the rays of a righteous sun; "Terror," a shuddering mummy wrapped in its death bands; and "Pain," a gray ghost with a clay skin drawn taut over her sharp bones, and ropes of ashen hair falling from the ghastly skull of her head. Surely these are horrors enough to trail in the wake of war.

A wall is devoted by Mr. Jones to his various designs for Til Eulenspiegel. The chateleine in particular is a gorgeous creature in flowing robes of yellow-green and a yellow, flaring, pointed hat that nearly touches the sky. Six scenes from "The Cenci" in black and white are of interest. Possibly the sketches for "Henry V." are the most vivid. In one is shown a fiery pit, a whirlpool of orange and red light, between two rugged mountain walls of Stygian black. A troop of soldiers are silhouetted against the glow, the long, thin blades of their bayonets charging the heart of that ungodly sky. It is an extravagant, wonder scene of war.

In a further gallery hang the paintings by Mary Foote. There are a number of portraits and a charming group of flower pieces. The blossoms call forth unstinted, unqualified praise, but the portraits cannot command such generous appreciation. Certain ones among them are good. To the rest it were more gracious to grant but a meed of silence.

The portrait of Mrs. John A. Carpenter is by all odds the strongest of the likenesses of women. The color and the composition, the atmosphere, the quality of the flesh tones, the lines of the figure, and the decorative setting are all excellent. Mrs. Carpenter is seated at a table. A cup of tea is near her hand. She leans a little forward. The red of her coat and the blue of her hat strike a note of unrhymed harmony that satisfies the sense of color, much as the crash of cymbals contents the soul steeped in the bland melody of uncontradicted harp strings.

The portrait of Jo Davidson, the sculptor, is masterly. There is another sculptor present in the portrait of Frederick MacMonnies, an artist who perhaps ranks second to St. Gaudens, the best known American sculptor. MacMonnies belongs to an older school than Paul Manship, being a contemporary of Paul Bartlett. The portrait is rather Whistlerian, inasmuch as it is an enchanting, unflattering caricature that lacks all touch of sarcasm or cynicism. One could apply the word "jolly" to it, were not "jolly" a term of doubtful aesthetic parentage.

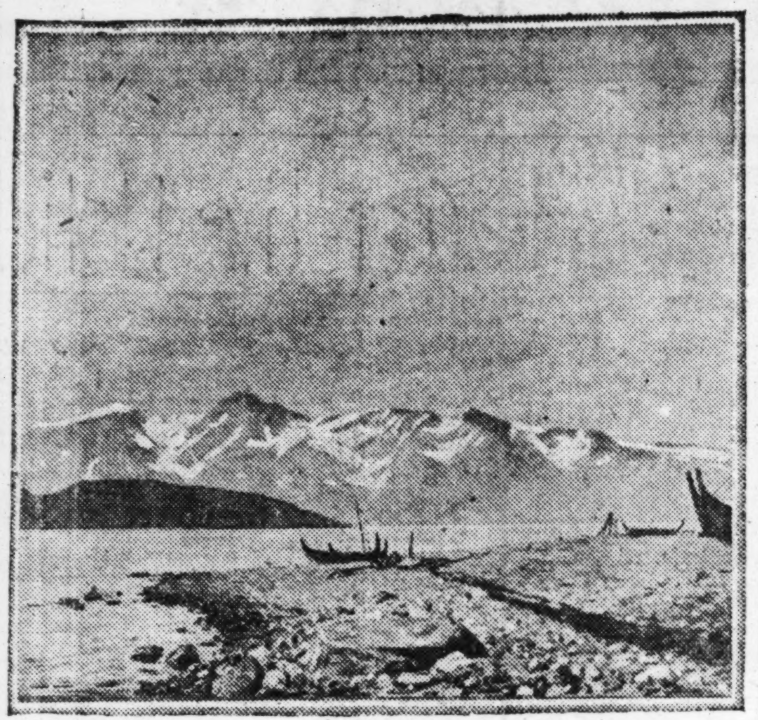
"William" is a happy hearted youngster in a fur cap, and the canvas showing little Janet Urie is equally charming.

There are two paintings of the nude. In one of them the lady is sleepily unconscious of her physical undress, but in the other the snake has tempted and Eve would, if she could, search the nearest forest for a robe of leaves.

The one man exhibit at the Palette and Chisel club is attracting much favorable comment. The pictures are the work of Carl Ouren. He has sought and found such spots of beauty in the parks of Chicago as I doubt if any but a painter's eye could have discovered. Certainly the average hurried citizen passing the thickets behind which these fantasies lurk, and keeping himself strictly to the paths, must have the wonders spelled out before him in print before he will grant them entrance to his crowded consciousness.

Mr. Ouren is a capital speller. As one passes from sketch to sketch in his exhibit the rare loveliness of each bit is doubled and trebled with the advent of every new twist in the painter's path that has enticed him to spread other wonder scenes at our careless feet.

There is a pool where lilies blow,
Around its waters iris grow—
And shadows from the nearer trees
Dance elfin dances in the breeze
Over the ripples, to and fro.



"Ulfs Fjord-Norway." by Karl Ouren

Rushes stand guard around this pool, lifting their slender green blades into the sun. A tangle of flowers waits the coming of belated bees and nectar drunk butterflies. Beyond, a grove of oak and maple swings sleepy branches in the soft wind that whispers like a caress at night over the heart strings of June. And all this beauty is found in Humboldt park.

One travels with Mr. Ouren to the Land of the Midnight Sun in a sketch or two. There is a desolate scene, grim and rugged, of Ulfs Fjord, Norway. A stretch of rocky beach lies by the sea and the pebbles are as thick as sand. The cold, gray tide of the North sea washes up against it, eating little by little into its heart. Drawn up upon the beach are high prowed boats, the fishing vessels of the Norsemen. Across the water loom snow covered mountains thrusting their rough summits into the cloud fleeced sky.

There is, too, "From Trondhjem, Norway," an enticing village with red walled, snow gabled and snow encircled houses. Lights make blue shadows on the white paths. Children are playing with a sled, their cheeks red as our winter apples, muffled in heavy wraps to keep that jester, Jack Frost, at a comfortable distance.

"Winter" is but a tiny color sketch in white and gray, but it is the loveliest of the winter scenes. A thin stream edges between white snowbanks, itself filmed with ice. Naked, brown trees, bearing a few yellow leaves, reach out from the white depths. Clouded shadows lie on the snow where the winter sun smiles.

Back to Chicago we come in "Boy Fishing in the Park." The canvas is full of warm color. A wealth of flowers and foliage makes a fairy waste of the distance. About the lake a path winds. Reeds fringe the pool, and other blossoms sigh their perfume into the bosom of the passing wind. The child is utterly content with his sport. Too much content almost. Verily he has captured a mighty denizen of the deep. He is bent double, dragging upon his pole, which seemingly an equally terrific pull is straining from him into the waters of the pond. One doubts this bit of by-play, but forgives it in the same breath, for its setting would make anything excusable.

The comission for the encouragement of local art has made its annual purchases of paintings for installation in public buildings and schools of the city. The pictures purchased from the appropriation of 1918 are: "A Morning in Maine," by Allen E. Philbrick; "The Golden Pheasant," by R. Fayerweather Babcock; "Along the Trail," by Frank V. Dudley, and a portrait of Carter H. Harrison by Frank A. Werner.

A number of exhibitions will open on Tuesday at the Art institute. Among them are an exhibit of medals by T. Spicer-Simson, paintings by Henri Caro-Delvaille, paintings by Jonas Lie, paintings by Louis Kronberg, paintings arranged by the Friends of Our Native Landscape, studies of protective coloring in nature by Abbott H. Thayer, and color wood cuts by Gustave Baumann.

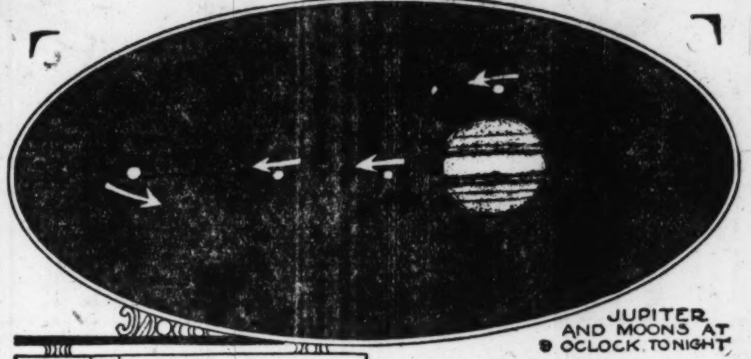
RUSSIA

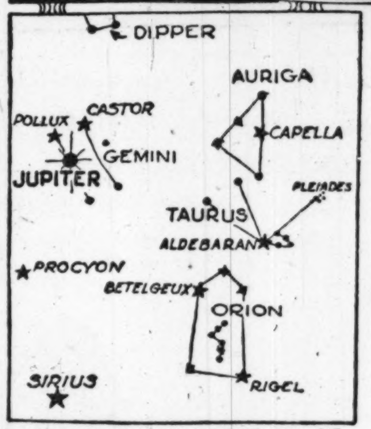
By Guy F. Lee.

From Astrakhan to Bering strait,
  From Kola down to Ind,
Disaster sweeps in jeering state
  And Murder rides the wind.
Delirium's a trinity
  With Anarchy and Rout—
And no man knows the mystery
  Of what it's all about.

There is no How or Why or When,
  No Who or Which or What;
No Now that speaks a better Then
  In this red polyglot.
Of Chaos grimly we're aware,
  For Aim we vainly grope—
It is the Triumph of Despair,
  The Burial of Hope!

ASTRONOMY





MAP SHOWING POSITION OF JUPITER IN GEMINI.

Jupiter

DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL.

THE bright star which is shining directly in the east this evening is Jupiter. Its identity cannot be mistaken, for it outshines even the brilliant Sirius with a steady blue-white luster. It is in the constellation of Gemini, not far from the two first magnitude stars of Castor and Pollux.

Jupiter is the largest planet in the solar system. It is 1,300 times the size of the earth, and, in fact, exercises the power of a small sun over its immediate neighborhood. Its broad disc is streaked with belts, which are caused by currents of wind which circle the vast ball. Jupiter is hot and its atmosphere is full of dense clouds, which, when drawn out by the winds, give the planet the appearance of being banded.

Jupiter is attended by four moons. A pair of binoculars or a spyglass will show them well. They would be readily visible to the naked eye if they were not so near to the immensely brighter Jupiter. Although they appear small, they are, in fact, fairly large sized worlds. The smallest is larger than our own moon, and the largest is about the size of Mars.

The discovery of Jupiter's moons settled once and for all the century old dispute as to whether it is the sun or the earth which stands still. The followers of the Ptolemaic belief argued that the earth could not move because if it did it would run away and leave its satellite, the moon. The logic of this was unescapable, but when Galileo showed with his new telescope that Jupiter was doing this very thing it was realized that the old ideas could not be true.

SLAMS OF LIFE

By J. P. McEvoy

"NO, NO DOWNTOWN POP-EYE, TAY HOME."

Each morn when I've ruined some ham and some eggs
  And st[illegible]ed 'em all under my hatch
And draped the remains of my coat round my legs
  And crowned with a kelly my thatch,
I say to my daughter: "Now, Pop-eye must go,
  Downtown to his work he must roam,
And make you some taters." But my daughter cries, "No!
  No, no downtown, Pop-eye; tay home."

You'd wonder if you were to gaze from afar
  And see what I drew for a face
Why Dorothy Mary should think me a star
  And cry when I'm leaving the place.
"I'll say that he sorter oppresses the eyes,"
  Would peregrinate through the dome,
"It ain't for his beauty that Dorothy cries:
  'No, no downtown, Pop-eye; tay home.'"

It ain't for his beauty! How utterly utt,
  Sagacious and keen and profound!
But what do I care if I look like a mutt,
  So long as she likes me around?
So long as she'll have me—and may that be long!
  I know I won't hunger to roam,
For there's just a wee tear and a pang in her song:
  "No, no downtown, Pop-eye; tay home."

THE CROIX de GUERRE

has been awarded the First and Second Groupements of the Great Headquarters Reserve No. 1 of the French Army, each operating 500 or more White Trucks. Citations for distinguished service accompanied the order, supplemented by a later citation to the entire Reserve No. 1, operating

2,500 WHITE TRUCKS

This is the first and only instance on record of motor transport formations in any army receiving this high honor.

The White Trucks were all veterans, many in continuous war service since 1914.

Chicago Awaits With Well Warranted Interest this Sale of $265,000.00 Worth of Footwear at 58c to 70c On the $

With every energy and power marshaled to make this the greatest success of any Shoe Sale Chicago has ever known, we rest confident of the outcome, for there are mighty few people indeed who will not be able to see on the instant that the footwear we offer, because of our SENSATIONAL PURCHASE OF 3 LEADING EASTERN FACTORY STOCKS is the most remarkable value Chicago has known, and would have been remarkable even two or three years before the beginning of the war, with the resultant advance in prices—shoe values that are simply out of the question under any ordinary circumstances. Only because of our gigantic outlet, our keen sense of values, our courage and faith in your discriminating judgment, and our courage to buy for spot cash stocks of any size if the price be low enough, is this greatest of all shoe sales possible. From the lowest priced child's shoe for knockabout wear to the finest women's novelty dress shoes is the range of this offering, each quite as great and tempting a bargain as the other. Come prepared to buy most liberally, for you'll find it a difficult matter to let such values pass, once you've seen them. Prepare to buy at least a year's supply for yourself and for the entire family. A shoe sale that is of such tremendous proportions that it occupies all the space in each of our four great Shoe Sections on the Fourth Floor and Basement. Of course it will be impossible to fill mail or telephone orders.

The Women's Shoes

The hugeness of the stocks, the immensity of the varieties, the marvelous values, all mean opportunities for every woman to find shoes for every occasion now at the most astonishing savings in years. Every smart model, every popular conservative model, every wanted novelty model awaits you, and at a distinct saving that mighty few women can resist. Counting them by the thousands, you'll find fine brown kidskin, mahogany calfskin, gray kidskin, ivory kidskin, black kidskin, gunmetal calfskin shoes, etc., etc. Goodyear welt or hand turned leather soles, fashionable Louis heels, Cuban heels, and the popular low heels for walking shoes—all sizes and widths—styles without a fault. Shoemaking that merits your every confidence. The values range to $10.00—tomorrow, on the Fourth Floor, at

TO MAKE US SAFE.

American naval ideas, as they emanate from Secretary Daniels and other distinguished amateurs who propose our policies and help to formulate our decisions, seem to evolve around two foci of error. One is that we should declare war on Great Britain by challenging the essential of her life—her sea supremacy. The other is that in so challenging Great Britain we should put a fleet wherever there is a sea.

When Great Britain went to war it concentrated its grand fleet in the North sea. There could be—and was—trouble elsewhere. Craddock was wiped off the seas by a superior German squadron. A punishing expedition was sent out and Von Spee was wiped off the seas. There was trouble in the Mediterranean, but the British grand fleet remained intact, its strength undivided and not diverted, in the North sea, and its presence and its power there won the war.

If attention had been paid to any alarms which Canada, Australia, South Africa, Egypt, India, etc., might have had, reasonably or unreasonably; if the British fleet had been scattered on futile errands and had lost its strength by diversion of it, the kaiser might be eating his breakfast in Buckingham palace and the Woolworth building might even now be a fine mass of débris.

This naval policy of concentration at a point from which the highest effort could be made at the most important time against the only real danger followed the simple A B C of common sense. And yet, in planning a dangerously magnificent American navy, we hear that distinguished amateurs want to put half of it in the Pacific and half of it in the Atlantic and so scatter it that no part of it amounts to anything in particular.

Have these distinguished amateurs ever heard of "divide and conquer"? Or, having heard of it, do they imagine that the advice was to the would-be conqueror to take off an arm and a leg and conquer with the remaining limbs?

With the Panama canal the American navy is a navy of two seas even if its peace post or war post is in one sea—if the Panama canal is properly protected.

We may do the United States more damage by a faulty navy scheme than can be done it in any other fashion. Is it incomprehensible to the American people that their future does not demand that they risk war with Great Britain by threatening to build against the British fleet?

The supremacy of the fleet is Britain's sine qua non. The supremacy of the United States on the seas is not an essential of American security. We must be able to clear the seas of every other enemy, perceived or possible, except Great Britain.

We have Canada—let it be said with consideration for Canadian feeling—as a security for British good behavior—can have it if we are sensible enough to maintain a citizen army. There are no citizenship benefits in navalism. It is police work and little else. A navy is a police force. A citizen army is a school of citizenship and nationalism. There are no nationalistic by-products in navalism. For Great Britain there is security in it. For Great Britain there is no security without it.

What the United States needs is a navy big enough to mop up if any other nation except Great Britain undertakes an aggression against our interests and safety. We can deal with Great Britain, which does not threaten us, by the intimation, plentifully backed with sufficient strength, to take Canada away from her if she does not behave.

Our proper navy policy would be for a navy big enough to command the respect of Great Britain and not so large as to threaten her, large enough to clean up anything else in the world, maintained as an effective fighting unit and able as such a unit to reach any threatened point at the time it was needed.

Give us, then, a citizen army, trained under universal service, the second navy in the world, and the United States is secure.

MERCI!

Readers of THE TRIBUNE are recommended to the frontispiece of the rotogravure section of today's issue. It is a picture so well done that it instantly becomes intimate in every nation of the allied cause—international in its emotion. It carries the marks of great art, for it is a great idea greatly told.

AN ACE IN THE HOLE?

Is there to be another "lost Dauphin"? The eldest son of the former crown prince of Germany has disappeared. It is said that monarchist officers have spirited him away and that all efforts of the Ebert government to discover his whereabouts have been in vain, the idea of his abductors being to keep him as a trump card for their future imperialistic games. The lad is 13 years old, and being a minor he can neither abdicate nor renounce his rights, nor can any one else renounce them for him. It is not likely in the case of a revival of the empire that his father or grandfather would be persona non grata to a people willing to live once more under a German imperial government, but the boy who may then be of age to assume a crown might be acceptable to Germans grown tired of the efforts to establish a republican form of government.

The lost prince is a never failing source of romance. The unfortunate son of Louis XVI. insisted on surviving his death in the temple, and reappeared in the hallucinations or deceit of a number of people, one of whom was Eleazar Williams of Green Bay. A descendant of another who called himself the Dauphin of France was actually granted a pension by the French senate a dozen years ago.

Are we to have a revival of the Lost Prince in this young Hohenzollern? Is he to be dragged into the limelight at some future day and posed as the rightful heir of the Brandenburg throne?

THE CASH VALUE OF BEAUTY.

Beautiful Chicago will contribute directly to the city as an industrial asset. The proposition that "a plan that isn't sound commercially isn't worth considering" is the completest and most direct answer to those who see in the city plan only a desire for foolish embellishment.

If the desire were for garish display the few opponents might suggest that we make up a fund, send for some architectural modiste, and have him fit us out with the latest things in façades, promenades, and other out of door furbelows with about as much permanency as a street carnival.

But civic beautification is not the mere hanging of bunting on the approach of some lodge convention or a brief garlanding of the front window on a holiday. These things have a special significance; they hail the visitor with some added pains for his entertainment and are torn down promptly so that we may not forget that our own place is not one of adornment but in the midst of comparative squalor, what with sooty buildings and cramped streets and what not.

Surely it is no asset for Chicago to be known as a huge collection of indiscriminate masonry and steel and asphalt veiled through the day and night by carboniferous exhalations and reputed for the narrowness of its thoroughfares and the difficulty that attends movement. Then it must be an asset if these things are cleared away and we present to the visitor a fair view, easy progress, healthful surroundings, and the lure to come again. And if beauty will make us talked about among our neighbors it is worth having for its own sake and for our sake.

No thrifty and cautious housewife can be induced to trade with a shopkeeper whose front door is besmirched, whose floor is littered, whose counters are askew, whose goods are lying about haphazard, and whose attentions to the customer are distracted by the constant need for kicking some box or barrel out of his path.

Similarly Chicago cannot be expected to entertain its millionfold yearly guest who comes to purchase and barter in thousands of ways while the necessity remains for handling its freight in cumbersome channels, disposing its local traffic through devious cobblestone passages, and receiving its lake ships in the most ponderous and inefficient methods.

The farmer regards it as most thoroughly businesslike to improve his land and buildings, discovering enhanced values and increased production in the possession of adjuncts that make for simplified operation. A commodious, well painted house with some sense of floriculture and landscaping about it is instantly of more value than a tumbledown house with no beauty about it, although both houses may be situated on land that is equally productive.

And so with cities. If Chicago's plan will make this city at once industrially efficient and architecturally beautiful it at once provides for two avenues of profit—toward Chicago the great trade center and Chicago the city of pleasant distances and healthful entertainment.

We must not imagine that civic beauty is a thing apart from everyday life. If that were true we would be importing a hodgepodge of obelisks and Gothic façades and pergolas and expect our people to believe them Chicago. But architecture symbolizes the civilization that devises it; and as Chicago symbolizes the great industries of the middle west, so our civic beauty will be the symbol of the strength of commerce, not only visualizing the beauty of strength but turning it to the purposes symbolized. Thus we get back to the middle west slogan, "A plan that isn't sound commercially isn't worth considering."

The Chicago plan, sound commercially, is the result of an inquiry into what Chicago needs and the desire to fulfill that need in a beautiful and utilitarian way.

MUNICIPAL GARAGES.

There is some talk of a municipal garage where automobiles may be left during business hours, or at all other times, for that matter. It is a subject that seems worthy of some investigation. The automobile is an institution the establishment of which has not been followed by any supporting changes in our municipal habits.

It is no longer possible to fringe the courthouse square with hitching posts, sorrel nags, and hay garnished vehicles; and the parking habit has long been a nuisance to automobilist, pedestrian, street car patron, and policeman. A motor parked two minutes too long involves the owner in a fine or a falsehood; he can pay the fine or tell the policeman he is the mayor's brother-in-law.

But a motorist may lose his car or have it damaged by collision or suffer any number of misfortunes through promiscuous parking. If the city could manage to provide sufficient and suitable garage space and a small fee charged there might be the end of an ever increasing evil.

Editorial of the Day

MILITARY TRAINING FOR ALL.

[Joliet Herald-News.]

If a census of the people of the United States could be taken it does not seem likely that more than an infinitesimal proportion would cast their votes against a reasonable system of universal military training. That does not mean that the people have been converted to a belief in militarism. That is the furthest thing from their thoughts. The stress of the last year has been borne in on their minds and they do not feel like going through it again. They have seen what an effect the camp training has had upon the boys taken from the schools, the work benches and the factories. Pale, anemic boys have come back on furlough with the tint of health in their cheeks and the spring in their step that had been woefully lacking when they were on their way to school or to work. There has been an upstandingness that has been noticeable.

If this has been the result of a few weeks' training in a cantonment for the average boy, as caught up in the selective draft, why should not the benefits be extended to the entire group of boys just coming into the age in which, had the war continued, they would have been called into the service of their country?

Military training is called for and the states that take the greatest advantage of the aid that the federal government will offer will be the ones that will reap the greatest advantage.

JUST MISSED PERFECTION.

When Mrs. Langtry was at the summit of her beauty and fame she met at a dinner an African king who was visiting London. She did her best to please the dusky monarch, and evidently succeeded, for he said to her as they parted, "Ah, madam, if heaven had only made you black and fat you would be irresistible."—Boston Transcript.

COMRADES OF THE MIST

Admiral Sir David Beatty, commander in chief of the British grand fleet, delivered an address on board the U. S. S. New York on Dec. 1, before the detachment of the American Sixth battle squadron from the grand fleet. The following is the text of Admiral Beatty's address, as reported in the London Times of Dec. 18:

"I could not let the Sixth battle squadron go without coming on board the New York and saying something of what I feel at this moment of your departure. I had intended to ask Admiral Rodman to permit me to say something to representatives of all the ships of the Sixth battle squadron on board his flagship, but the exigencies of the service did not permit me.

"Therefore, as Admiral Rodman has said, what I say to you I hope you will promulgate to your comrades in other ships and also to your comrades of the Atlantic fleet. What I say, I hope you will understand, comes from the heart, not only my heart but the hearts of your comrades of the grand fleet.

"I want first of all to thank you, Admiral Rodman, the captains, officers, and ships' companies of this magnificent squadron for the wonderful coöperation and loyalty you have given me and my admirals and the assistance you have given us in every duty you had to undertake. The support which you have shown is that of true comradeship, and in the time of stress that is worth a very great deal. As somebody said the other day, 'Fighting is now over; talking is now going to begin.' Therefore, I do not want to keep you here any longer, but I want to congratulate you for having been present upon a day unsurpassed in the naval annals of the world.

"I know quite well that you, as well as all your British comrades, were bitterly disappointed at not being able to give effect to that efficiency you have so well maintained. It was a most disappointing day. It was a pitiful day to see those great ships coming in like sheep being herded by dogs to their fold without an effort on anybody's part, but it was a day everybody could be proud of.

"I have received messages from several people offering sympathy to the grand fleet, and my answer was, 'We do not want sympathy. We want recognition of the fact that the prestige of the grand fleet stood so high it was sufficient to cause the enemy to surrender without striking a blow.' I had always certain misgivings, and when the Sixth battle squadron became part of the grand fleet those misgivings were doubly strengthened, and I knew then they would throw up their hands. Apparently, the Sixth battle squadron was the straw that broke the camel's back.

"However, the disappointment that the grand fleet was unable to strike their blow for the freedom of the world is counteracted by the fact that it was their prestige alone that brought about this achievement. During the last twelve months you have been with us we have learned to know each other very well. We learned to respect each other.

"I want you to take back the message to the Atlantic fleet that you have left a very warm place in the hearts of the grand fleet which cannot be filled until you come back or send another squadron to represent you. You have given us a sample of the Atlantic fleet which I think it will try the Atlantic fleet, efficient as it is, very hard to reproduce. I understand you are now going to Portland, where you are to get leave. After that you have the duty to perform of bringing your president to these waters, and then you will return to your own shores. And I hope in the sunshine, which Admiral Rodman tells me always shines there, you will not forget your 'comrades of the mist' and your pleasant associations of the North sea.

"This is a queer place, as you found, but you were not the first to find it out. There was a great explorer, Marco Polo, who, after traveling over the world for thirty years, one day found himself in the North sea and then went home and went to bed and did not travel any more. I trust it will not have the same effect on any of you, but I can say that those of you whom I have seen during the last twelve months seem to have improved in many ways, if it is possible, and I think the North sea has a health giving quality which must be put against all the bad points, of which it has so many.

"I thank you again, again, and again for the great part the Sixth battle squadron has played in bringing about the greatest naval victory in history. I hope you will give this message to your comrades. Come back soon. Good-by and good luck."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

BUT WHY NOT SUPPRESS CRITICISM ALTOGETHER!

Chicago, Dec. 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I rather enjoy the reading of the news items in your esteemed newspaper. It surely excels its competitors in the matter of getting and arranging the things that are going on around us so that we feel confident that we really know something. We seldom see news items printed in it that are contradicted the next day. So we rest content that there is some truth printed and we can get it by purchasing a TRIBUNE.

But when it comes to running the military and civil business of our republic our minds are constantly kept in a state of alarm by the wisdom of the editorial writers who so relentlessly expose the ignorance of the officials who occupy the responsible places in our government. In our alarm we come to hope that the people will arouse themselves enough to put the editorial wisdom in charge of public affairs and let the inefficient government officers write the editorials. Then no one would lose a job and public business would be done right. GEORGE V. WELLS.

"GOB."

Chicago, Jan. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What is the origin of the word "gob" as applied to navy men? C. S. HULBERT.

"Gob" is simply a slang term applied to any sailor regardless of rank. It originated about five years ago, and came into prominence during the war on account of the sailor's preference to it in place of the epithet "jackie." In this sense it may be compared to the American infantryman's preference for "doughboy" over "Sammy."

DENTISTRY.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—This morning's TRIBUNE contains an article by Dr. Evans which, in my opinion, is an unjust criticism of good dentistry.

I have worn a bridge for thirty years, and in that time have made a great many, and all kind of dentures as well, yet I do not believe any of my patients are in a cemetery as the result.

We all admit that cheap bridges, inserted by careless and unskilled dentists, may do a great deal of harm, yet is that any reason why good bridges and the proper care of devitalized teeth should be condemned? Arsenic, strychnine, and other poisonous drugs may also do harm, but who would sanction the wholesale condemnation of such drugs used in their proper place?

No person with two teeth can masticate his food, yet Dr. Evans advocates their use instead of having well fitted dentures to restore these lost organs.

It is true, and no good dentist will deny, that disease may be contracted by diseased teeth, but he does not believe in retaining diseased teeth in the mouth. G. H. HENDERSON.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

Dr. Evans' advice on "How to Keep Well" appears daily on the editorial page of "The Daily Tribune."

REASONS FOR FLYING ACCIDENTS.

EARLY in the war the government selected a group of scientists with Prof. Yandall Henderson of Yale as their head to conduct research on the atmosphere at different levels. The object of these studies was to discover why accidents occur in flying and then to work out methods of prevention. With the mechanics of flying machines this group of scientists had nothing to do. Their research dealt wholly with the human machine.

They were to determine the reaction of the human machine to the physical and chemical variations in the atmosphere at different levels. For instance, some men had lost their lives because when more than five miles up they had lost consciousness because of the thinness of the air or because of the cold. On the other hand, men descending to the earth from great heights have lost consciousness and been killed because of the effects of the denser air near the ground.

Research men know a good deal about the composition of the atmosphere seven and more miles up, but before the air routes can be called reasonably safe it is necessary to do much experimental work. The Medical Research Board of the Council of National Defense has been experimenting with a view to solving some of these problems. Discoveries made in great part by them have added 10,000 feet to the altitude at which men can fly and gradually they are working out factors of safety.

The air consists of one part oxygen and four parts nitrogen in round figures. The oxygen is the active agent in breathing. Nitrogen is a very valuable agent for some purposes, but so far as the needs of animals for breath are concerned the only reason for it in the air is to dilute the oxygen.

Many of us have the idea that because a little oxygen is good for us more would be better. As a matter of fact, air that contains more oxygen than one part in five is harmful. Furthermore, while it may appeal to our imaginations to breathe that unusually active form of oxygen known as ozone nothing could be worse for us than to be compelled to breathe ozone for any length of time. A little of it for a short time we can stand, but the limit of safety is soon passed. Moral—Don't let any man humbug you with an ozone machine.

In addition to oxygen and nitrogen atmospheric air always contains some watery vapor, some carbonic acid gas, and traces of rare elements. The proportion of carbonic acid ordinarily is about 4 parts per 10,000. When air passes through human lungs it gains enough carbonic acid to raise the proportion to 4.34 parts per 100 and it loses 4.94 of its 20.96 parts of oxygen.

The experimenters took advantage of this to produce atmospheres of the same composition as these at different levels above sea level. The air expired from the lungs passed through an alkali which took the carbonic acid gas out of it. It then passed to the breathing chamber, where it was rebreathed.

Every time it went through the lung it was robbed of about 20 per cent of its oxygen. After the process of rebreathing had been carried on for a few minutes the air was as poor in oxygen as is the atmosphere 25,000 to 35,000 feet above the sea level.

The experimenters duplicated the qualities and conditions of the atmosphere at various levels and subjected the men experimented on to these changed conditions and watched the effect. They found that some men could stand an elevation of 35,000 feet without any ill effects if they were supplied with oxygen from an oxygen apparatus.

If the proportion of oxygen in the air fell from the normal, nearly 21 per cent, to, say, 6 per cent, the men were very liable to faint. If men who had been in air that was around 10 per cent oxygen were quickly changed to air with an oxygen percentage of 21 per cent the men were liable to faint.

When the amount of oxygen in the air began to decrease it was possible to notice faint effects. But the body usually was able to turn on a little more steam and overcome these effects.

The men himself probably did not notice that he was not up to par. When the proportion of oxygen had fallen to about 14 or 16 per cent most of the men were cognizant of the fact that the air was rarer and that they were breathing under difficulties.

Men varied very much in their capacity to withstand low oxygen. Of course, the man with heart disease who cannot stay in a room the windows of which are down and who can only sleep sitting up or with several pillows under his head—such a man cannot stay in air from which any oxygen has been exhausted. But even strong men who have passed other tests for aviators sometimes showed an inability to work in thin air.

Some were pretty comfortable in air as rare as that at 35,000 feet and others showed signs of trouble when conditions a thousand feet up were duplicated. Therefore, Dr. Henderson and his helpers averaged tests and in order to do so expeditiously they built a steel chamber capable of holding eight men and then they altered the atmospheric conditions in this chamber at will.

The principal effect on breathing was increase in depth of respiration. A few breathed more rapidly, but the majority either did not increase their rates of respiration or else increased it by only two breaths a minute. A man ordinarily breathes about sixteen times a minute, and the volume of air breathed about 8.5 litres (quarts).

The incoming air current proceeds about as far as the large bronchi, while from that on the air changes by what is known as diffusion. When the oxygen in the atmosphere is reduced the breathing is deeper, and as much as fourteen liters (quarts) is breathed per minute. Some men breathed as much as thirty-seven liters, when the atmosphere corresponded to that at 28,000 feet.

Most men commenced to breathe noticeably deeper when the oxygen fell to 16 per cent. When the oxygen in the air begins to go down the pulse begins to rise. This menace continues until it reaches about fifty beats (say, a rise from 72 to 122). Then it is liable to begin to slow down. If the pulse slows down after rising and while the oxygen is still being exhausted from the air it is a sign that the heart is giving out. This is the condition which causes fainting at high altitudes.

In a group of seventy men 1 per cent began to show a pulse reaction at 7,000 to 8,000 feet, 12 per cent at 8,000 to 9,000 feet, 20 per cent at 9,000 to 10,000 feet, 14 per cent at 10,000 to 11,000 feet, 23 per cent at 12,000 to 13,000, 12.7 per cent at 13,000 to 14,000 feet.

The changes in blood pressure at different levels were likewise studied. Other tests were made on the effects of the changes in the atmosphere in hearing, sight, and mentality. The experiments showed that men ordinarily fit to fly were not always fit. If an aviator ordinarily good took a little too mucch wine the night before his heart and lungs showed it "right off the reel." Overeating or any other variety of indiscretion would reveal itself in the laboratory tests. Some men seemed to go stale without any discoverable cause. When in such condition aviators should not take to the air.

Physicians will be interested in a by-product of this investigation. The scientists doing this work were agreed that the low oxygen test was the best method known for trying out athletic hearts, weak hearts, and other hearts suspected of being organically or functionally below par.

Now, when a man has noticed that he is getting short of breath or must sleep with three or four pillows under his head or feels suffocated when the windows are closed he suspects that he has heart disease and goes to a physician. The physician, let us say, examines the man's heart with a stethoscope and finds no evidence of valvular disease. He then makes his patient hop around the room or walk briskly up the steps, and when the heart is pumping rapidly, embarrassed by the exercise, he listens again with a fair certainty that he will find a murmur or some other irregularity.

The new method proposed by the research board is to attach the man to an air rarefying apparatus as he sits in a chair. In a few minutes the man will be breathing air of the composition of the atmosphere at 10,000 feet. If there is any heart leak or any weakness of the heart muscle it will show itself as the man sits quietly in a chair with as much certainly as though it had been developed by hopping or climbing stairs.

The amount of flying is destined to increase even though peace should remain our lot. If the work of the flyer is to be made reasonably safe we must know everything possible about the human machine that is to pilot as well as the iron machine that is to be piloted. When the former has been as thoroughly studied as the latter the hazards of flying will be materially lessened. This piece of research work should do much toward lessening the accidents of flying.

WHOLE FAMILY AFFECTED.

Mrs. I. F. K. writes: "We would be much pleased if you can give us a little light on and also a remedy for a disease of the skin, which is affecting each of a family of five. The skin itches dreadfully and breaks out on some of us, sometimes in large eruptions resembling measles. Small red bumps appear on different parts of the body. There are also little lumps resembling goose bumps which itch as badly as the red ones. We have been troubled with this for a long time.

"About a year ago our three little girls had scarlet fever. This disease of the skin followed. My husband and I and a sister who was with us at the time all suffer from this disease of the skin. Last winter my body was in a bad condition, following the scarlet fever, which we all thought we had. My feet and toes peeled in pieces as large as 5 cent pieces. The breaking out was well through the summer, but the itching continued, but not so bad. Now this winter my skin almost crazes me.

"My husband's body last winter was a fright. The eruptions on him were of all sizes. You could not touch a place without touching the broken out spots. The places were as large and larger than 5 cent pieces. The scars are on him yet. His skin looks pitted. This covered his whole body. The itching was so severe he said he felt crazy, especially as night and early mornings.

"Our family doctor treated us a long time for it. He called it psoriasis. Could this be caused from the scarlet fever? Is there a cure for it? If so, what is it? Is it contagious? Our doctor thought it first started from something we had eaten. My husband is not troubled with it now, but myself and three children are scratching all the time. Please give us some advice through the columns of 'How to Keep Well.' What do you call the disease?"

REPLY.

I am inclined to think you have the itch or scabies. If it is scabies or itch proceed as follows: Take a thorough soap and hot water bath. Use a brush or a coarse rough cloth. After this bath rub into the skin an ointment consisting of sulphur, 5; Balsam Peru, 5; prepared chalk, 5; green soap, 5; vaseline enough to make 100. Rub well with the ointment, especially over the itchy inflamed places. Apply the ointment night and morning for one week. Then take another soap and hot water bath. Change underclothing and sheets. The underwear and sheets must be boiled to prevent reinfection.

NEEDS ATTENTION.

O. M. S. writes: "I have a lump at the root of one of my upper incisors, which has been there two years. At times it is larger than others, and pus accumulates. When it breaks and runs it goes down, but swells up again in a few days. The tooth it is at the root of is partly decayed, but seldom aches. Is there a probability of its being serious? What treatment do you advise?"

REPLY.

You have a decayed tooth and possibly some dead bone or an embedded tooth at its root. At any rate, periodically you develop alveolar abscesses. The condition is not serious, but you had better have that tooth and the tissues below it attended to. Probably the tooth should be removed.

NO DANGER.

E. writes: "I am three months pregnant. Is there any harm in having dental work done while in this condition?"

REPLY.

No.

The FRIEND of the SOLDIER

The Friend of the Soldier will coöperate with the war risk insurance bureau of the treasury department, 1307 Stock Exchange building, Chicago, and with the committee of the Chicago Bar association on legal assistance to soldiers and sailors, 105 West Monroe street.

Address inquiries to Friend of the Soldier, "Chicago Tribune." Answers to as many as possible will be published in this department. To insure a personal reply an addressed and stamped envelope should be inclosed.

No attention will be paid to anonymous letters.

ORGANIZATION OF 37TH.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 26.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Will you please give me in your column the makeup of the Thirty-second division, American Expeditionary Forces, now on or near the Rhine. W. N.

The Thirty-second division consists of the Fifty-second artillery brigade, including the One Hundred and Nineteenth and One Hundred and Twentieth artillery; Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth infantry brigades, including the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth, One Hundred and Twenty-seventh, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry; One Hundred and Seventh trench mortar battery, One Hundred and Seventh field signal battalion, One Hundred and Seventh ammunition train, One Hundred and Seventh engineer train; One Hundred and Nineteenth, One Hundred and Twentieth, and One Hundred and Twenty-first machine gun battalions; One Hundred and Seventh supply train, One Hundred and Seventh engineer regiment, and One Hundred and Seventh sanitary train.

301ST WITH 76TH DIVISION.

Greeley, Ia., Dec. 28.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Will you please tell me to what division a soldier with the following address belongs: Company K, Three Hundred and First United States infantry, American Expeditionary Forces, via New York, American P. O. 773?

Would also like to know where this division is stationed and whether it is returning to the United States or is in the army of occupation; whether this division was in any battle after Oct. 19. M. C.

Attached to the One Hundred and Fifty-first brigade, Seventy-sixth division; not a part of the army of occupation. Now stationed at St. Nazaire, France. When the armistice was signed it was stationed at St. Anant and Montrond, France, far behind the battle lines. No, it did not see fighting after Oct. 19.

127TH STATIONED IN GERMANY.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 27.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—What division is the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh infantry in? At present where is this division located and is it among the divisions that are expected home soon? M. F.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh infantry is attached to the Thirty-third division, now with the army of occupation. It is stationed in Germany. No, it is not expected to come home soon. The Thirty-third was not originally designated for the army of occupation but was included later.

FOURTH ENGINEERS IN GERMANY.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 28.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Can you tell me where the Fourth engineers are? Are they in the army of occupation? When will they return and will the boys put in there from the Blackhawk division return with the Fourth engineers or the Blackhawk? E. L. S.

The Fourth engineers is in the Fourth division, attached to the army of occupation now stationed at Hayanges, Germany. Troops transferred to the Fourth engineers will not return with the Blackhawk division, which is now on its way to the United States.

THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SECOND.

Independence, Ia., Dec. 28.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Please publish in your column all information you have concerning the Three Hundred and Fifty-second infantry. B. H.

The Three Hundred and Fifty-second infantry is attached to the Eighty-eighth division. When the fighting ceased on Nov. 11 the division was stationed at Montreaux Chateau, Isur-Tille, France. It is commanded by Maj. Gen. George William Weigel. The Eighty-eighth is now stationed at [illegible] France. It is not a part of the army of occupation.

124TH ARTILLERY WITH 33D.

Park Ridge, Ill., Dec. 29.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Having followed your column from day to day, have seen nothing of the whereabouts of Battery F, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth field artillery. Would be very much obliged if you would print through your column the location of it. E. S.

The One Hundred and Twenty-fourth artillery, to which Battery F belongs, is attached to the Thirty-third division, now a part of the army of occupation. The Thirty-third division is stationed in Germany not far from the Rhine.

102D AT CORBIE, FRANCE.

Three Rivers, Mich., Dec. 29.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—My husband is with the One Hundred and second engineers of the Twenty-seventh division. I would like very much to know where that division is located and whether there is any date set for its return. L. G. L.

The Twenty-seventh division is at Corbie, France. No, there has been no date yet fixed for the One Hundred and Second's return.

THE LEGAL FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters for this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

DIFFERENCE CANNOT BE COLLECTED.

Columbus, Miss., Dec. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A sold B a piece of property in New York on the following terms: One-half cash and a note for the balance due three years from date with interest at 6 per cent per annum until paid, secured by a mortgage on the property conveyed. B, after having paid interest for four years (one payment of interest was after the note became due), sold this property by warranty deed to C, who failed to meet the past due note of B, and the property was foreclosed but did not bring the amount of the note and accrued interest. B is insolvent. Would C be liable for the difference between the debt and what the property brought. L. E.

No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ADMINISTRATOR'S FEE.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—[To The Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me what fee an administrator is entitled to when the estate consists principally of real estate and only a small amount of personal property, which is in money. H. H. P.

Ordinarily an administrator has nothing to do with the real estate. He is limited to 6 per cent of the personalty.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

EMPLOYER MAY CLAIM DELAY NECESSARY.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—[To The Legal Friend of the People.]—I am working for a concern which pays its people on the fifteenth and last days of each month. The work done (much of which is piece work) from the first to the fifteenth is paid for on the last day of the month, and that done from the fifteenth to the end of the month on the fifteen following.

The custom is, when a man quits, the company takes from one to three days to figure up what is due him. When he is discharged a delay of about a day is usual in making up the amount.

Is there not some law that a discharged workman is entitled to his pay either at once or within an hour or two after being laid off?

Can the employer claim necessary delay, say of a day, in going over his pay roll? C.

1. No.
2. Yes.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOT CRIMINALLY LIABLE.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A person owes me $10. In paying his obligation he gives me check dated a week ahead. After depositing this check on date of check the check is returned by my bank marked "Account closed." Is this man criminally liable for issuing this check? A. W.

No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DIVISION OF ESTATE.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A marries and three children are born. A's wife dies and A marries again and four children are born to the second wife. A dies and his widow and one daughter buy real estate. The daughter dies intestate. Kindly state who inherits the daughter's property. J. B. T.

The estate is divided into nine parts. The widowed mother gets two parts, the children seven equal parts. We assume the daughter deceased is the child of the second wife.

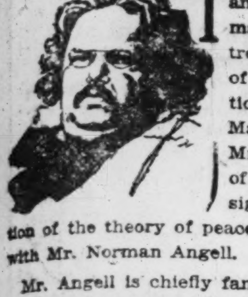
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—[To The Legal Friend of the People.]—Is a will made out and dated on Sunday good in Illinois? Do the signatures to a will have to be attested to by a notary or other official? F. E. W.

1. Yes, if properly executed according to statute.
2. No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NATIONAL HONOR

By Gilbert K. Chesterton



It is difficult to avoid a sense of amusement on finding Mr. Norman Angell writing a special introduction to the interesting book of Mr. Leo Perla [What is National Honour? New York: The Macmillan company. $1.50]. For Mr. Leo Perla sets forth a theory of peace which seems, at first sight at any rate, a flat contradiction of the theory of peace mostly prominently associated with Mr. Norman Angell.

Mr. Angell is chiefly famous for having written a book to show that nations were unwise in going to war, since war was a financial speculation that would never really pay. For some of us it would be enough to answer that it is always unpardonable, whether or no it is unwise, to go to war as a financial speculation, whether or no it is likely to pay.

Mr. Angell's book was too mild a criticism of the wars that are not worth waging; and was not a criticism at all of the wars that are worth waging. But Mr. Perla's book might very well be regarded as a sharply antagonistic criticism of Mr. Angell's book. Mr. Perla's book is entirely founded on the idea that most wars are not fought for material interest; and therefore the enlightenment of that interest is no guarantee against wars.

It is the whole point of Mr. Perla's pages that wars do not come through a commercial calculation, or any calculation; but through something which he describes, in a rather withering manner, as emotion. They arise especially from a strange emotion called honour; which the writer, one may fairly say, finds not only mystical but mysterious. But whether or no we share his mystification, we can all share his realization; and do justice to the scientific honesty which leads him to see that, as a fact of history, most wars have turned not on a material point of self-interest, but on a moral point of self respect. It is certainly the most correct conception in his book; possibly the only correct conception in his book. But if his view is correct, the view of the gentleman who writes his introduction is certainly incorrect.

A PRIMARY comment may be made on the misconception of the sentiment of honour among men of this school; which may fairly be described as the Semi-Pacifist school. The fallacy runs through numberless passages condemning private and public combat, classing a battle with a duel, or a duel with a murder. But Mr. Perla has put the blunder in a compact and conspicuous form on the first pages of his book, in a quotation from some professor, which he takes as a sort of motto for it. "To argue that a nation's honour must be defended by the blood of its citizens, if need be, is quite meaningless, for any nation, though profoundly right in its contention, might be defeated at the hands of a superior force exerted on behalf of an unjust and unrighteous cause. What becomes of national honour then?"

The answer is that national honour is then vindicated; in the only way in which it can be vindicated. It is of the very essence of honour that it is not lost by failure to defeat the oppressor; but is lost by failure to defy him. This is true even in the case of a duel; and even in the case of a bad duel.

No code was ever so barbaric as to suppose that the man who fell had failed in the matter of redeeming his reputation. Nobody thought that Alexander Hamilton had not behaved like a gentleman; even if Burr had only behaved like a bully. And nobody ever thought that Kosciusko had lost either his own honour or the honour of Poland, because the Polish rising was suppressed.

Nobody ever supposed that Wolf Tone or Robert Emmet had lost either their own honour or the honour of Ireland, because the rising of '98 was suppressed.

A MAN resisting a wrong is not a sort of materialistic magician who can say that it shall not be forced on him. On the contrary, he is a man who says that it shall be forced on him; because he will not assent and therefore assist. In a private case like that of Burr and Hamilton it is precisely the dead man whose dignity is secure; it was the living man whose dignity, for other reasons, was doubtful. In a public case like that of the patriots of Ireland and Poland, it is the defeated nations that have become sacred; nor will civilization have saved its soul alive until the hope of Kosciusko is realized and the epitaph of Emmet written.

Indeed the fact that seems to escape me, writers of this school, is the fact that all they write about war is equally applicable to revolution. There is always the same difficulty of defining at what point human dignity is intolerably insulted; at what point corporate indignation is a reaction of common sense. They would not in any case, indeed, be particularly sympathetic with the corporate indignation, or even with the common sense. It is really the whole point of their intellectualism to say that sense is never common.

The primary point that strikes me about all these extreme apostles of peace is their profound dislike of democracy. They are never so contentedly contemptuous as when they can refer to something as an emotion of the masses, or part of the psychology of the crowd. In this tone there is complete consistency; even between Mr. Perla who writes the book and Mr. Angell who writes the introduction.

Pacifists always insist that the people cannot think but only feel; that the many headed beast never acts till it has lost all its heads. But in truth, it all fails upon a very simple fact; that the people cannot only think, it can know.

For instance, Mr. Perla has a curious passage about emotional unification producing "the certainty with which every Frenchman but Rolland regards Germany as the aggressor," and even talks of the "extreme mental vigor" needed to detach one's self from it. Now, in fact, the French masses showed not only far more mental vigor, but far more mental clarity, when they saw their homes burned and their brethren butchered, and waited with a mind unchanged, than Rolland ever showed when he decamped comfortably to write cloudy essays in Switzerland.

AND they did not merely feel, or even think, that Germany was the aggressor; they knew it. They knew it, first, because they were citizens and knew the facts, and, second, because they were Frenchmen and knew the Germans.

Such a popular apprehension is not any the less rational because it is rapid. The belief of a democracy in the far west, that a prairie fire is undesirable, is none the less strictly logical because they act promptly on the premise, even to the extent of hanging the incendiary. It is the curse of all this intellectualist literature that it would merely make the verdict clearer by making it calmer, and calmer by making it slower. It thinks itself clever when it rushes down the road shouting "Combustion!" instead of shouting "Fire!" It thinks itself more rational for giving a botanical catalogue of the vegetation destroyed by the fire. But it is in reality less rational.

Mr. Perla's book is undoubtedly an earnest ethical inquiry into an important subject, and contains many interesting and valuable passages. But it is infected throughout with this fallacy of supposing that mere frigidity in the presence of outrage is the guarantee of a reasonable reply. As a fact, indignation is in itself a much more reasonable reply. And he could not more completely have answered his own case than by his own example—the case of France in this war. For France, which is the most rational nation, has also been the most rigidly national; and where there was most logic there was also most loyalty.

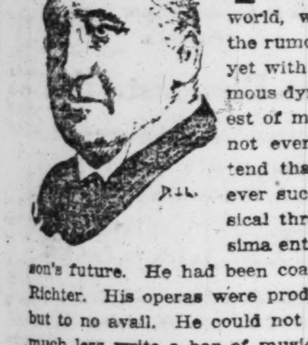
COSIMA WAGNER

By James Huneker



THE reported passing of Cosima I., queen of Baireuth, did not intrigue the attention of the world, whose ears are filled with the rumors of mightier happenings, yet with her death will pass the famous dynasty founded by the greatest of modern composers. No one, not even his admirers, dared pretend that Siegfried Wagner would ever succeed his father on the musical throne. For a brief span Cosima entertained high hopes for her son's future. He had been coached by Humperdinck and Richter. His operas were produced in European capitals, but to no avail. He could not fill the shadow of his sire, much less write a bar of music worth whistling. Wotan had fathered a Parsifal Jr. and Baireuth sympathized with Cosima's disappointment. It was the second sorrow of a life crowded with happiness. In 1883 the man she adored as a god died on her bosom at Venice. That tragic event transformed her from a loving wife to the sternly ambitious woman who ruled the destinies of Baireuth for thirty years. In 1913 the third sorrow came to her in the unwelcome shape of copyright expiration. The music of Wagner was free to every country. Parsifal, the Rhinegold of Baireuth, already had been ravaged by an American Alberich; nevertheless, from the shock of the legal decision which blotted Baireuth off the map of music, Cosima never recovered. She was a shadow of her former grandeur. She had outlived her majesty.

I first saw her in 1894. It was the summer when Lillian Nordica made her debut in the historic opera house on the hill. Zoltan Doeme, her husband, also appeared. His Parsifal, too, is historic. Queen Cosima I. was a tall, gaunt woman with the familiar Liszt profile, her white hair worn a la Liszt, her stride that of a grenadier. She ruled with an iron hand, a hand not encased in a velvet glove like her father's. A tyrant in petticoats was the usual ascription, not loved, indeed feared, she ran the Baireuth machine with the shrewdness of a Tammany hall politician. Her contemporaries concur in that. A woman of brains, courage, audacity, she recalled for me a second Margravine of Baireuth in her domineering manner. She would tolerate no rivals. Conductor after conductor came and went.

When Lilli Lehmann toward the close of a glorious artistic career sang in 1896, then Gibraltar met Gibraltar. Lilli had been one of the Rhine daughters in 1876. She knew her Wagner as well as Cosima. There was gossip then of which I got my fill. The ladies parted the best of friends, of course. Olive Fremstad, a pupil of Lehmann, was one of the Rhine daughters that year. Lilla Gulbranson was the Brunnhilde after Lehmann. Alois Burgstaller made a clumsy debut as Siegfried and Parsifal. Mottl was the reigning favorite, Felix of Munich the first man in whom the inconsolable Cosima showed deep interest after the death of Richard.

COSIMA, all said and done, was a daughter of Franz Liszt. The last time I saw her was in 1901. With George Moore I stood on the esplanade facing the Franconian valley, and during an entr'acte of the "Ring" we discussed the mediocre conducting of Prince Siegfried Wagner and the fond, foolish affection of his mother. She passed. This time she rode, but that rigid spine, the proud poise of the head, the undimmed hawklike eyes, "I am the widow of Wagner and the daughter of Liszt!"—they seemed thus to challenge the gaze of the public—proved her still in possession of all her powers. And she was then past 60.

Her forbears were just as remarkable. Liszt met her mother, the Countess d'Agoult, in the brilliant whirl of his artistic successes at Paris. Chopin had dedicated to her the first book of his Etudes. She was beautiful, accomplished, and her intimates declare that hers was not a truthful nature. She was born Marie Sophie de Flavigny, in 1805, at Frankfort on Main, Germany. Her father was the Vicomte de Flavigny, a French refugee who had married the daughter of Simon Moritz Bethmann, a rich banker, originally from Amsterdam and a Jew converted to Lutheranism.

Marie had literary ability, boasted of once meeting Goethe, and in 1827 she married Count Charles d'Agoult of Paris. Social sedition was in the air. The "misunderstood woman"—no new thing then, and still with us—was the fashion. George Sand was changing her lovers with every book she wrote, and the Countess d'Agoult began to yearn for fame and adventures. Liszt appeared. He seems to have been the pursued one. They eloped. In honor he could not desert the woman. They made Geneva their home—temporarily, for both had the nomad heart and were doomed to pitch their tents in many strange places.

MME. D'AGOULT bore him three children—Blandine, Cosima and Daniel. Blandine, the beauty of the family, married Emile Ollivier in 1857. She died in 1862. Liszt greatly loved her. Ollivier was later Napoleon's war minister, and was pushed to the top of his bent by the Mephisto of European politics, Count von Bismarck. He died a few years ago, nearly a centenarian and busy to the last explaining that he was not to blame for losing the tragic Franco-Prussian war. His hell was paved with good intentions before he reached there.

Cosima married Hans von Buelow, her father's "favorite pupil" (there were hundreds of them) in 1857. True to family form, she ran off with Richard Wagner and to the despair of her father married that fickle gentleman. Her father's discomfiture was the result of Cosima's defection from the Roman Catholic faith. She renounced this faith and became of her husband's religious persuasion—i. e., nominally a Protestant, in reality a free thinker. Daniel Liszt, the hope of his father, died in December, 1859, at the age of 20. Liszt had legitimatized the birth of his children, had educated them, had generously dowered his daughters, and all three were a source of sorrow to him.

The high light of comedy was not absent when the gallant Count d'Agoult—we shan't say "bereaved of his wife," for who shall pretend to analyze the mixed emotions of a man sorely wounded in his pride of race and secretly overjoyed at being rid of a pernicious blue-stocking?—called a family council which, after due consideration, pronounced the verdict that Monsieur Francois Liszt (they spelled it Litz in Paris) had behaved like a "perfect gentlemen" in a certain indelicate indiscretion, thereby absolving him from all blame in the matter.

As might have been foreseen, La d'Agoult quarreled with Liszt. They parted bad friends. Under the pen name of Daniel Stern she attacked him in her souvenirs and novels. He forgave. A most irritating trait in his career was his inability to hate his enemies. Of Heine he spoke ill. When some one asked him if Heine's name would not be carved on the portals of fame, Liszt replied: "Yes, in letters of mud"—which is manifestly unjust. In 1860 Franz and Marie met for the last time and in Paris. He gently told her that the true title of her souvenirs should have been "Poses et Mensonges." She wept. He was quite right. She was a detestable poseuse and a fibber. Tragic comedians, both. They bored each other. Their union recalls Flaubert's profound remark that Emma Bovary found in adultery only the platitude of marriage. Perhaps other ladies had supervened in the existence of Liszt. Like Byron, he was the sentimental hero of his day.

By Scudder Middleton

Long held content within your sea girt home,
America, you child of work and mirth,
Now you have snapped the ancient bars to roam,
A giant stripling, over all the earth.
Now all the glittering earth is yours to hold:
The million-handed engines and the stone
Piled Babel-wise and all the noisy gold,
The proudest ships the world has ever known.
O child, beware of your heroic part—
The low Satanic voice is in your ears.
Look long and deep into that giant heart,
For what you do will make the waiting years!
Not in defeat but in the hour of might
Comes on the test that reads the soul aright.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

January

A New Year.

NEW birth for the imagination when all the facts of life are dead; birth at zero and under a foot of snow; birth with the wind out of the northeast and scolding at the eaves; new birth in conditions which are intimations of death, but nevertheless a new birth, a birth of life when the facts are moribund; a birth of idea and perception and ideality when nothing lives except such daring visitants as the nuthatch and the downy woodpecker.

For us in this climate it is the most daring reach of the imaginaton to start a new whirl of the wheel when every aspect of what surrounds us is convincing in its assertion that all things are dead, when the woods which had heavy foliage are stripped, when the ground which had a lush carpet is covered with snow, when the wind which was soft and fragrant is howling and cold, when life which was exuberant and rich is stark and dead.

At this moment, when the suggestion is of death and of eternal death we start a new year, with renewed hope and renewed illusions, with new strength for the turn of the wheel, with new hope in prospects and in destiny, with renewed belief in the benevolence of life, with renewed idea that the frost-filled ground holds nothing permanently that is of disadvantage to human kind.

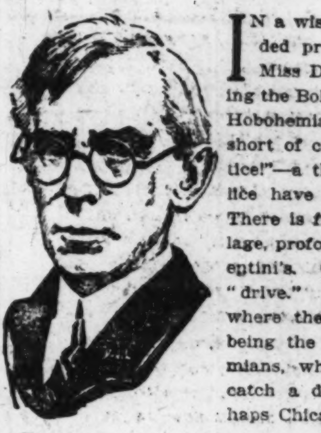
BOHEMIANS

By Rollin Lynde Hartt



IN a wisp or two of that shredded prose we call vers libre, Miss Dorothy Parker is berating the Bohemians (or should I say Hobohemians?) and barely stops short of crying, "Police take notice!"—a thing the New York police have already begun to do. There is fright in Greenwich Village, profound uneasiness at Florentini's. One hears talk of a "drive." Impossible to guess where the drive will end. This being the open season for Bohemians, what wonder if Boston's catch a drubbing next—or perhaps Chicago's?

We have desperate Bohemians here. I know a den of iniquity in the Fine Arts building, where they drawl alarming utterances—such, for example, as "Life is so simple; do just as you please." I was among those present in a south side studio when our most dangerous Bohemian procured a tall blue and white vase, advanced it into a circle the tribe had formed, sat cross-legged beside it, and monologued on "the mystical esoteric cryptogram in Matisse"—that is, until his wife whispered, "My dear, you've gassed enough." And I have dined with our "table d'hote Bolsheviki"—terrible chaps, given to black sombreros and enormous flowing ties.

But do I profess the usual abhorrence of Bohemians? O, jamais de la vie! You have read in the Bohemians' Bible—a work entitled "Trilby"—the passage where Du Maurier hints that beneath the appalling exterior lurks a sweet and babelike innocence; and over yonder in the Art institute you have seen the statue in bronze that at first glance appears a portrait of Elbert Hubbard but turns out on closer scrutiny to body forth "The Puritan." Revelatory, this. Scratch a Bohemian and you find a Puritan.

Murger, it is true, prefaced his immortal opus by declaring that necessity, not whim, is the mother of Bohemianism, and here and there the apology holds good, even in America. Kenneth Brown has told me in horrified tones of a Greenwich Village soiree at which the guests squatted two and two on sofa pillows in the dark and held hands. Shocking! Scandalous! But could their hostess afford chairs? Was not last month's electric light bill a horror? And is there cheaper entertainment available anywhere than squatting two and two on sofa pillows and holding hands?

HERVEY WHITE, author of "Difference," inhabited a Beacon hill garret when I knew him. Only by dispensing with life's necessities could he obtain its luxuries. Benjamin Brooks had a room precisely the dimensions of Benjamin Brooks, and the bureau was under the bed. Only thus could he prepare for a long, joyous sojourn abroad. Yet in general it is not necessity that breeds Bohemianism among us, nor is it whim. It is Puritanism.

Somewhere in the B'Gosh Belt of Massachusetts—in the "taown o' Shutesbury," to be exact—you will hear the saying, "Bring up a child in the way he should go, an' when he is old he'll go it." What Bohemian boasts that he was to the manner born, with a temperament in one hand, a wickered chianti flask in the other? Full well he knows that you can run him down in Who's Who, and, like as not, come upon the damning and (to him) damnable word "Presbyterian." Carefully brought up in the way he should go, he is now going it.

At a trifle too lively a clip, some will contend. In the musical play that announced itself as "a balmy breeze from Bohemia," the chorus sang jubilantly, "There comes a night when we all get tight; I'm glad when it comes—aren't you?" And I learn that when two Greenwich Village Bohemians fall out, one says to the other, "I've got my opinion of a man that doesn't keep his alimony paid up." Nor have I forgotten the Greenwich Villager who affirmed, "Occasional infidelity does a husband good—he appreciates his wife so much better." Yet I am not one of those who chide the Bohemians mainly for reacting too violently against Puritanism. From Bohemia to Vulgaria 'tis but a step. What irks me about Bohemians is that—commonly, if not habitually—they react against Puritanism too languidly. Puritans still, they are slaves to convention. Fleeing one set of taboos, they have espoused another.

In "Songs from Vagabondia" Bliss Carman and Richard Hovey belauded "freedom," yet you can shock a Bohemian out of six months' growth by sweetening your after dinner coffee, and nothing in the grimmest Puritan's code quite equals for severity a Bohemian's abhorrence of the "bourgeois." He must on no account permit himself to be bromidic. Overtaken by a shower on my piazza, Gelett Burgess could not say, "Let's go in." He was compelled to say, "It's God's own rain. Let's stay out."

ONE awful night in Boston a Greenwich Villager and I looked on while two particularly devout Bohemians endeavored to put each other under the table. What the Greenwich Villager wanted to say was, "This is disgusting!" He almost did. A moment more and the words would have been out and his reputation for being a Bohemian destroyed forever. I shudder to think what Greenwich Village would have called him. "Grossly moral," perhaps. But at last he hit on a phrase that would do. "Gentlemen," said he, "this is very gauche!"

On another occasion he was describing an interchange of epithets between a cabby and an ash man. I gathered that those worthies traced each other's biological antecedents to sources by no means flattering. But could a Bohemian register disapproval, or imply it, or so much as suggest it? Ten thousand times no! It would verge upon the bourgeois, or perchance the bromidic and "grossly moral." Accordingly, my Bohemian was compelled to say, "They called each other unconventional names."

If this be "freedom," give me jail. It is less confining. I feel about Bohemian freedom somewhat as I feel about typical French humor. "Broad," they term it. As it consists of one joke and only one, I can conceive of nothing narrower.

O, well, we are rarely so uncompromisingly serious as in our play, and—confess it, mes amis—Bohemianism is play. Woe to him who interferes. We forgive an infant for wailing in church, never for wailing at the theater. When my friend William J. Long got himself burned for heresy, few of us minded, but when naturalists questioned his reliability as a narrator of entertaining adventures among the Dicky birds, we took it that something important was up. Beware how you meddle with our fun—especially when, as in the case of Bohemianism—the fun is fact founded on fiction.

Ah, how slender, how frail that fiction! A fair Bohemian, who treasured a rather dubious array of Parisian comic papers (notably Gil Blas) and was wont to say, "I detest the Outlook, it's so piously naive," once told me of Richard Hovey and the mantle he wore—a toga, only black, flung about him with delicious abandon. She wondered how it stayed on, for a more careless, reckless, impulsively temperamental toga never dared the four winds of heaven. But one day Hovey threw it off and forgot it, and the fair Bohemian made bold to investigate. Lo, a nice little row of secret buttons matching a nice little row of secret buttonholes!

I am not holding this up against the poet; great Ibsen, you remember, carried a looking glass inside his sacred stovepipe hat, so as to make sure of properly disarranging his hair when he arrived at the hotel where each day he posed before the tourists. There are worse sins than his, and far worse sins than Hovey's. But it struck me that a clever woman, catching on, might have seen in the harmless swindle an exposure of all Bohemia. I like those painstaking carelessnesses, those labored whimsicalities, those premeditated spontaneities. They amuse. Yet somehow they joggle my faith in Bohemia.

WONDERFUL Bohemians! Believing in neither God, man, nor the devil, they cherish an unconquerable belief in tinseled humbug. Half that miracle of credulity—a tithe, I might almost say—should qualify any well grounded Bohemian to become a Quaker, a Methodist, a Baptist, and an Episcopalian rolled into one. Why, bless you, this fellow even believes he has a temperament!

Temperament! Pish and tush! It is the main thing Bohemians lack. Wild dashing, thunderous souls they think themselves, but temperament implies health, and Miss Elene Foster was quite right when she exclaimed, on first viewing a certain particularly eminent Bohemian, "Humph! Refused at the morgue!" while Frank Norris muttered, truthfully, "Reminds you of the things you find under stones." Moreover, temperament implies sensibility; and it is a dearth of sensibility, not an overplus, that makes Bohemians. High strung, exquisite, finely organized natures get more thrills out of cuddling a child than your sham temperamentalist derives from ten thousand midnight escapades. To the most dauntless Bohemian you may say, confidently, "Brother, you can't go my pace."

In their passion for bizarre experience, Bohemians betray a good deal the same drab, wearisome dullness you notice in explorers, in hunters of big game, in missionaries to the cannibal isles, and in adventurers in general. Only tremendous excitements can remind Bohemians that they are alive. They aren't—very. It is nearer the truth to call them "dead ones." An affair of the crude and obstreperous twenties—roaring twenties, if you like—Bohemianism is speedily outgrown.

THERE are high old times at Florentini's still. When a little dulled, a little stupid—that is to say, when suffering from an attack of youth—one acknowledges their attractiveness. In other moods, temperament forbids, and in so saying I intend no fling at Florentini's. Time was, when one obtained bewitching emotional reactions from a recital—preferably fortissimo and molto con fuoco—on the comb. "But in music we know how fashions change," says Browning, and with social delights it is even so.

When Bohemia has surrendered its charm and the dawn of civilization within one has brought about a growth in delicacy of feeling and in versatility of interest, what should be one's attitude toward those turbulent Bohemian joys? An attitude of deep thankfulness, I suspect. "Freedom" was silly—perhaps worse—but out of it came a serene acceptance of conventions. You have discovered—personally and by audacious tampering—that the wisdom amassed through centuries of human experience is on the whole not to be sneezed at. But, whereas it was once thrust at you and into you and down you by dire compulsion, it is now yours by choice. You claim citizenship at last in the true Bohemia. You have dropped the quotation marks from "free."

Meanwhile the "coasts of Bohemia" await you when wanted—a happy refuge whenever by reason of boredom or folly a man feels as old as he used to be.

Keeping Radiator 'Dope' on the Job

A perplexing thing about the use of alcohol as an anti-freeze agent in the cooling system is the problem of keeping it in the radiator in just the right amount. The following report, prepared after a long series of experiments by the United States bureau of standards at Washington, should be worth noting:

UNFORTUNATELY, with alcohol solutions the alcohol continually boils out and it must be replaced frequently in order to maintain the proper proportion of alcohol. Glycerin is frequently substituted for part of the alcohol to reduce evaporation, but when glycerin is used the rubber connections may be affected somewhat seriously, depending on the quality of the rubber.

The most practical method to maintain the proper quantity of alcohol in the solution is to determine the specific gravity of the liquid by means of an hydrometer and, by reference to the appended table, add the necessary quantity of alcohol to obtain the desired gravity. Care should be taken to have the solution thoroughly mixed and, as the specific gravities given in the tables are obtained at 60 degrees F., the specific gravity should be measured when the temperature of the solution is between 55 degrees F. and 65 degrees F.

The solution may then be kept at the proper strength from day to day by adding alcohol until the hydrometer reads the same as when first noted.

In order to illustrate how a nonfreezing solution is prepared by using the table, assume that the lowest temperature anticipated is 19 degrees above zero, Fahrenheit, and that denatured alcohol is to be used. By reference to the table in the line marked "denatured alcohol" 19 degrees is found in the 20 per cent column and the specific gravity of that solution is 0.978.

If the radiator holds 3.5 gallons, 20 per cent of this must be alcohol and the remaining 80 per cent water. Twenty per cent of 3.5 gallons is seven-tenths of a gallon, or a little more than 5.5 pints. Hence a little more than 5.5 pints of alcohol will be required.

If the temperature of this solution is brought to 60 degrees Fahrenheit and an accurate hydrometer is floated in it the hydrometer should read 0.978. If the reading is higher than 0.978 more alcohol should be added, with constant stirring, until the 0.978 mark is reached.

A solution so prepared will not begin to freeze until its temperature is approximately 19 degrees Fahrenheit.

Numerous tables have been published giving the freezing points of certain water solutions containing alcohol, glycerin, or a mixture of the two, but there is much disagreement in the figures given.

There is appended a table of freezing points obtained from actual measurements made at the bureau of standards, on solutions of commercial materials, which may be considered sufficiently accurate for practical purposes, since they agree fairly well with the most reliable scientific data.

The freezing point is taken to be that temperature in the cooling process at which crystals begin to form. The temperature at which the entire mass becomes solid may be several degrees lower than the freezing point for dilute solutions, and ten or fifteen degrees lower for the more concentrated solutions.

As an example, a 30 per cent solution of denatured alcohol begins to freeze, that is, small crystals of ice form, at 7 degrees F., but the solution does not freeze solid until a temperature of 5 degrees below zero F. or lower is reached. Hence a temperature considerably lower than that given in the table for any given percentage of alcohol would not injure the engine or radiator.

However, it seems desirable to keep the solution at such a concentration that ice crystals will not form at the lowest temperature to be encountered, since such crystals may interfere with circulation.

An accurate hydrometer should read 1.000 when placed in water at 60 degrees Fahrenheit and 0.834 in 180 degree proof alcohol at the same temperature. The denatured alcohol usually sold by dealers is 180 degree proof, which is the minimum allowed by law.

Keeping Them Clear.

Many miles of snow fences were completed along the Lincoln highway in Pennsylvania last summer and fall and are expected to greatly facilitate the work of keeping the snow off that main thoroughfare this winter. These fences were constructed particularly at points where deep drifts made the work of snow removal from the Lincoln way difficult during the blizzards of last winter.

Clearing the snow from New Jersey's main roads to facilitate the movement of transportation will be done in a thoroughly systematic fashion this winter, according to the plans of the highway transport committee of the State Council of Defense.

The actual work of snow removal is to be done by the counties and the larger municipalities in the counties, under the direction of the county and city engineers. It is estimated that about thirty miles a day can be kept cleared from ordinary snowfall by one plow.

The disturbing scenes herewith are from "Careless America," a movie thriller sponsored by H. S. Firestone, the tire man, and produced by Universal in an effort to educate the motorists of the United States as to the variety of ways there are of getting into trouble. Incidentally, of course, it offers some graphic preachments on the tenets of safe driving. The picture will be released in Chicago tomorrow and shown during the succeeding days at some 400 movie theaters in various parts of the city. Nine perfectly good cars were smashed up in making the film.

FREEZING POINTS AND SPECIFIC GRAVITIES OF SOME ALCOHOL AND GLYCERINE ANTI-FREEZING SOLUTIONS

Prepared by the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

Temperatures are given in degrees Fahrenheit. The figures in parenthesis are specific gravities at 60 degrees F.

Solution—	Percentage (by volume) in water and freezing points.
	10% °F	20% °F	30% °F	40% °F	50% °F
Denatured alcohol	+27	+19	+10	—2	—18
	(0.988)	(0.978)	(0.968)	(0.957)	(0.943)
Wood alcohol	+23	+10	—2	—20	—40
	(0.987)	(0.975)	(0.963)	(0.952)	(0.937)
Glycerin (Sp. gr. 1.2537)	+29	+21	+12	0	—15
Denatured alcohol and glycerin*	+25	+18	+9	—8	—26
Wood alcohol and glycerin*	+25	+16	+5	—11	—31

*Glycerin and alcohol are mixed in equal proportions. Ten per cent glycerin and denatured alcohol means 5 parts glycerin and 5 parts alcohol should be added to 90 parts of water.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS - - By High Speed

Kindly publish in next Sunday's TRIBUNE the best route between Hawkeye, Ia., and Fostoria, Cal. How many miles between the two points? How many days should such a journey require?
B. E. G., Chicago.

The best route in winter is by railroad. If you must make it by automobile I should strike southwest through Waterloo, Marshalltown, and Des Moines to Kansas City, picking up the Santa Fé trail here and following it through Emporia, Hutchinson, Dodge City, Pueblo, Las Vegas, Albuquerque, Springerville, and Flagstaff to Barstow, Cal. From Barstow you can drive up through Bakersfield and Fresno to Fostoria, which is about forty miles northeast of Stockton. This is a roundabout route, but you could not get through the mountains if you drove directly west. The distance would be about 3,000 miles. As to the time the journey would take that would depend entirely on road and weather conditions, which probably would be bad in winter, particularly during the first part of the trip. I should say, at a guess, that it would take you a month, though you might do better than that.

I am burning out bulbs on my Ford car all the time. Can you tell me what is the matter and how I can fix it?
F. H. G., Chicago.

Excessive voltage is the cause of your trouble. There are any number of controls to be had from any supply store that will cure this. These controls keep the voltage constant instead of allowing it to run up so that the bulbs are burned out.

Please publish the best and shortest route between Galesburg, Ill., and Los Angeles, Cal. Give the cities and the distance between them.

Why is it that springs always break near the middle? How can I prevent rust getting in between the leaves?
A. W., Chicago.

Breakage generally occurs near the center because there is a hole drilled here which makes a weak spot. Fit an oil box around the leaves or graphite the leaves once a year.

S. A. E. Dates Changed.

The time of the winter meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, which was to be held Jan. 12-14 in New York, has been changed to Feb. 4-6. These latter dates have been set as a matter of convenience to the S. A. E. members, who desire to attend also the New York automobile show to be held during the first two weeks of February at Madison Square garden.

The meeting of the S. A. E. will be the occasion of illuminating technical sessions on the different automotives and on fuel for internal combustion engines. A half day session will be devoted to consideration of gasoline, kerosene, benzol, and other fuels. Representatives of the government will present their latest data as to supplies and the results of recent intensive research of a startling nature.

Members returned from the front will relate their experiences, and particulars never before made public concerning war automotive apparatus will be given in papers by members and others in government service.

State Road Plan Well Under Way

BY S. E. BRADT.
[Superintendent of Highways.]

THE fact that the $60,000,000 Illinois road bond issue carried by a popular majority of over 500,000 is evidence that the people of this state are thoroughly in earnest in their demand for a system of roads suitable to meet the requirements of modern traffic. The further fact that the proposition was carried by a popular majority in every county of the state shows that the sentiment is not local, but prevails throughout the state and that every community will want relief at the earliest possible moment.

It is not generally understood, however, that certain preliminaries are necessary before construction can be actually begun. While the law names the towns and cities that must be connected by the system, it leaves to the department of public works and buildings the duty of determining the exact route to be improved between the places named.

Engineering parties making reconnaissance surveys are now at work in different parts of the state collecting information as to available routes, the comparative cost of improving the different routes, the topography and the service which they will render to the people of the state. With this information the department of public works and buildings will make a definite decision as to the roads to be improved.

Before this is done, however, any person or group of persons who have signified their desire to be heard will be advised of the time and place for such a hearing. When it is remembered that there are 4,800 miles to be thus located people will readily understand that this will require some time.

Another matter preliminary to beginning construction is the decision as to the constitutionality of the law. It is expected that this question will be taken before the courts this month and will be carried to the Supreme court for final decision as quickly as possible, but it is not likely that this decision will be reached for several months.

It is conceded by people generally that it would be impossible for us to market 4 per cent state bonds at this time in competition with 4¼ per cent government bonds. It is expected, however, that the unappropriated fund in the state treasury derived from automobile license fees and approximately $6,000,000 by July 1, 1919, will be made available for the improvement of this system of roads either through direct appropriation or through the purchase of these bonds by the state; thus avoiding the necessity for placing bonds upon the market during the early period of construction or before the money market has reached a normal condition.

People also recognize the fact that it would not be consistent with good business management to begin the construction of this system of roads immediately at full speed. We are not far enough from the close of the war to judge as to what conditions will prevail during the construction season of 1919.

While we are waiting to learn what conditions are likely to prevail during the coming season the engineering department is reforming its organization, which had been seriously depleted through enlistment and the operation of the draft. Its forces are now working on reconnaissance and field surveys and the department will be prepared to advertise for bids on several hundred miles of road in the spring if conditions warrant.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

Buick and Chandler are the latest additions to the list of cars on which post-war price reductions are announced. The Buick "six-44" and "six-45" for 1919 are now $1,495 instead of $1,595, which cuts $100 from a $330 increase over the price on corresponding 1918 models, made when the 1919 schedule was formulated at just about the time the armistice was signed. Prices on the other 1919 models have been readjusted in proportion. "It was inevitable," says a statement from the company, "that wartime conditions should cause some increase in price, but this raise covered only the added cost due to reduced volume in production. The revision brings a return to the exact prices originally established for the current models."

Chandler prices drop $300 tomorrow. For the touring car $1,795 replaces the wartime figure, $2,095.

J. P. O'Brien, formerly assistant central district manager for the Anderson Electric Car company, makers of the Detroit electric, has been made district manager, assuming charge of the Chicago office and succeeding D. E. Whipple, who died recently, a victim of the pneumonia epidemic.

Many new motor accessories having to do with fuel and oil economy are promised for exhibition at the approaching Chicago automobile show. Announcement of the allotment of space for this section of the display will be made this week. Plans are under way for giving the show the general atmosphere of a victory celebration, with returned soliders in uniform taking the place of the stars on the service flags which were a feature of the 1918 event.

Sport note—Napoleon Lajoie, veteran baseball player, has retired from the game to devote all his time to selling Miller tires in Cleveland.

A Republic truck staged a droll performance in South Norfolk, Va., the other day. Having disputed the right of way with a switch engine, it found itself tossed violently a matter of thirty feet. Pulled back on the road by another truck, it resumed its journey, apparently little the worse for the experience, leaving the locomotive crew to patch up their steed as best they could.

Joseph P. Ripley, formerly district manager for the Fisk Rubber company at Baltimore, has been made district manager for the central states, with headquarters in Chicago, succeeding Claude Platt, who becomes special factory representative for the company.

A one ton capacity truck is announced by the Acason Motor Truck company as an addition to its line of heavy duty trucks.

With the taking over of Lafayette Markle's financial interest in the L. Markle company by Henry R. Levy, the sales concern last week changed its title to Studebaker Sales Company of Chicago. Mr. Levy, the new president and principal owner, was formerly vice president and general manager of the Markle organization.

Here's one of the most extraordinary sales of the season—

Our January Sale of Women's Low Shoes, $2

Basement Shoe Salesroom.

This low price is the result of a fortunate purchase from a well-known shoe manufacturer.

We are offering these low shoes now not only to give you the advantage of supplying your spring and summer footwear needs at a saving, but because low shoes and spats are very popular now.

Here are several thousand pairs of hand turned and lasted pumps, oxfords and strap effects in the coming season's styles. Among them are:

Black oxfords in patent colt, dull calf and kid, white kid, white buck and white cloth, also pumps and colonials, full Louis and military heels.

The factory calls them "substandards," but the imperfections are so slight that they will not affect the wearing quality or appearance. Complete range of sizes.

Values up to $5.00, at

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Work of Famous Designer Shown at Arts Club

Mummers are we—
  The world our stage
Where the same characters
  Pass, age by age,
Till Death for each
  Puts "Finis" to the page.

Child, youth, and man—
  Indifferent, bad, or good—
Our parts we play
  As it was ruled we should,
Puppets who dance
  In answer to His mood.

Scan you the centuries,
  A rippling range
Of years that mount
  Like some low mountains strange—
But see—Life, everywhere the same—
  The settings only change.

PROBABLY the most famous designer of stage settings in this country today is Robert Jones. To him is due much of that weird charm which enchants one at the rise of the curtain upon the Russian ballet. It is to him, too, that we owe the fascinating background against which the richly costumed characters in "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife" stand like so many more strokes of color from the same magic brush.

There opened last week at the Arts club an exhibition of Mr. Jones' work and of paintings by Mary Foote. A group of sketches drawn by Robert Jones for a recent Red Cross drive fairly haunts one. There is "Rapine," an ape with a huge, gaping, scarlet mouth; "Pestilence," a woman's figure dripping abominations from fingers and robe, like a gigantic snow idol of evil melting into impotency under the rays of a righteous sun; "Terror," a shuddering mummy wrapped in its death bands; and "Pain," a gray ghost with a clay skin drawn taut over her sharp bones, and ropes of ashen hair falling from the ghastly skull of her head. Surely these are horrors enough to trail in the wake of war.

A wall is devoted by Mr. Jones to his various designs for Til Eulenspiegel. The chateleine in particular is a gorgeous creature in flowing robes of yellow-green and a yellow, flaring, pointed hat that nearly touches the sky. Six scenes from "The Cenci" in black and white are of interest. Possibly the sketches for "Henry V." are the most vivid. In one is shown a fiery pit, a whirlpool of orange and red light, between two rugged mountain walls of Stygian black. A troop of soldiers are silhouetted against the glow, the long, thin blades of their bayonets charging the heart of that ungodly sky. It is an extravagant, wonder scene of war.

In a further gallery hang the paintings by Mary Foote. There are a number of portraits and a charming group of flower pieces. The blossoms call forth unstinted, unqualified praise, but the portraits cannot command such generous appreciation. Certain ones among them are good. To the rest it were more gracious to grant but a meed of silence.

The portrait of Mrs. John A. Carpenter is by all odds the strongest of the likenesses of women. The color and the composition, the atmosphere, the quality of the flesh tones, the lines of the figure, and the decorative setting are all excellent. Mrs. Carpenter is seated at a table. A cup of tea is near her hand. She leans a little forward. The red of her coat and the blue of her hat strike a note of unrhymed harmony that satisfies the sense of color, much as the crash of cymbals contents the soul steeped in the bland melody of uncontradicted harp strings.

The portrait of Jo Davidson, the sculptor, is masterly. There is another sculptor present in the portrait of Frederick MacMonnies, an artist who perhaps ranks second to St. Gaudens, the best known American sculptor. MacMonnies belongs to an older school than Paul Manship, being a contemporary of Paul Bartlett. The portrait is rather Whistlerian, inasmuch as it is an enchanting, unflattering caricature that lacks all touch of sarcasm or cynicism. One could apply the word "jolly" to it, were not "jolly" a term of doubtful aesthetic parentage.

There are two paintings of the nude. In one of them the lady is sleepily unconscious of her physical undress, but in the other the snake has tempted and Eve would, if she could, search the nearest forest for a robe of leaves.

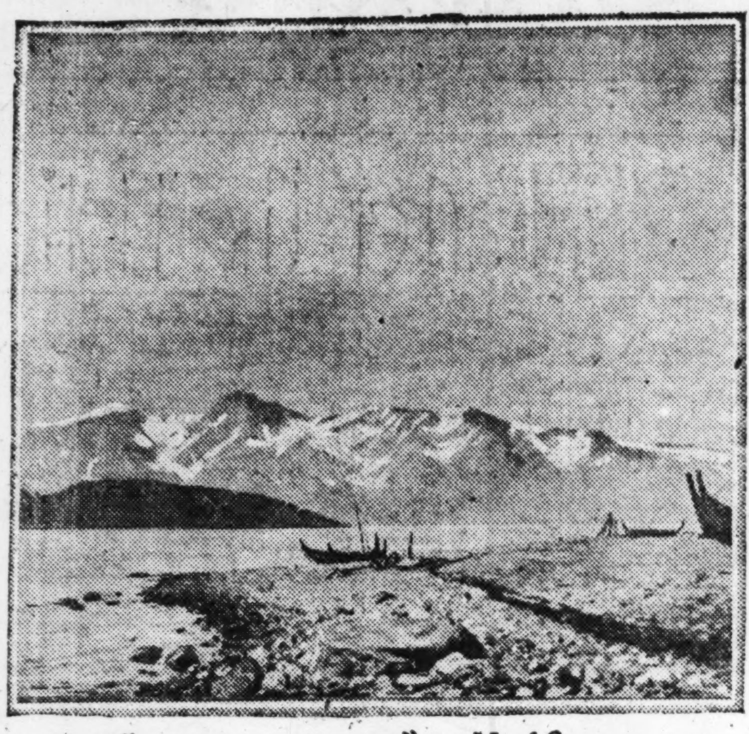
The one man exhibit at the Palette and Chisel club is attracting much favorable comment. The pictures are the work of Carl Ouren. He has sought and found such spots of beauty in the parks of Chicago as I doubt if any but a painter's eye could have discovered. Certainly the average hurried citizen passing the thickets behind which these fantasies lurk, and keeping himself strictly to the paths, must have the wonders spelled out before him in print before he will grant them entrance to his crowded consciousness.

Mr. Ouren is a capital speller. As one passes from sketch to sketch in his exhibit the rare loveliness of each bit is doubled and trebled with the advent of every new twist in the painter's path that has enticed him to spread other wonder scenes at our careless feet.

> There is a pool where lilies blow,
> Around its waters iris grow—
> And shadows from the nearer trees
> Dance elfin dances in the breeze
> Over the ripples, to and fro.

Rushes stand guard around this pool, lifting their slender green blades into the sun. A tangle of flowers waits the coming of belated bees and nectar drunk butterflies. Beyond, a grove of oak and maple swings sleepy branches in the soft wind that whispers like a caress at night over the heart strings of June. And all this beauty is found in Humboldt park.



"Ulf's Fjord-Norway." by Karl Ouren

One travels with Mr. Ouren to the Land of the Midnight Sun in a sketch or two. There is a desolate scene, grim and rugged, of Ulfs Fjord, Norway. A stretch of rocky beach lies by the sea and the pebbles are as thick as sand. The cold, gray tide of the North sea washes up against it, eating little by little into its heart. Drawn up upon the beach are high prowed boats, the fishing vessels of the Norsemen. Across the water loom snow covered mountains thrusting their rough summits into the cloud fleeced sky.

There is, too, "From Trondhjem, Norway," an enticing village with red walled, snow gabled and snow encircled houses. Lights make blue shadows on the white paths. Children are playing with a sled, their cheeks red as our winter apples, muffled in heavy wraps to keep that jester, Jack Frost, at a comfortable distance.

"Winter" is but a tiny color sketch in white and gray, but it is the loveliest of the winter scenes. A thin stream edges between white snowbanks, itself filmed with ice. Naked, brown trees, bearing a few yellow leaves, reach out from the white depths. Clouded shadows lie on the snow where the winter sun smiles.

Back to Chicago we come in "Boy Fishing in the Park." The canvas is full of warm color. A wealth of flowers and foliage makes a fairy waste of the distance. About the lake a path winds. Reeds fringe the pool, and other blossoms sigh their perfume into the bosom of the passing wind. The child is utterly content with his sport. Too much content almost. Verily he has captured a mighty denizen of the deep. He is bent double, dragging upon his pole, which seemingly an equally terrific pull is straining from him into the waters of the pond. One doubts this bit of by-play, but forgives it in the same breath, for its setting would make anything excusable.

The comission for the encouragement of local art has made its annual purchases of paintings for installation in public buildings and schools of the city. The pictures purchased from the appropriation of 1918 are: "A Morning in Maine," by Allen E. Philbrick; "The Golden Pheasant," by R. Fayerweather Babcock; "Along the Trail," by Frank V. Dudley, and a portrait of Carter H. Harrison by Frank A. Werner.

A number of exhibitions will open on Tuesday at the Art institute. Among them are an exhibit of medals by T. Spicer-Simson, paintings by Henri Caro-Delvaille, paintings by Jonas Lie, paintings by Louis Kronberg, paintings arranged by the Friends of Our Native Landscape, studies of protective coloring in nature by Abbott H. Thayer, and color wood cuts by Gustave Baumann.

RUSSIA

By Guy F. Lee.

From Astrakhan to Bering strait,
  From Kola down to Ind,
Disaster sweeps in jeering state
  And Murder rides the wind.
Delirium's a trinity
  With Anarchy and Rout—
And no man knows the mystery
  Of what it's all about.

There is no How or Why or When,
  No Who or Which or What;
No Now that speaks a better Then
  In this red polyglot.
Of Chaos grimly we're aware,
  For Aim we vainly grope—
It is the Triumph of Despair,
  The Burial of Hope!

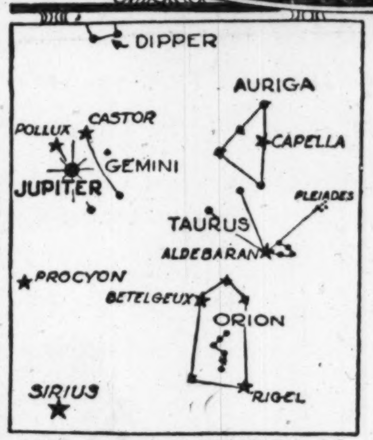
DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL



MAP SHOWING POSITION OF JUPITER IN GEMINI.

THE bright star which is shining directly in the east this evening is Jupiter. Its identity cannot be mistaken, for it outshines even the brilliant Sirius with a steady blue-white luster. It is in the constellation of Gemini, not far from the two first magnitude stars of Castor and Pollux.

Jupiter is the largest planet in the solar system. It is 1,300 times the size of the earth, and, in fact, exercises the power of a small sun over its immediate neighborhood. Its broad disc is streaked with belts, which are caused by currents of wind which circle the vast ball. Jupiter is hot and its atmosphere is full of dense clouds, which, when drawn out by the winds, give the planet the appearance of being banded.

Jupiter is attended by four moons. A pair of binoculars or a spyglass will show them well. They would be readily visible to the naked eye if they were not so near to the immensely brighter Jupiter. Although they appear small, they are, in fact, fairly large sized worlds. The smallest is larger than our own moon, and the largest is about the size of Mars.

The discovery of Jupiter's moons settled once and for all the century old dispute as to whether it is the sun or the earth which stands still. The followers of the Ptolemaic belief argued that the earth could not move because if it did it would run away and leave its satellite, the moon. The logic of this was unescapable, but when Galileo showed with his new telescope that Jupiter was doing this very thing it was realized that the old ideas could not be true.

SLAMS OF LIFE

By J. P. McEvoy

"NO, NO DOWNTOWN POP-EYE, TAY HOME."

Each morn when I've ruined some ham and some eggs
  And stowed 'em all under my hatch
And draped the remains of my coat round my legs
  And crowned with a kelly my thatch,
I say to my daughter: "Now, Pop-eye must go,
  Downtown to his work he must roam,
And make you some taters." But my daughter cries, "No!
  No, no downtown, Pop-eye; tay home."

You'd wonder if you were to gaze from afar
  And see what I drew for a face
Why Dorothy Mary should think me a star
  And cry when I'm leaving the place.
"I'll say that he sorter oppresses the eyes,"
  Would peregrinate through the dome,
"It ain't for his beauty that Dorothy cries:
  'No, no downtown, Pop-eye; tay home.'"

It ain't for his beauty! How utterly 'utt,
  Sagacious and keen and profound!
But what do I care if I look like a mutt,
  So long as she likes me around?
So long as she'll have me—and may that be long!
  I know I won't hunger to roam,
For there's just a wee tear and a pang in her song:
  "No, no downtown, Pop-eye; tay home."

THE CROIX de GUERRE

has been awarded the First and Second Groupements of the Great Headquarters Reserve No. 1 of the French Army, each operating 500 or more White Trucks. Citations for distinguished service accompanied the order, supplemented by a later citation to the entire Reserve No. 1, operating

2,500 WHITE TRUCKS

This is the first and only instance on record of motor transport formations in any army receiving this high honor.

The White Trucks were all veterans, many in continuous war service since 1914.

Chicago Awaits With Well Warranted Interest this Sale of $265,000.00 Worth of Footwear at 58c to 70c On the $

With every energy and power marshaled to make this the greatest success of any Shoe Sale Chicago has ever known, we rest confident of the outcome, for there are mighty few people indeed who will not be able to see on the instant that the footwear we offer, because of our SENSATIONAL PURCHASE OF 3 LEADING EASTERN FACTORY STOCKS is the most remarkable value Chicago has known, and would have been remarkable even two or three years before the beginning of the war, with the resultant advance in prices—shoe values that are simply out of the question under any ordinary circumstances. Only because of our gigantic outlet, our keen sense of values, our courage and faith in your discriminating judgment, and our courage to buy for spot cash stocks of any size if the price be low enough, is this greatest of all shoe sales possible. From the lowest priced child's shoe for knockabout wear to the finest women's novelty dress shoes is the range of this offering, each quite as great and tempting a bargain as the other. Come prepared to buy most liberally, for you'll find it a difficult matter to let such values pass, once you've seen them. Prepare to buy at least a year's supply for yourself and for the entire family. A shoe sale that is of such tremendous proportions that it occupies all the space in each of our four great Shoe Sections on the Fourth Floor and Basement. Of course it will be impossible to fill mail or telephone orders.

The Women's Shoes

The hugeness of the stocks, the immensity of the varieties, the marvelous values, all mean opportunities for every woman to find shoes for every occasion now at the most astonishing savings in years. Every smart model, every popular conservative model, every wanted novelty model awaits you, and at a distinct saving that mighty few women can resist. Counting them by the thousands, you'll find fine brown kidskin, mahogany calfskin, gray kidskin, ivory kidskin, black kidskin, gunmetal calfskin shoes, etc., etc. Goodyear welt or hand turned leather soles, fashionable Louis heels, Cuban heels, and the popular low heels for walking shoes—all sizes and widths—styles without a fault. Shoemaking that merits your every confidence. The values range to $10.00—tomorrow, on the Fourth Floor, at

TO MAKE US SAFE.

American naval ideas, as they emanate from Secretary Daniels and other distinguished amateurs who propose our policies and help to formulate our decisions, seem to evolve around two foci of error. One is that we should declare war on Great Britain by challenging the essential of her life—her sea supremacy. The other is that in so challenging Great Britain we should put a fleet wherever there is a sea.

When Great Britain went to war it concentrated its grand fleet in the North sea. There could be—and was—trouble elsewhere. Craddock was wiped off the seas by a superior German squadron. A punishing expedition was sent out and Von Spee was wiped off the seas. There was trouble in the Mediterranean, but the British grand fleet remained intact, its strength undivided and not diverted, in the North sea, and its presence and its power there won the war.

If attention had been paid to any alarms which Canada, Australia, South Africa, Egypt, India, etc., might have had, reasonably or unreasonably; if the British fleet had been scattered on futile errands and had lost its strength by diversion of it, the kaiser might be eating his breakfast in Buckingham palace and the Woolworth building might even now be a fine mass of débris.

This naval policy of concentration at a point from which the highest effort could be made at the most important time against the only real danger followed the simple A B C of common sense. And yet, in planning a dangerously magnificent American navy, we hear that distinguished amateurs want to put half of it in the Pacific and half of it in the Atlantic and so scatter it that no part of it amounts to anything in particular.

Have these distinguished amateurs ever heard of "divide and conquer"? Or, having heard of it, do they imagine that the advice was to the would-be conqueror to take off an arm and a leg and conquer with the remaining limbs?

With the Panama canal the American navy is a navy of two seas even if its peace post or war post is in one sea—if the Panama canal is properly protected.

We may do the United States more damage by a faulty navy scheme than can be done it in any other fashion. Is it incomprehensible to the American people that their future does not demand that they risk war with Great Britain by threatening to build against the British fleet?

The supremacy of the fleet is Britain's sine qua non. The supremacy of the United States on the seas is not an essential of American security. We must be able to clear the seas of every other enemy, perceived or possible, except Great Britain.

We have Canada—let it be said with consideration for Canadian feeling—as a security for British good behavior—can have it if we are sensible enough to maintain a citizen army. There are no citizenship benefits in navalism. It is police work and little else. A navy is a police force. A citizen army is a school of citizenship and nationalism. There are no nationalistic by-products in navalism. For Great Britain there is security in it. For Great Britain there is no security without it.

What the United States needs is a navy big enough to mop up if any other nation except Great Britain undertakes an aggression against our interests and safety. We can deal with Great Britain, which does not threaten us, by the intimation, plentifully backed with sufficient strength, to take Canada away from her if she does not behave.

Our proper navy policy would be for a navy big enough to command the respect of Great Britain and not so large as to threaten her, large enough to clean up anything else in the world, maintained as an effective fighting unit and able as such a unit to reach any threatened point at the time it was needed.

Give us, then, a citizen army, trained under universal service, the second navy in the world, and the United States is secure.

MERCI!

Readers of THE TRIBUNE are recommended to the frontispiece of the rotogravure section of today's issue. It is a picture so well done that it instantly becomes intimate in every nation of the allied cause—international in its emotion. It carries the marks of great art, for it is a great idea greatly told.

AN ACE IN THE HOLE?

Is there to be another "lost Dauphin"? The eldest son of the former crown prince of Germany has disappeared. It is said that monarchist officers have spirited him away and that all efforts of the Ebert government to discover his whereabouts have been in vain, the idea of his abductors being to keep him as a trump card for their future imperialistic games. The lad is 13 years old, and being a minor he can neither abdicate nor renounce his rights, nor can any one else renounce them for him. It is not likely in the case of a revival of the empire that his father or grandfather would be persona non grata to a people willing to live once more under a German imperial government, but the boy who may then be of age to assume a crown might be acceptable to Germans grown tired of the efforts to establish a republican form of government.

The lost prince is a never failing source of romance. The unfortunate son of Louis XVI. insisted on surviving his death in the temple, and reappeared in the hallucinations or deceit of a number of people, one of whom was Eleazar Williams of Green Bay. A descendant of another who called himself the Dauphin of France was actually granted a pension by the French senate a dozen years ago.

Are we to have a revival of the Lost Prince in this young Hohenzollern? Is he to be dragged into the limelight at some future day and posed as the rightful heir of the Brandenburg throne?

THE CASH VALUE OF BEAUTY.

Beautiful Chicago will contribute directly to the city as an industrial asset. The proposition that "a plan that isn't sound commercially isn't worth considering" is the completest and most direct answer to those who see in the city plan only a desire for foolish embellishment.

If the desire were for garish display the few opponents might suggest that we make up a fund, send for some architectural modiste, and have him fit us out with the latest things in façades, promenades, and other out of door furbelows with about as much permanency as a street carnival.

But civic beautification is not the mere hanging of bunting on the approach of some lodge convention or a brief garlanding of the front window on a holiday. These things have a special significance; they hail the visitor with some added pains for his entertainment and are torn down promptly so that we may not forget that our own place is not one of adornment but in the midst of comparative squalor, what with sooty buildings and cramped streets and what not.

Surely it is no asset for Chicago to be known as a huge collection of indiscriminate masonry and steel and asphalt veiled through the day and night by carboniferous exhalations and reputed for the narrowness of its thoroughfares and the difficulty that attends movement. Then it must be an asset if these things are cleared away and we present to the visitor a fair view, easy progress, healthful surroundings, and the lure to come again. And if beauty will make us talked about among our neighbors it is worth having for its own sake and for our sake.

No thrifty and cautious housewife can be induced to trade with a shopkeeper whose front door is besmirched, whose floor is littered, whose counters are askew, whose goods are lying about haphazard, and whose attentions to the customer are distracted by the constant need for kicking some box or barrel out of his path.

Similarly Chicago cannot be expected to entertain its millionfold yearly guest who comes to purchase and barter in thousands of ways while the necessity remains for handling its freight in cumbersome channels, disposing its local traffic through devious cobblestone passages, and receiving its lake ships in the most ponderous and inefficient methods.

The farmer regards it as most thoroughly businesslike to improve his land and buildings, discovering enhanced values and increased production in the possession of adjuncts that make for simplified operation. A commodious, well painted house with some sense of floriculture and landscaping about it is instantly of more value than a tumbledown house with no beauty about it, although both houses may be situated on land that is equally productive.

And so with cities. If Chicago's plan will make this city at once industrially efficient and architecturally beautiful it at once provides for two avenues of profit—toward Chicago the great trade center and Chicago the city of pleasant distances and healthful entertainment.

We must not imagine that civic beauty is a thing apart from everyday life. If that were true we would be importing a hodgepodge of obelisks and Gothic façades and pergolas and expect our people to believe them Chicago. But architecture symbolizes the civilization that devises it; and as Chicago symbolizes the great industries of the middle west, so our civic beauty will be the symbol of the strength of commerce, not only visualizing the beauty of strength but turning it to the purposes symbolized. Thus we get back to the middle west slogan, "A plan that isn't sound commercially isn't worth considering."

The Chicago plan, sound commercially, is the result of an inquiry into what Chicago needs and the desire to fulfill that need in a beautiful and utilitarian way.

MUNICIPAL GARAGES.

There is some talk of a municipal garage where automobiles may be left during business hours, or at all other times, for that matter. It is a subject that seems worthy of some investigation. The automobile is an institution the establishment of which has not been followed by any supporting changes in our municipal habits.

It is no longer possible to fringe the courthouse square with hitching posts, sorrel nags, and hay garnished vehicles; and the parking habit has long been a nuisance to automobilist, pedestrian, street car patron, and policeman. A motor parked two minutes too long involves the owner in a fine or a falsehood; he can pay the fine or tell the policeman he is the mayor's brother-in-law.

But a motorist may lose his car or have it damaged by collision or suffer any number of misfortunes through promiscuous parking. If the city could manage to provide sufficient and suitable garage space and a small fee charged there might be the end of an ever increasing evil.

MILITARY TRAINING FOR ALL.

[Joliet Herald-News.]

If a census of the people of the United States could be taken it does not seem likely that more than an infinitesimal proportion would cast their votes against a reasonable system of universal military training. That does not mean that the people have been converted to a belief in militarism. That is the furthest thing from their thoughts. The stress of the last year has been borne in on their minds and they do not feel like going through it again. They have seen what an effect the camp training has had upon the boys taken from the schools, the work benches and the factories. Pale, anemic boys have come back on furlough with the tint of health in their cheeks and the spring in their step that had been woefully lacking when they were on their way to school or to work. There has been an upstandingness that has been noticeable.

If this has been the result of a few weeks' training in a cantonment for the average boy, as caught up in the selective draft, why should not the benefits be extended to the entire group of boys just coming into the age in which, had the war continued, they would have been called into the service of their country?

Military training is called for and the states that take the greatest advantage of the aid that the federal government will offer will be the ones that will reap the greatest advantage.

JUST MISSED PERFECTION.

When Mrs. Langtry was at the summit of her beauty and fame she met at a dinner an African king who was visiting London. She did her best to please the dusky monarch, and evidently succeeded, for he said to her as they parted, "Ah, madam, if heaven had only made you black and fat you would be irresistible."—Boston Transcript.

COMRADES OF THE MIST

Admiral Sir David Beatty, commander in chief of the British grand fleet, delivered an address on board the U. S. S. New York on Dec. 1, before the detachment of the American Sixth battle squadron from the grand fleet. The following is the text of Admiral Beatty's address, as reported in the London Times of Dec. 18:

"I could not let the Sixth battle squadron go without coming on board the New York and saying something of what I feel at this moment of your departure. I had intended to ask Admiral Rodman to permit me to say something to representatives of all the ships of the Sixth battle squadron on board his flagship, but the exigencies of the service did not permit me.

"Therefore, as Admiral Rodman has said, what I say to you I hope you will promulgate to your comrades in other ships and also to your comrades of the Atlantic fleet. What I say, I hope you will understand, comes from the heart, not only my heart but the hearts of your comrades of the grand fleet.

"I want first of all to thank you, Admiral Rodman, the captains, officers, and ships' companies of this magnificent squadron for the wonderful coöperation and loyalty you have given me and my admirals and the assistance you have given us in every duty you had to undertake. The support which you have shown is that of true comradeship, and in the time of stress that is worth a very great deal. As somebody said the other day, 'Fighting is now over; talking is now going to begin.' Therefore, I do not want to keep you here any longer, but I want to congratulate you for having been present upon a day unsurpassed in the naval annals of the world.

"I know quite well that you, as well as all your British comrades, were bitterly disappointed at not being able to give effect to that efficiency you have so well maintained. It was a most disappointing day. It was a pitiful day to see those great ships coming in like sheep being herded by dogs to their fold without an effort on anybody's part, but it was a day everybody could be proud of.

"I have received messages from several people offering sympathy to the grand fleet, and my answer was, 'We do not want sympathy. We want recognition of the fact that the prestige of the grand fleet stood so high it was sufficient to cause the enemy to surrender without striking a blow.' I had always certain misgivings, and when the Sixth battle squadron became part of the grand fleet those misgivings were doubly strengthened, and I knew then they would throw up their hands. Apparently, the Sixth battle squadron was the straw that broke the camel's back.

"However, the disappointment that the grand fleet was unable to strike their blow for the freedom of the world is counteracted by the fact that it was their prestige alone that brought about this achievement. During the last twelve months you have been with us we have learned to know each other very well. We learned to respect each other.

"I want you to take back the message to the Atlantic fleet that you have left a very warm place in the hearts of the grand fleet which cannot be filled until you come back or send another squadron to represent you. You have given us a sample of the Atlantic fleet which I think it will try the Atlantic fleet, efficient as it is, very hard to reproduce. I understand you are now going to Portland, where you are to get leave. After that you have the duty to perform of bringing your president to these waters, and then you will return to your own shores. And I hope in the sunshine, which Admiral Rodman tells me always shines there, you will not forget your 'comrades of the mist' and your pleasant associations of the North sea.

"This is a queer place, as you found, but you were not the first to find it out. There was a great explorer, Marco Polo, who, after traveling over the world for thirty years, one day found himself in the North sea and then went home and went to bed and did not travel any more. I trust it will not have the same effect on any of you, but I can say that those of you whom I have seen during the last twelve months seem to have improved in many ways, if it is possible, and I think the North sea has a health giving quality which must be put against all the bad points, of which it has so many.

"I thank you again, again, and again for the great part the Sixth battle squadron has played in bringing about the greatest naval victory in history. I hope you will give this message to your comrades. Come back soon. Good-by and good luck."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

BUT WHY NOT SUPPRESS CRITICISM ALTOGETHER!

Chicago, Dec. 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I rather enjoy the reading of the news items in your esteemed newspaper. It surely excels its competitors in the matter of getting and arranging the things that are going on around us so that we feel confident that we really know something. We seldom see news items printed in it that are contradicted the next day. So we rest content that there is some truth printed and we can get it by purchasing a TRIBUNE.

But when it comes to running the military and civil business of our republic our minds are constantly kept in a state of alarm by the wisdom of the editorial writers who so relentlessly expose the ignorance of the officials who occupy the responsible places in our government. In our alarm we come to hope that the people will arouse themselves enough to put the editorial wisdom in charge of public affairs and let the inefficient government officers write the editorials. Then no one would lose a job and public business would be done right. GEORGE V. WELLS.

"GOB."

Chicago, Jan. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What is the origin of the word "gob" as applied to navy men? C. S. HULBERT.

"Gob" is simply a slang term applied to any sailor regardless of rank. It originated about five years ago, and came into prominence during the war on account of the sailor's preference to it in place of the epithet "jackie." In this sense it may be compared to the American infantryman's preference for "doughboy" over "Sammy."

DENTISTRY.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—This morning's TRIBUNE contains an article by Dr. Evans which, in my opinion, is an unjust criticism of good dentistry.

I have worn a bridge for thirty years, and in that time have made a great many, and all kind of dentures as well, yet I do not believe any of my patients are in a cemetery as the result.

We all admit that cheap bridges, inserted by careless and unskilled dentists, may do a great deal of harm, yet is that any reason why good bridges and the proper care of devitalized teeth should be condemned? Arsenic, strychnine, and other poisonous drugs may also do harm, but who would sanction the wholesale condemnation of such drugs used in their proper place?

No person with two teeth can masticate his food, yet Dr. Evans advocates their use instead of having well fitted dentures to restore these lost organs.

It is true, and no good dentist will deny, that disease may be contracted by diseased teeth, but he does not believe in retaining diseased teeth in the mouth. G. H. HENDERSON.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

Dr. Evans' advice on "How to Keep Well" appears daily on the editorial page of "The Daily Tribune."

REASONS FOR FLYING ACCIDENTS.

EARLY in the war the government selected a group of scientists with Prof. Yandall Henderson of Yale as their head to conduct research on the atmosphere at different levels. The object of these studies was to discover why accidents occur in flying and then to work out methods of prevention. With the mechanics of flying machines this group of scientists had nothing to do. Their research dealt wholly with the human machine.

They were to determine the reaction of the human machine to the physical and chemical variations in the atmosphere at different levels. For instance, some men had lost their lives because when more than five miles up they had lost consciousness because of the thinness of the air or because of the cold. On the other hand, men descending to the earth from great heights have lost consciousness and been killed because of the effects of the denser air near the ground.

Research men know a good deal about the composition of the atmosphere seven and more miles up, but before the air routes can be called reasonably safe it is necessary to do much experimental work. The Medical Research Board of the Council of National Defense has been experimenting with a view to solving some of these problems. Discoveries made in great part by them have added 10,000 feet to the altitude at which men can fly and gradually they are working out factors of safety.

The air consists of one part oxygen and four parts nitrogen in round figures. The oxygen is the active agent in breathing. Nitrogen is a very valuable agent for some purposes, but so far as the needs of animals for breath are concerned the only reason for it in the air is to dilute the oxygen.

Many of us have the idea that because a little oxygen is good for us more would be better. As a matter of fact, air that contains more oxygen than one part in five is harmful. Furthermore, while it may appeal to our imaginations to breathe that unusually active form of oxygen known as ozone nothing could be worse for us than to be compelled to breathe ozone for any length of time. A little of it for a short time we can stand, but the limit of safety is soon passed. Moral—Don't let any man humbug you with an ozone machine.

In addition to oxygen and nitrogen atmospheric air always contains some watery vapor, some carbonic acid gas, and traces of rare elements. The proportion of carbonic acid ordinarily is about 4 parts per 10,000. When air passes through human lungs it gains enough carbonic acid to raise the proportion to 4.34 parts per 100 and it loses 4.94 of its 20.96 parts of oxygen.

The experimenters took advantage of this to produce atmospheres of the same composition as these at different levels above sea level. The air expired from the lungs passed through an alkali which took the carbonic acid gas out of it. It then passed to the breathing chamber, where it was rebreathed.

Every time it went through the lung it was robbed of about 20 per cent of its oxygen. After the process of rebreathing had been carried on for a few minutes the air was as poor in oxygen as is the atmosphere 25,000 to 35,000 feet above the sea level.

The experimenters duplicated the qualities and conditions of the atmosphere at various levels and subjected the men experimented on to these changed conditions and watched the effect. They found that some men could stand an elevation of 35,000 feet without any ill effects if they were supplied with oxygen from an oxygen apparatus.

If the proportion of oxygen in the air fell from the normal, nearly 21 per cent, to, say, 6 per cent, the men were very liable to faint. If men who had been in air that was around 10 per cent oxygen were quickly changed to air with an oxygen percentage of 21 per cent the men were liable to faint.

When the amount of oxygen in the air began to decrease it was possible to notice faint effects. But the body usually was able to turn on a little more steam and overcome these effects.

The men himself probably did not notice that he was not up to par. When the proportion of oxygen had fallen to about 14 or 16 per cent most of the men were cognizant of the fact that the air was rarer and that they were breathing under difficulties.

Men varied very much in their capacity to withstand low oxygen. Of course, the man with heart disease who cannot stay in a room the windows of which are down and who can only sleep sitting up or with several pillows under his head—such a man cannot stay in air from which any oxygen has been exhausted. But even strong men who have passed other tests for aviators sometimes showed an inability to work in thin air.

Some were pretty comfortable in air as rare as that at 35,000 feet and others showed signs of trouble when conditions a thousand feet up were duplicated. Therefore, Dr. Henderson and his helpers averaged tests and in order to do so expeditiously they built a steel chamber capable of holding eight men and then they altered the atmospheric conditions in this chamber at will.

The principal effect on breathing was increase in depth of respiration. A few breathed more rapidly, but the majority either did not increase their rates of respiration or else increased it by only two breaths a minute. A man ordinarily breathes about sixteen times a minute, and the volume of air breathed about 8.5 litres (quarts).

The incoming air current proceeds about as far as the large bronchi, while from that on the air changes by what is known as diffusion. When the oxygen in the atmosphere is reduced the breathing is deeper, and as much as fourteen liters (quarts) is breathed per minute. Some men breathed as much as thirty-seven liters, when the atmosphere corresponded to that at 28,000 feet.

Most men commenced to breathe noticeably deeper when the oxygen fell to 16 per cent. When the oxygen in the air begins to go down the pulse begins to rise. This menace continues until it reaches about fifty beats (say, a rise from 72 to 122). Then it is liable to begin to slow down. If the pulse slows down after rising and while the oxygen is still being exhausted from the air it is a sign that the heart is giving out. This is the condition which causes fainting at high altitudes.

In a group of seventy men 1 per cent began to show a pulse reaction at 7,000 to 8,000 feet, 12 per cent at 8,000 to 9,000 feet, 20 per cent at 9,000 to 10,000 feet, 14 per cent at 10,000 to 11,000 feet, 23 per cent at 12,000 to 13,000, 12.7 per cent at 13,000 to 14,000 feet.

The changes in blood pressure at different levels were likewise studied. Other tests were made on the effects of the changes in the atmosphere in hearing, sight, and mentality. The experiments showed that men ordinarily fit to fly were not always fit. If an aviator ordinarily good took a little too mucch wine the night before his heart and lungs showed it "right off the reel." Overeating or any other variety of indiscretion would reveal itself in the laboratory tests. Some men seemed to go stale without any discoverable cause. When in such condition aviators should not take to the air.

Physicians will be interested in a by-product of this investigation. The scientists doing this work were agreed that the low oxygen test was the best method known for trying out athletic hearts, weak hearts, and other hearts suspected of being organically or functionally below par.

Now, when a man has noticed that he is getting short of breath or must sleep with three or four pillows under his head or feels suffocated when the windows are closed he suspects that he has heart disease and goes to a physician. The physician, let us say, examines the man's heart with a stethoscope and finds no evidence of valvular disease. He then makes his patient hop around the room or walk briskly up the steps, and when the heart is pumping rapidly, embarrassed by the exercise, he listens again with a fair certainty that he will find a murmur or some other irregularity.

The new method proposed by the research board is to attach the man to an air rarefying apparatus as he sits in a chair. In a few minutes the man will be breathing air of the composition of the atmosphere at 10,000 feet. If there is any heart leak or any weakness of the heart muscle it will show itself as the man sits quietly in a chair with as much certainly as though it had been developed by hopping or climbing stairs.

* * *

The amount of flying is destined to increase even though peace should remain our lot. If the work of the flyer is to be made reasonably safe we must know everything possible about the human machine that is to pilot as well as the iron machine that is to be piloted. When the former has been as thoroughly studied as the latter the hazards of flying will be materially lessened. This piece of research work should do much toward lessening the accidents of flying.

WHOLE FAMILY AFFECTED.

Mrs. I. F. K. writes: "We would be much pleased if you can give us a little light on and also a remedy for a disease of the skin, which is affecting each of a family of five. The skin itches dreadfully and breaks out on some of us, sometimes in large eruptions resembling measles. Small red bumps appear on different parts of the body. There are also little lumps resembling goose bumps which itch as badly as the red ones. We have been troubled with this for a long time.

"About a year ago our three little girls had scarlet fever. This disease of the skin followed. My husband and I and a sister who was with us at the time all suffer from this disease of the skin. Last winter my body was in a bad condition, following the scarlet fever, which we all thought we had. My feet and toes peeled in pieces as large as 5 cent pieces. The breaking out was well through the summer, but the itching continued, but not so bad. Now this winter my skin almost crazes me.

"My husband's body last winter was a fright. The eruptions on him were of all sizes. You could not touch a place without touching the broken out spots. The places were as large and larger than 5 cent pieces. The scars are on him yet. His skin looks pitted. This covered his whole body. The itching was so severe he said he felt crazy, especially as night and early mornings.

"Our family doctor treated us a long time for it. He called it psoriasis. Could this be caused from the scarlet fever? Is there a cure for it? If so, what is it? Is it contagious? Our doctor thought it first started from something we had eaten. My husband is not troubled with it now, but myself and three children are scratching all the time. Please give us some advice through the columns of 'How to Keep Well.' What do you call the disease?"

REPLY.

I am inclined to think you have the itch or scabies. If it is scabies or itch proceed as follows: Take a thorough soap and hot water bath. Use a brush or a coarse rough cloth. After this bath rub into the skin an ointment consisting of sulphur, 5; Balsam Peru, 5; prepared chalk, 5; green soap, 5; vaseline enough to make 100. Rub well with the ointment, especially over the itchy inflamed places. Apply the ointment night and morning for one week. Then take another soap and hot water bath. Change underclothing and sheets. The underwear and sheets must be boiled to prevent reinfection.

NEEDS ATTENTION.

O. M. S. writes: "I have a lump at the root of one of my upper incisors, which has been there two years. At times it is larger than others, and pus accumulates. When it breaks and runs it goes down, but swells up again in a few days. The tooth it is at the root of is partly decayed, but seldom aches. Is there a probability of its being serious? What treatment do you advise?"

REPLY.

You have a decayed tooth and possibly some dead bone or an embedded tooth at its root. At any rate, periodically you develop alveolar abscesses. The condition is not serious, but you had better have that tooth and the tissues below it attended to. Probably the tooth should be removed.

* * *

NO DANGER.

E. writes: "I am three months pregnant. Is there any harm in having dental work done while in this condition?"

REPLY.

No.

301ST WITH 76TH DIVISION.

Greeley, Ia., Dec. 28.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Will you please tell me to what division a soldier with the following address belongs: Company K, Three Hundred and First United States infantry, American Expeditionary Forces, via New York, American P. O. 773?

Would also like to know where this division is stationed and whether it is returning to the United States or is in the army of occupation; whether this division was in any battle after Oct. 19. M. C.

Attached to the One Hundred and Fifty-first brigade, Seventy-sixth division; not a part of the army of occupation. Now stationed at St. Nazaire, France. When the armistice was signed it was stationed at St. Anant and Montrond, France, far behind the battle lines. No, it did not see fighting after Oct. 19.

127TH STATIONED IN GERMANY.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 27.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—What division is the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh infantry in? At present where is this division located and is it among the divisions that are expected home soon? M. F.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh infantry is attached to the Thirty-third division, now with the army of occupation. It is stationed in Germany. No, it is not expected to come home soon. The Thirty-third was not originally designated for the army of occupation but was included later.

FOURTH ENGINEERS IN GERMANY.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 28.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Can you tell me where the Fourth engineers are? Are they in the army of occupation? When will they return and will the boys put in there from the Blackhawk division return with the Fourth engineers or the Blackhawk? E. L. S.

The Fourth engineers is in the Fourth division, attached to the army of occupation, now stationed at Hayanges, Germany. Troops transferred to the Fourth engineers will not return with the Blackhawk division, which is now on its way to the United States.

THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SECOND.

Independence, Ia., Dec. 28.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Please publish in your column all information you have concerning the Three Hundred and Fifty-second infantry. B. E.

The Three Hundred and Fifty-second infantry is attached to the Eighty-eighth division. When the fighting ceased on Nov. 11 the division was stationed at Montreaux Chateau, Isur-Tille, France. It is commanded by Maj. Gen. George William Weigel. The Eighty-eighth is now stationed at [illegible] France. It is not a part of the army of occupation.

124TH ARTILLERY WITH 33D.

Park Ridge, Ill., Dec. 29.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Having followed your column from day to day, have seen nothing of the whereabouts of Battery F, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth field artillery. Would be very much obliged if you would print through your column the location of it. E. S.

The One Hundred and Twenty-fourth artillery, to which Battery F belongs, is attached to the Thirty-third division, now a part of the army of occupation. The Thirty-third division is stationed in Germany not far from the Rhine.

102D AT CORBIE, FRANCE.

Three Rivers, Mich., Dec. 29.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—My husband is with the One Hundred and second engineers of the Twenty-seventh division. I would like very much to know where that division is located and whether there is any date set for its return. L. G. L.

The Twenty-seventh division is at Corbie, France. No, there has been no date yet fixed for the One Hundred and Second's return.

Letters for this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

DIFFERENCE CANNOT BE COLLECTED.

Columbus, Miss., Dec. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A sold B a piece of property in New York on the following terms: One-half cash and a note for the balance due three years from date with interest at 6 per cent per annum until paid, secured by a mortgage on the property conveyed. B, after having paid interest for four years (one payment of interest was after the note became due), sold this property by warranty deed to C, who failed to meet the past due note of B, and the property was foreclosed but did not bring the amount of the note and accrued interest. B is insolvent. Would C be liable for the difference between the debt and what the property brought. L. E.

EMPLOYER MAY CLAIM DELAY NECESSARY.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—[To The Legal Friend of the People.]—I am working for a concern which pays its people on the fifteenth and last days of each month. The work done (much of which is piece work) from the first to the fifteenth is paid for on the last day of the month, and that done from the fifteenth to the end of the month on the fifteen following.

The custom is, when a man quits, the company takes from one to three days to figure up what is due him. When he is discharged a delay of about a day is usual in making up the amount.

Is there not some law that a discharged workman is entitled to his pay either at once or within an hour or two after being laid off?

Can the employer claim necessary delay, say of a day, in going over his pay roll? C.

1. No.
2. Yes.

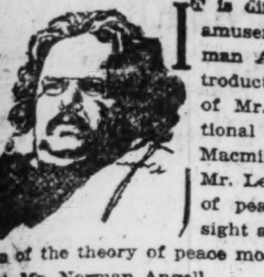
NATIONAL HONOR

By Gilbert K. Chesterton



IT is difficult to avoid a sense of amusement on finding Mr. Norman Angell writing a special introduction to the interesting book of Mr. Leo Perla [What is National Honour? New York: The Macmillan company. $1.50]. For Mr. Leo Perla sets forth a theory of peace which seems, at first sight at any rate, a flat contradiction of the theory of peace mostly prominently associated with Mr. Norman Angell.

Mr. Angell is chiefly famous for having written a book to show that nations were unwise in going to war, since war was a financial speculation that would never really pay. For some of us it would be enough to answer that it is always unpardonable, whether or no it is unwise, to go to war as a financial speculation, whether or no it is likely to pay.

Mr. Angell's book was too mild a criticism of the wars that are not worth waging; and was not a criticism at all of the wars that are worth waging. But Mr. Perla's book might very well be regarded as a sharply antagonistic criticism of Mr. Angell's book. Mr. Perla's book is entirely founded on the idea that most wars are not fought for material interest; and therefore the enlightenment of that interest is no guarantee against wars.

It is the whole point of Mr. Perla's pages that wars do not come through a commercial calculation, or any calculation; but through something which he describes, in a rather withering manner, as emotion. They arise especially from a strange emotion called honour; which the writer, one may fairly say, finds not only mystical but mysterious. But whether or no we share his mystification, we can all share his realization; and do justice to the scientific honesty which leads him to see that, as a fact of history, most wars have turned not on a material point of self-interest, but on a moral point of self respect. It is certainly the most correct conception in his book; possibly the only correct conception in his book. But if his view is correct, the view of the gentleman who writes his introduction is certainly incorrect.

A PRIMARY comment may be made on the misconception of the sentiment of honour among men of this school; which may fairly be described as the Semi-Pacifist school. The fallacy runs through numberless passages condemning private and public combat, classing a battle with a duel, or a duel with a murder. But Mr. Perla has put the blunder in a compact and conspicuous form on the first pages of his book, in a quotation from some professor, which he takes as a sort of motto for it. "To argue that a nation's honour must be defended by the blood of its citizens, if need be, is quite meaningless, for any nation, though profoundly right in its contention, might be defeated at the hands of a superior force exerted on behalf of an unjust and unrighteous cause. What becomes of national honour then?"

The answer is that national honour is then vindicated; in the only way in which it can be vindicated. It is of the very essence of honour that it is not lost by failure to defeat the oppressor; but is lost by failure to defy him. This is true even in the case of a duel; and even in the case of a bad duel.

No code was ever so barbaric as to suppose that the man who fell had failed in the matter of redeeming his reputation. Nobody thought that Alexander Hamilton had not behaved like a gentleman; even if Burr had only behaved like a bully. And nobody ever thought that Kosciusko had lost either his own honour or the honour of Poland, because the Polish rising was suppressed.

Nobody ever supposed that Wolf Tone or Robert Emmet had lost either their own honour or the honour of Ireland, because the rising of '98 was suppressed.

A MAN resisting a wrong is not a sort of materialistic magician who can say that it shall not be forced on him. On the contrary, he is a man who says that it shall be forced on him; because he will not assent and therefore assist. In a private case like that of Burr and Hamilton it is precisely the dead man whose dignity is secure; it was the living man whose dignity, for other reasons, was doubtful. In a public case like that of the patriots of Ireland and Poland, it is the defeated nations that have become sacred; nor will civilization have saved its soul alive until the hope of Kosciusko is realized and the epitaph of Emmet written.

Indeed the fact that seems to escape me, writers of this school, is the fact that all they write about war is equally applicable to revolution. There is always the same difficulty of defining at what point human dignity is intolerably insulted; at what point corporate indignation is a reaction of common sense. They would not in any case, indeed, be particularly sympathetic with the corporate indignation, or even with the common sense. It is really the whole point of their intellectualism to say that sense is never common.

The primary point that strikes me about all these extreme apostles of peace is their profound dislike of democracy. They are never so contentedly contemptuous as when they can refer to something as an emotion of the masses, or part of the psychology of the crowd. In this tone there is complete consistency; even between Mr. Perla who writes the book and Mr. Angell who writes the introduction.

Pacifists always insist that the people cannot think but only feel; that the many headed beast never acts till it has lost all its heads. But in truth, it all fails upon a very simple fact; that the people cannot only think, it can know.

For instance, Mr. Perla has a curious passage about emotional unification producing "the certainty with which every Frenchman but Rolland regards Germany as the aggressor," and even talks of the "extreme mental vigor" needed to detach one's self from it. Now, in fact, the French masses showed not only far more mental vigor, but far more mental clarity, when they saw their homes burned and their brethren butchered, and waited with a mind unchanged, than Rolland ever showed when he decamped comfortably to write cloudy essays in Switzerland.

AND they did not merely feel, or even think, that Germany was the aggressor; they knew it. They knew it, first, because they were citizens and knew the facts, and, second, because they were Frenchmen and knew the Germans.

Such a popular apprehension is not any the less rational because it is rapid. The belief of a democracy in the far west, that a prairie fire is undesirable, is none the less strictly logical because they act promptly on the premise, even to the extent of hanging the incendiary. It is the curse of all this intellectualist literature that it would merely make the verdict clearer by making it calmer, and calmer by making it slower. It thinks itself clever when it rushes down the road shouting "Combustion!" instead of shouting "Fire!" It thinks itself more rational for giving a botanical catalogue of the vegetation destroyed by the fire. But it is in reality less rational.

Mr. Perla's book is undoubtedly an earnest ethical inquiry into an important subject, and contains many interesting and valuable passages. But it is infected throughout with this fallacy of supposing that mere frigidity in the presence of outrage is the guarantee of a reasonable reply. As a fact, indignation is in itself a much more reasonable reply. And he could not more completely have answered his own case than by his own example—the case of France in this war. For France, which is the most rational nation, has also been the most rigidly national; and where there was most logic there was also most loyalty.

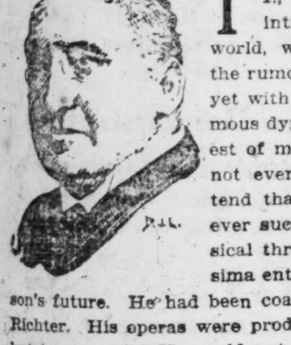
COSIMA WAGNER

By James Huneker



THE reported passing of Cosima I., queen of Baireuth, did not intrigue the attention of the world, whose ears are filled with the rumors of mightier happenings, yet with her death will pass the famous dynasty founded by the greatest of modern composers. No one, not even his admirers, dared pretend that Siegfried Wagner would ever succeed his father on the musical throne. For a brief span Cosima entertained high hopes for her son's future. He had been coached by Humperdinck and Richter. His operas were produced in European capitals, but to no avail. He could not fill the shadow of his sire, much less write a bar of music worth whistling. Wotan had fathered a Parsifal Jr. and Baireuth sympathized with Cosima's disappointment. It was the second sorrow of a life crowded with happiness. In 1883 the man she adored as a god died on her bosom at Venice. That tragic event transformed her from a loving wife to the sternly ambitious woman who ruled the destinies of Baireuth for thirty years. In 1913 the third sorrow came to her in the unwelcome shape of copyright expiration. The music of Wagner was free to every country. Parsifal, the Rhinegold of Baireuth, already had been ravaged by an American Alberich; nevertheless, from the shock of the legal decision which blotted Baireuth off the map of music, Cosima never recovered. She was a shadow of her former grandeur. She had outlived her majesty.

I first saw her in 1894. It was the summer when Lillian Nordica made her debut in the historic opera house on the hill. Zoltan Doeme, her husband, also appeared. His Parsifal, too, is historic. Queen Cosima I. was a tall, gaunt woman with the familiar Liszt profile, her white hair worn a la Liszt, her stride that of a grenadier. She ruled with an iron hand, a hand not encased in a velvet glove like her father's. A tyrant in petticoats was the usual ascription, not loved, indeed feared, she ran the Baireuth machine with the shrewdness of a Tammany hall politician. Her contemporaries concur in that. A woman of brains, courage, audacity, she recalled for me a second Margravine of Baireuth in her domineering manner. She would tolerate no rivals. Conductor after conductor came and went.

When Lilli Lehmann toward the close of a glorious artistic career sang in 1896, then Gibraltar met Gibraltar. Lilli had been one of the Rhine daughters in 1876. She knew her Wagner as well as Cosima. There was gossip then of which I got my fill. The ladies parted the best of friends, of course. Olive Fremstad, a pupil of Lehmann, was one of the Rhine daughters that year. Lilla Gulbranson was the Brunnhilde after Lehmann. Alois Burgstaller made a clumsy debut as Siegfried and Parsifal. Mottl was the reigning favorite, Felix of Munich the first man in whom the inconsolable Cosima showed deep interest after the death of Richard.

COSIMA, all said and done, was a daughter of Franz Liszt. The last time I saw her was in 1901. With George Moore I stood on the esplanade facing the Franconian valley, and during an entr'acte of the "Ring" we discussed the mediocre conducting of Prince Siegfried Wagner and the fond, foolish affection of his mother. She passed. This time she rode, but that rigid spine, the proud poise of the head, the undimmed hawklike eyes, "I am the widow of Wagner and the daughter of Liszt!"—they seemed thus to challenge the gaze of the public—proved her still in possession of all her powers. And she was then past 60.

Her forbears were just as remarkable. Liszt met her mother, the Countess d'Agoult, in the brilliant whirl of his artistic successes at Paris. Chopin had dedicated to her the first book of his Etudes. She was beautiful, accomplished, and her intimates declare that hers was not a truthful nature. She was born Marie Sophie de Flavigny, in 1805, at Frankfort on Main, Germany. Her father was the Vicomte de Flavigny, a French refugee who had married the daughter of Simon Moritz Bethmann, a rich banker, originally from Amsterdam and a Jew converted to Lutheranism.

Marie had literary ability, boasted of once meeting Goethe, and in 1827 she married Count Charles d'Agoult of Paris. Social sedition was in the air. The "misunderstood woman"—no new thing then, and still with us—was the fashion. George Sand was changing her lovers with every book she wrote, and the Countess d'Agoult began to yearn for fame and adventures. Liszt appeared. He seems to have been the pursued one. They eloped. In honor he could not desert the woman. They made Geneva their home—temporarily, for both had the nomad heart and were doomed to pitch their tents in many strange places.

MME. D'AGOULT bore him three children—Blandine, Cosima and Daniel. Blandine, the beauty of the family, married Emile Ollivier in 1857. She died in 1862. Liszt greatly loved her. Ollivier was later Napoleon's war minister, and was pushed to the top of his bent by the Mephisto of European politics, Count von Bismarck. He died a few years ago, nearly a centenarian and busy to the last explaining that he was not to blame for losing the tragic Franco-Prussian war. His hell was paved with good intentions before he reached there.

Cosima married Hans von Buelow, her father's "favorite pupil" (there were hundreds of them) in 1857. True to family form, she ran off with Richard Wagner and to the despair of her father married that fickle gentleman. Her father's discomfiture was the result of Cosima's defection from the Roman Catholic faith. She renounced this faith and became of her husband's religious persuasian—i. e., nominally a Protestant, in reality a free thinker. Daniel Liszt, the hope of his father, died in December, 1859, at the age of 20. Liszt had legitimatized the birth of his children, had educated them, had generously dowered his daughters, and all three were a source of sorrow to him.

The high light of comedy was not absent when the gallant Count d'Agoult—we shan't say "bereaved of his wife," for who shall pretend to analyze the mixed emotions of a man sorely wounded in his pride of race and secretly overjoyed at being rid of a pernicious blue-stocking?—called a family council which, after due consideration, pronounced the verdict that Monsieur Francois Liszt (they spelled it Litz in Paris) had behaved like a "perfect gentlemen" in a certain indelicate indiscretion, thereby absolving him from all blame in the matter.

As might have been foreseen, La d'Agoult quarreled with Liszt. They parted bad friends. Under the pen name of Daniel Stern she attacked him in her souvenirs and novels. He forgave. A most irritating trait in his career was his inability to hate his enemies. Of Heine he spoke ill. When some one asked him if Heine's name would not be carved on the portals of fame, Liszt replied: "Yes, in letters of mud"—which is manifestly unjust. In 1860 Franz and Marie met for the last time and in Paris. He gently told her that the true title of her souvenirs should have been "Poses et Mensonges." She wept. He was quite right. She was a detestable poseuse and a fibber. Tragic comedians, both. They bored each other. Their union recalls Flaubert's profound remark that Emma Bovary found in adultery only the platitudes of marriage. Perhaps other ladies had supervened in the existence of Liszt. Like Byron, he was the sentimental hero of his day.

1918

By Scudder Middleton

Long held content within your sea girt home,
America, you child of work and mirth,
Now you have snapped the ancient bars to roam,
A giant stripling, over all the earth.
Now all the glittering earth is yours to hold:
The million-handed engines and the stone
Piled Babel-wise and all the noisy gold,
The proudest ships the world has ever known.
O child, beware of your heroic part—
The low Satanic voice is in your ears.
Look long and deep into that giant heart,
For what you do will make the waiting years!
Not in defeat but in the hour of might
Comes on the test that reads the soul aright.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

January

A New Year.

NEW birth for the imagination when all the facts of life are dead; birth at zero and under a foot of snow; birth with the wind out of the northeast and scolding at the eaves; new birth in conditions which are intimations of death, but nevertheless a new birth, a birth of life when the facts are moribund; a birth of idea and perception and ideality when nothing lives except such daring visitants as the nuthatch and the downy woodpecker.

For us in this climate it is the most daring reach of the imaginaton to start a new whirl of the wheel when every aspect of what surrounds us is convincing in its assertion that all things are dead, when the woods which had heavy foliage are stripped, when the ground which had a lush carpet is covered with snow, when the wind which was soft and fragrant is howling and cold, when life which was exuberant and rich is stark and dead.

At this moment, when the suggestion is of death and of eternal death we start a new year, with renewed hope and renewed illusions, with new strength for the turn of the wheel, with new hope in prospects and in destiny, with renewed belief in the benevolence of life, with renewed idea that the frost-filled ground holds nothing permanently that is of disadvantage to human kind.

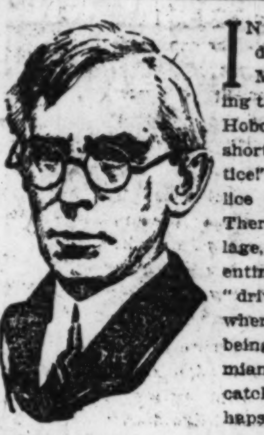
BOHEMIANS

By Rollin Lynde Hartt



IN a wisp or two of that shredded prose we call vers libre, Miss Dorothy Parker is berating the Bohemians (or should I say Hobohemians?) and barely stops short of crying, "Police take notice!"—a thing the New York police have already begun to do. There is fright in Greenwich Village, profound uneasiness at Fiorentini's. One hears talk of a "drive." Impossible to guess where the drive will end. This being the open season for Bohemians, what wonder if Boston's catch a drubbing next—or perhaps Chicago's?

We have desperate Bohemians here. I know a den of iniquity in the Fine Arts building, where they drawl alarming utterances—such, for example, as "Life is so simple; do just as you please." I was among those present in a south side studio when our most dangerous Bohemian procured a tall blue and white vase, advanced it into a circle the tribe had formed, sat cross-legged beside it, and monologued on "the mystical esoteric cryptogram in Matisse"—that is, until his wife whispered, "My dear, you've gassed enough." And I have dined with our "table d'hote Bolsheviki"—terrible chaps, given to black sombreros and enormous flowing ties.

But do I profess the usual abhorrence of Bohemians? O, jamais de la vie! You have read in the Bohemians' Bible—a work entitled "Trilby"—the passage where Du Maurier hints that beneath the appalling exterior lurks a sweet and babelike innocence; and over yonder in the Art Institute you have seen the statue in bronze that at first glance appears a portrait of Elbert Hubbard but turns out on closer scrutiny to body forth "The Puritan." Revelatory, this. Scratch a Bohemian and you find a Puritan.

Murger, it is true, prefaced his immortal opus by declaring that necessity, not whim, is the mother of Bohemianism, and here and there the apology holds good, even in America. Kenneth Brown has told me in horrified tones of a Greenwich Village soiree at which the guests squatted two and two on sofa pillows in the dark and held hands. Shocking! Scandalous! But could their hostess afford chairs? Was not last month's electric light bill a horror? And is there cheaper entertainment available anywhere than squatting two and two on sofa pillows and holding hands?

HERVEY WHITE, author of "Difference," inhabited a Beacon hill garret when I knew him. Only by dispensing with life's necessities could he obtain its luxuries. Benjamin Brooks had a room precisely the dimensions of Benjamin Brooks, and the bureau was under the bed. Only thus could he prepare for a long, joyous sojourn abroad. Yet in general it is not necessity that breeds Bohemianism among us, nor is it whim. It is Puritanism.

Somewhere in the B'Gosh Belt of Massachusetts—in the "taown o' Shutesbury," to be exact—you will hear the saying, "Bring up a child in the way he should go, an' when he is old he'll go it." What Bohemian boasts that he was to the manner born, with a temperament in one hand, a wickered chianti flask in the other? Full well he knows that you can run him down in Who's Who, and, like as not, come upon the damning and (to him) damnable word "Presbyterian." Carefully brought up in the way he should go, he is now going it.

At a trifle too lively a clip, some will contend. In the musical play that announced itself as "a balmy breeze from Bohemia," the chorus sang jubilantly, "There comes a night when we all get tight; I'm glad when it comes—aren't you?" And I learn that when two Greenwich Village Bohemians fall out, one says to the other, "I've got my opinion of a man that doesn't keep his alimony paid up." Nor have I forgotten the Greenwich Villager who affirmed, "Occasional infidelity does a husband good—he appreciates his wife so much better." Yet I am not one of those who chide the Bohemians mainly for reacting too violently against Puritanism. From Bohemia to Vulgaria 'tis but a step. What irks me about Bohemians is that—commonly, if not habitually—they react against Puritanism too languidly. Puritans still, they are slaves to convention. Fleeing one set of taboos, they have espoused another.

In "Songs from Vagabondia" Bliss Carman and Richard Hovey belauded "freedom," yet you can shock a Bohemian out of six months' growth by sweetening your after dinner coffee, and nothing in the grimmest Puritan's code quite equals for severity a Bohemian's abhorrence of the "bourgeois." He must on no account permit himself to be bromidic. Overtaken by a shower on my piazza, Gelett Burgess could not say, "Let's go in." He was compelled to say, "It's God's own rain. Let's stay out."

ONE awful night in Boston a Greenwich Villager and I looked on while two particularly devout Bohemians endeavored to put each other under the table. What the Greenwich Villager wanted to say was, "This is disgusting!" He almost did. A moment more and the words would have been out and his reputation for being a Bohemian destroyed forever. I shudder to think what Greenwich Village would have called him. "Grossly moral," perhaps. But at last he hit on a phrase that would do. "Gentlemen," said he, "this is very gauche!"

On another occasion he was describing an interchange of epithets between a cabby and an ash man. I gathered that those worthies traced each other's biological antecedents to sources by no means flattering. But could a Bohemian register disapproval, or imply it, or so much as suggest it? Ten thousand times no! It would verge on the bourgeois, or perchance the bromidic and "grossly moral." Accordingly, my Bohemian was compelled to say, "They called each other unconventional names."

If this be "freedom," give me jail. It is less confining. I feel about Bohemian freedom somewhat as I feel about typical French humor. "Broad," they term it. As it consists of one joke and only one, I can conceive of nothing narrower.

O, well, we are rarely so uncompromisingly serious as in our play, and—confess it, mes amis—Bohemianism is play. Woe to him who interferes. We forgive an infant for wailing in church, never for wailing at the theater. When my friend William J. Long got himself burned for heresy, few of us minded, but when naturalists questioned his reliability as a narrator of entertaining adventures among the Dicky birds, we took it that something important was up. Beware how you meddle with our fun—especially when, as in the case of Bohemianism—the fun is fact founded on fiction.

Ah, how slender, how frail that fiction! A fair Bohemian, who treasured a rather dubious array of Parisian comic papers (notably Gil Blas) and was wont to say, "I detest the Outlook, it's so piously naive," once told me of Richard Hovey and the mantle he wore—a toga, only black, flung about him with delicious abandon. She wondered how it stayed on, for a more careless, reckless, impulsively temperamental toga never dared the four winds of heaven. But one day Hovey threw it off and forgot it, and the fair Bohemian made bold to investigate. Lo, a nice little row of secret buttons matching a nice little row of secret buttonholes!

I am not holding this up against the poet; great Ibsen, you remember, carried a looking glass inside his sacred stovepipe hat, so as to make sure of properly disarranging his hair when he arrived at the hotel where each day he posed before the tourists. There are worse sins than his, and far worse sins than Hovey's. But it struck me that a clever woman, catching on, might have seen in the harmless swindle an exposure of all Bohemia. I like those painstaking carelessnesses, those labored whimsicalities, those premeditated spontaneities. They amuse. Yet somehow they joggle my faith in Bohemia.

WONDERFUL Bohemians! Believing in neither God, man, nor the devil, they cherish an unconquerable belief in tinseled humbug. Half that miracle of credulity—a tithe, I might almost say—should qualify any well grounded Bohemian to become a Quaker, a Methodist, a Baptist, and an Episcopalian rolled into one. Why, bless you, this fellow even believes he has a temperament!

Temperament! Pish and tush! It is the main thing Bohemians lack. Wild dashing, thunderous souls they think themselves, but temperament implies health, and Miss Elene Foster was quite right when she exclaimed, on first viewing a certain particularly eminent Bohemian, "Humph! Refused at the morgue!" while Frank Norris muttered, truthfully, "Reminds you of the things you find under stones." Moreover, temperament implies sensibility; and it is a dearth of sensibility, not an overplus, that makes Bohemians. High strung, exquisite, finely organized natures get more thrills out of cuddling a child than your sham temperamentalist derives from ten thousand midnight escapades. To the most dauntless Bohemian you may say, confidently, "Brother, you can't go my pace."

In their passion for bizarre experience, Bohemians betray a good deal the same drab, wearisome dullness you notice in explorers, in hunters of big game, in missionaries to the cannibal isles, and in adventurers in general. Only tremendous excitements can remind Bohemians that they are alive. They aren't—very. It is nearer the truth to call them "dead ones." An affair of the crude and obstreperous twenties—roaring twenties, if you like—Bohemianism is speedily outgrown.

THERE are high old times at Fiorentini's still. When a little dulled, a little stupid—that is to say, when suffering from an attack of youth—one acknowledges their attractiveness. In other moods, temperament forbids, and in so saying I intend no fling at Fiorentini's. Time was, when one obtained bewitching emotional reactions from a recital—preferably fortissimo and molto con fuoco—on the comb. "But in music we know how fashions change," says Browning, and with social delights it is even so.

When Bohemia has surrendered its charm and the dawn of civilization within one has brought about a growth in delicacy of feeling and in versatility of interest, what should be one's attitude toward those turbulent Bohemian joys? An attitude of deep thankfulness, I suspect. "Freedom" was silly—perhaps worse—but out of it came a serene acceptance of conventions. You have discovered—personally and by audacious tampering—that the wisdom amassed through centuries of human experience is on the whole not to be sneezed at. But, whereas it was once thrust at you and into you and down you by dire compulsion, it is now yours by choice. You claim citizenship at last in the true Bohemia. You have dropped the quotation marks from "free."

Meanwhile, the "coasts of Bohemia" await you when wanted—a happy refuge whenever by reason of boredom or folly a man feels as old as he used to be.

Keeping Radiator 'Dope' on the Job

A perplexing thing about the use of alcohol as an anti-freeze agent in the cooling system is the problem of keeping it in the radiator in just the right amount. The following report, prepared after a long series of experiments by the United States bureau of standards at Washington, should be worth noting:

UNFORTUNATELY, with alcohol solutions the alcohol continually boils out and it must be replaced frequently in order to maintain the proper proportion of alcohol. Glycerin is frequently substituted for part of the alcohol to reduce evaporation, but when glycerin is used the rubber connections may be affected somewhat seriously, depending on the quality of the rubber.

The most practical method to maintain the proper quantity of alcohol in the solution is to determine the specific gravity of the liquid by means of an hydrometer and, by reference to the appended table, add the necessary quantity of alcohol to obtain the desired gravity. Care should be taken to have the solution thoroughly mixed and, as the specific gravities given in the tables are obtained at 60 degrees F., the specific gravity should be measured when the temperature of the solution is between 55 degrees F. and 65 degrees F.

The solution may then be kept at the proper strength from day to day by adding alcohol until the hydrometer reads the same as when first noted.

In order to illustrate how a nonfreezing solution is prepared by using the table, assume that the lowest temperature anticipated is 19 degrees above zero, Fahrenheit, and that denatured alcohol is to be used. By reference to the table in the line marked "denatured alcohol" 19 degrees is found in the 20 per cent column and the specific gravity of that solution is 0.978.

If the radiator holds 3.5 gallons, 20 per cent of this must be alcohol and the remaining 80 per cent water. Twenty per cent of 3.5 gallons is seven-tenths of a gallon, or a little more than 5.5 pints. Hence a little more than 5.5 pints of alcohol will be required.

If the temperature of this solution is brought to 60 degrees Fahrenheit and an accurate hydrometer is floated in it the hydrometer should read 0.978. If the reading is higher than 0.978 more alcohol should be added, with constant stirring, until the 0.978 mark is reached.

A solution so prepared will not begin to freeze until its temperature is approximately 19 degrees Fahrenheit.

Numerous tables have been published giving the freezing points of certain water solutions containing alcohol, glycerin, or a mixture of the two, but there is much disagreement in the figures given.

There is appended a table of freezing points obtained from actual measurements made at the bureau of standards, on solutions of commercial materials, which may be considered sufficiently accurate for practical purposes, since they agree fairly well with the most reliable scientific data.

The freezing point is taken to be that temperature in the cooling process at which crystals begin to form. The temperature at which the entire mass becomes solid may be several degrees lower than the freezing point for dilute solutions, and ten or fifteen degrees lower for the more concentrated solutions.

As an example, a 30 per cent solution of denatured alcohol begins to freeze, that is, small crystals of ice form, at 7 degrees F., but the solution does not freeze solid until a temperature of 5 degrees below zero F. or lower is reached. Hence a temperature considerably lower than that given in the table for any given percentage of alcohol would not injure the engine or radiator.

However, it seems desirable to keep the solution at such a concentration that ice crystals will not form at the lowest temperature to be encountered, since such crystals may interfere with circulation.

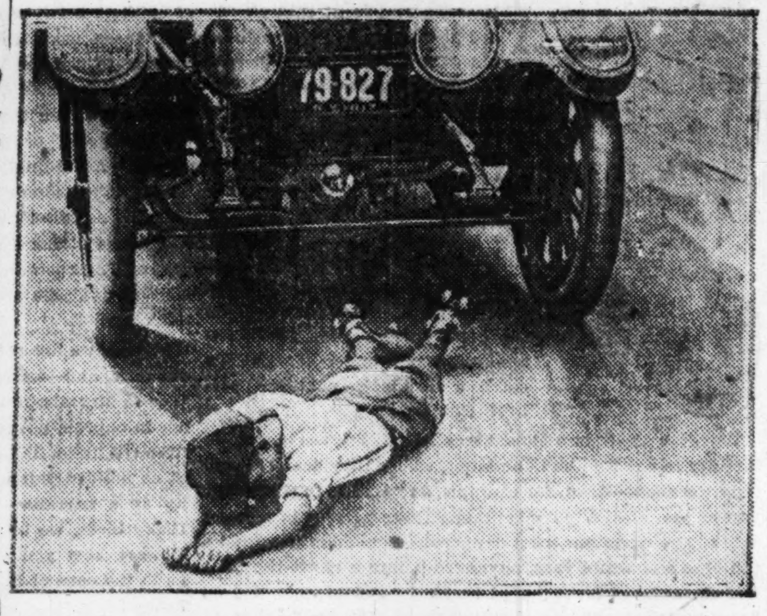
An accurate hydrometer should read 1.000 when placed in water at 60 degrees Fahrenheit and 0.834 in 180 degree proof alcohol at the same temperature. The denatured alcohol usually sold by dealers is 180 degree proof, which is the minimum allowed by law.

Keeping Them Clear.

Many miles of snow fences were completed along the Lincoln highway in Pennsylvania last summer and fall and are expected to greatly facilitate the work of keeping the snow off that main thoroughfare this winter. These fences were constructed particularly at points where deep drifts made the work of snow removal from the Lincoln way difficult during the blizzards of last winter.

Clearing the snow from New Jersey's main roads to facilitate the movement of transportation will be done in a thoroughly systematic fashion this winter, according to the plans of the highway transport committee of the State Council of Defense.

The actual work of snow removal is to be done by the counties and the larger municipalities in the counties, under the direction of the county and city engineers. It is estimated that about thirty miles a day can be kept cleared from ordinary snowfall by one plow.



The disturbing scenes herewith are from "Careless America," a movie thriller sponsored by H. S. Firestone, the tire man, and produced by Universal in an effort to educate the motorists of the United States as to the variety of ways there are of getting into trouble. Incidentally, of course, it offers some graphic preachments on the tenets of safe driving. The picture will be released in Chicago tomorrow and shown during the succeeding days at some 400 movie theaters in various parts of the city. Nine perfectly good cars were smashed up in making the film.

FREEZING POINTS AND SPECIFIC GRAVITIES OF SOME ALCOHOL AND GLYCERINE ANTI-FREEZING SOLUTIONS

Prepared by the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

Temperatures are given in degrees Fahrenheit. The figures in parenthesis are specific gravities at 60 degrees F.

Solution—	Percentage (by volume) in water and freezing points. 10% °F	20% °F	30% °F	40% °F	50% °F
Denatured alcohol	+27	+19	+10	—2	—18
	(0.988)	(0.978)	(0.968)	(0.957)	(0.943)
Wood alcohol	+23	+10	—2	—20	—40
	(0.987)	(0.975)	(0.963)	(0.952)	(0.937)
Glycerin (Sp. gr. 1.2537)	+29	+21	+12	0	—15
Denatured alcohol and glycerin*	+25	+18	+9	—8	—26
Wood alcohol and glycerin*	+25	+16	+5	—11	—31

*Glycerin and alcohol are mixed in equal proportions. Ten per cent glycerin and denatured alcohol means 5 parts glycerin and 5 parts alcohol should be added to 90 parts of water.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS - - By High Speed

Kindly publish in next Sunday's TRIBUNE the best route between Hawkeye, Ia., and Fostoria, Cal. How many miles between the two points? How many days should such a journey require?
B. E. G., Chicago.

The best route in winter is by railroad. If you must make it by automobile I should strike southwest through Waterloo, Marshalltown, and Des Moines to Kansas City, picking up the Santa Fé trail here and following it through Emporia, Hutchinson, Dodge City, Pueblo, Las Vegas, Albuquerque, Springerville, and Flagstaff to Barstow, Cal. From Barstow you can drive up through Bakersfield and Fresno to Fostoria, which is about forty miles northeast of Stockton. This is a roundabout route, but you could not get through the mountains if you drove directly west. The distance would be about 3,000 miles. As to the time the journey would take that would depend entirely on road and weather conditions, which probably would be bad in winter, particularly during the first part of the trip. I should say, at a guess, that it would take you a month, though you might do better than that.

I am burning out bulbs on my Ford car all the time. Can you tell me what is the matter and how I can fix it?
F. H. G., Chicago.

Excessive voltage is the cause of your trouble. There are any number of controls to be had from any supply store that will cure this. These controls keep the voltage constant instead of allowing it to run up so that the bulbs are burned out.

Please publish the best and shortest route between Galesburg, Ill., and Los Angeles, Cal. Give the cities and the distance between them.
W. N. POWELL,
Galesburg, Ill.

Quincy, 125 miles; Moberly, Mo., 97 miles; Kansas City, 147 miles; Emporia, Kas., 130 miles; Hutchinson, 123 miles; Dodge City, 155 miles; Syracuse, 107 miles; La Junta, Col., 115 miles; Pueblo, 66 miles; Trinidad, 92 miles; Las Vegas, N. M., 137 miles; Santa Fé, 73 miles; Albuquerque, 67 miles; Magdalena, 112 miles; Springerville, Ariz., 136 miles; Winslow, 138 miles; Flagstaff, 65 miles; Kingman, 176 miles; Needles, Cal., 71 miles; Barstow, 166 miles; San Bernardino, 83 miles; Los Angeles, 60 miles.

Why is it that springs always break near the middle? How can I prevent rust getting in between the leaves?
A. W., Chicago.

Breakage generally occurs near the center because there is a hole drilled here which makes a weak spot. Fit an oil box around the leaves or graphite the leaves once a year

S. A. E. Dates Changed.

The time of the winter meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, which was to be held Jan. 12-14 in New York, has been changed to Feb. 4-6. These latter dates have been set as a matter of convenience to the S. A. E. members, who desire to attend also the New York automobile show to be held during the first two weeks of February at Madison Square garden.

The meeting of the S. A. E. will be the occasion of illuminating technical sessions on the different automotives and on fuel for internal combustion engines. A half day session will be devoted to consideration of gasoline, kerosene, benzol, and other fuels. Representatives of the government will present their latest data as to supplies and the results of recent intensive research of a startling nature.

Members returned from the front will relate their experiences, and particulars never before made public concerning war automotive apparatus will be given in papers by members and others in government service.

State Road Plan Well Under Way

BY S. E. BRADT.
[Superintendent of Highways.]

THE fact that the $60,000,000 Illinois road bond issue carried by a popular majority of over 500,000 is evidence that the people of this state are thoroughly in earnest in their demand for a system of roads suitable to meet the requirements of modern traffic. The further fact that the proposition was carried by a popular majority in every county of the state shows that the sentiment is not local, but prevails throughout the state and that every community will want relief at the earliest possible moment.

It is not generally understood, however, that certain preliminaries are necessary before construction can be actually begun. While the law names the towns and cities that must be connected by the system, it leaves to the department of public works and buildings the duty of determining the exact route to be improved between the places named.

Engineering parties making reconnaissance surveys are now at work in different parts of the state collecting information as to available routes, the comparative cost of improving the different routes, the topography and the service which they will render to the people of the state. With this information the department of public works and buildings will make a definite decision as to the roads to be improved.

Before this is done, however, any person or group of persons who have signified their desire to be heard will be advised of the time and place for such a hearing. When it is remembered that there are 4,800 miles to be thus located people will readily understand that this will require some time.

Another matter preliminary to beginning construction is the decision as to the constitutionality of the law. It is expected that this question will be taken before the courts this month and will be carried to the Supreme court for final decision as quickly as possible, but it is not likely that this decision will be reached for several months.

It is conceded by people generally that it would be impossible for us to market 4 per cent state bonds at this time in competition with 4¼ per cent government bonds. It is expected, however, that the unappropriated fund in the state treasury derived from automobile license fees and approximately $6,000,000 by July 1, 1919, will be made available for the improvement of this system of roads either through direct appropriation or through the purchase of these bonds by the state; thus avoiding the necessity for placing bonds upon the market during the early period of construction or before the money market has reached a normal condition.

People also recognize the fact that it would not be consistent with good business management to begin the construction of this system of roads immediately at full speed. We are not far enough from the close of the war to judge as to what conditions will prevail during the construction season of 1919.

While we are waiting to learn what conditions are likely to prevail during the coming season the engineering department is reforming its organization, which had been seriously depleted through enlistment and the operation of the draft. Its forces are now working on reconnaissance and field surveys and the department will be prepared to advertise for bids on several hundred miles of road in the spring if conditions warrant.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

BUICK and Chandler are the latest additions to the list of cars on which post-war price reductions are announced. The Buick "six-44" and "six-45" for 1919 are now $1,495 instead of $1,595, which cuts $100 from a $330 increase over the price on corresponding 1918 models, made when the 1919 schedule was formulated at just about the time the armistice was signed. Prices on the other 1919 models have been readjusted in proportion. "It was inevitable," says a statement from the company, "that wartime conditions should cause some increase in price, but this raise covered only the added cost due to reduced volume in production. The revision brings a return to the exact prices originally established for the current models."

Chandler prices drop $300 tomorrow. For the touring car $1,795 replaces the wartime figure, $2,095.

J. P. O'Brien, formerly assistant central district manager for the Anderson Electric Car company, makers of the Detroit electric, has been made district manager, assuming charge of the Chicago office and succeeding D. E. Whipple, who died recently, a victim of the pneumonia epidemic.

Many new motor accessories having to do with fuel and oil economy are promised for exhibition at the approaching Chicago automobile show. Announcement of the allotment of space for this section of the display will be made this week. Plans are under way for giving the show the general atmosphere of a victory celebration, with returned soliders in uniform taking the place of the stars on the service flags which were a feature of the 1918 event.

Sport note—Napoleon Lajoie, veteran baseball player, has retired from the game to devote all his time to selling Miller tires in Cleveland.

A Republic truck staged a droll performance in South Norfolk, Va., the other day. Having disputed the right of way with a switch engine, it found itself tossed violently a matter of thirty feet. Pulled back on the road by another truck, it resumed its journey, apparently little the worse for the experience, leaving the locomotive crew to patch up their steed as best they could.

Joseph P. Ripley, formerly district manager for the Fisk Rubber company at Baltimore, has been made district manager for the central states, with headquarters in Chicago, succeeding Claude Platt, who becomes special factory representative for the company.

A one ton capacity truck is announced by the Acason Motor Truck company as an addition to its line of heavy duty trucks.

With the taking over of Lafayette Markle's financial interest in the L. Markle company by Henry R. Levy, the sales concern last week changed its title to Studebaker Sales Company of Chicago. Mr. Levy, the new president and principal owner, was formerly vice president and general manager of the Markle organization.

The MOTORIST CALENDAR

A special building, to cost $25,000, is being erected in Kansas City for the tractor show to be held there Feb. 24 to March 1. It will have a floor space of more than 90,000 square feet and will require half a million feet of lumber.

Ford Winter Top

A luxury at the price of a necessity

LAST winter you left your car in the garage and watched your neighbors drive away in their limousines. You need not do that this winter. Every Ford owner can convert his Ford into a luxurious comfortable, all-the-year-round car.

Limo-Top Makes a Limousine of Every Ford

You need not remove the top you already have on your Ford. The regular Ford top in connection with the Limo-Top makes a complete limousine.

Attached by Anyone Quickly

A screw driver and a monkey wrench are all that is necessary.

SPECIAL OFFER

Limo-Tops are built for Ford models 1915-16-17-18-19 exclusively. The Limo-Top with its all-year comfort will cost you less than an idle Ford.

$30 for roadster, $40 for touring car, f. o. b. Chicago, covers the complete cost. Send your order now. If you wish the privilege of inspection, order C. O. D., $5.00 down—balance payable when delivered.

Orders filled as received—no delay.

REPRESENTATIVE—WITH ESTABLISHED office for Chicago and adjacent territory to handle well advertised New York line of popular priced coats and suits; commission basis; full particulars and references essential. Address B B 8, Tribune.

SALESMAN—WE HAVE AN OPENING FOR a salesman who can meet big executives on a common level and present with force and intelligence an entirely new, clean, and salient proposition. A very high class SERVICE, having the unequaled indorsement of leading industries in every line. Sales averaging $150 to $200, are usually made on first call, and results to buyers bring us over 76% of voluntary renewals. Our men now in the field started out making from $150 to $250 the first week—and some have made over $500 in a single week. Little traveling is required because of the broad possibilities in any industrial center. We prefer a specialty, service, or high pressure first-call man; must have clean character, good personality, forceful bearing, and be able to instill confidence. This is an entirely new field of endeavor, that offers big money quick to the right man—yet it is absolutely straightforward and ethical in every respect. To the man who measures up to our standards we offer a very attractive and permanent connection that means independence. Please give general outline of your past experience, being as explicit as possible, with the assurance of your letter being accepted in strict confidence—and if out of town, give your itinerary for three weeks. A personal interview will be arranged with those who seem to meet the requirements. Address O D 185, Tribune.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMAN WANTED.

Last spring a representative of this corporation secured a contract from one of the large New York corporations covering a plan of quick, intensive training for a small percentage of their employes. He spent less than three weeks' actual working time, and his commission netted him a trifle under $4,000. Some time ago this contract was completed and he has received a second contract, which will net him over $6,000. He has in view additional contracts with the same corporation.

I am looking for a salesman, well acquainted with large concerns in Chicago, capable of handling work of this kind among executives in important corporations and who within six months can develop into a district manager.

Our work is intensely interesting, covers a broad field of endeavor, and will not only prove profitable, but make a bigger man of the man who is trained to close contracts of this type.

You know your capabilities and if you are sure you can make good along these lines, please send a rough outline of your business record and if satisfactory I will arrange for an interview as promptly as possible.

Address G. G. N., 15th floor,
185 Madison-av.,
New York City.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Miscellaneous.

TO THE MAN WHO KNOWS THAT ALL HE NEEDS IS A CHANGE TO GET IN THE KIND OF BUSINESS INTO WHICH HE CAN WILLINGLY PUT HIS WHOLE HEART AND SOUL.

There is a place with the "Trustees' System" where you will be associated with a "business family" of former store managers, teachers, electricians, telegraphers, government and railroad clerks in an established and capitalized industrial banking organization which they are extending nation-wide. We do not want professional salesmen, but after thorough instruction your first work will be calling on merchants, doctors, and dentists, contracting for our financial service. A clean record, age from 25 to 45, ability to express thoughts in good, common sense English, and willingness to become a real part of this organization are the essential qualifications. No investment required. Telephone Harrison 9120, Local 18.

Almonds Almonds Almonds
Olives Olives Olives

You need lots of money and experience to grow oranges and lemons, but any one can grow almonds or olives in the famous Sacramento Valley, which is second to no district in the United States. Here they begin bearing third year after planting. This district also offers splendid opportunities for diversifying with alfalfa [seven cuttings a year], poultry or fruits, etc. Our climate is wonderful; you are only 8 miles from the city of Sacramento, population 80,000, on concrete roads and electric car line. Start an almond or olive orchard now and be ready to take life easy in a few years. Write for booklets describing our 10 and 20 acre ranches. Party leaving Jan. 23. REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Florida.

A HOME and INCOME For You in Sunny Florida

BE INDEPENDENT—OWN A GRAPEFRUIT AND ORANGE GROVE—A TRUCK OR POULTRY FARM.

INCREASE YOUR INCOME.

YOU CAN START A GROVE TODAY UNDER OUR NEW PLAN.

Develop a profit earning fruit farm without leaving your present position—provide for your future. A small payment now and a few dollars invested each month should reap large and increasing dividends from year to year. You can now secure the land you want on payments as low as $1 per acre per month.

A profit producing fruit grove is a permanent investment and provides protection against old age.

THE RIGHT LAND IN THE RIGHT LOCATION AT THE RIGHT PRICE.

WE HAVE IT—ANY SIZE FARM

From 10 to 640 acres or more. These splendid lands are suburban to Tampa, the metropolis of South Florida. Here you find the most healthful, the most delightful climate in North America. For eight years we have been right here helping develop Hillsboro, the banner agricultural county of Florida, and we are still here to serve you and to help you obtain the farm you want. Whether it's 10 or 20 acres, for a fruit grove, poultry or truck farm, or from 80 to 640 acres for general farming, cattle and hog raising, we can give it to you on very easy payments extending over 4 or 5 years' time to suit purchaser.

GROVES DEVELOPED FOR NON-RESIDENTS. If you want to remain in your present position for a few years we can develop a grapefruit and orange grove for you. When you are ready we will clear your land, furnish fruit trees, plant and care for your grove until you are ready to look after it.

WE RAISE OUR OWN GUARANTEED CITRUS TREES IN OUR OWN NURSERIES. This insures every purchaser the best fruit trees that can be grown. This also insures a successful grove. We can save you money on planting and caring for your grove.

$300 TO $500 PER ACRE PROFIT May be made growing truck. This is not an unusual return for truck farmers in the Famous Tampa district. All kinds of vegetables can be grown. Big prices are paid for early potatoes, winter cabbage, Bermuda onions, tomatoes, celery and dozens of other vegetables during the winter and early spring when the north is covered with ice and snow. Strawberries, melons, and other small fruits also yield large profits.

POULTRY A BIG MONEY MAKER. Hillsboro county is without question one of the most favored locations in the United States for poultry raising. Tampa affords an unlimited market for chickens and eggs. Commission houses right here in Tampa City do a tremendous export business in poultry and eggs and the local demand is also very large. This insures a steady cash market at good prices.

STOCK RAISING AND GENERAL FARMING. We also have lands especially adapted to general farming, long staple cotton, corn and live stock. Hog and cattle raising has never been so profitable before. High prices for all meat and pork products must continue—Florida stock raisers should make big money for many years to come.

WRITE FOR FACTS ABOUT SUNNY FLORIDA. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO LET US PROVE TO YOU that we have the land you want—in the location you want—at a price you can afford to pay and on the easiest terms you can imagine. Let us show you. Write us today for our large FREE descriptive book.

NORTH TAMPA LAND CO.
Suite 4, 8th floor, Tower Bldg. Chicago.

Is This What You Are Looking For?

A little piece of land near the water, a boat, a garden, some strawberry plants, and perhaps a few chickens; a vine-covered cottage, pleasant neighbors; fish and oysters in abundance, plenty of quail and game—a simple, natural, wholesome life in the open the year round—Home, Health, and Contentment. All this is within your reach at modest outlay in this beautiful land of sunshine and roses. We are on the Gulf and a navigable river, also on the Dixie Highway, and we are only two hours by motor bus from Tampa and St. Petersburg. Here we have the freedom, comfort, and economy of country life, yet are within easy access of the big cities and resort centers. Our community is new, but is one of the fastest growing in the state. Prices have not gone sky-high, and living expenses are moderate. 100 Northern families already here. They like it—perhaps you will. May we send complete information? BOARD OF TRADE, Box 212, New Port Richey, Fla.

Louisiana.

FOR SALE—I HAVE CAREFULLY SELECTED and platted under expert advice from the fine cutover lands along our line in La. and Miss. a number of farms, large and small live stock ranches, ranches especially selected with reference to breeding, herding, and feeding grounds, farm lands and pasturage, water and shipping facilities.

The lumber companies are loyally co-operating by concessions in low prices and long terms, payments distributed over long period, and reasonable rental on the lands, and yet title is given on completion of payments.

The U. S. Railroad Administration instructs us to give out dependable information to voluntary inquirers, and if you desire the results of shipments of thousands of sheep and cattle from the West and Southwest into this green grass country and the report of the National Wool Growers' Assn. on these lands will furnish same on request. WALTER S. AYRES, Industrial Commissioner, N. O. G. N. Ry., 864 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Michigan.

BOOM! BOOM!

HURRY! HURRY! One of the biggest land booms the country has ever known is under way. The last shot fired in France also fired the opening land boom gun over here and it's getting hotter all the time.

THOUSANDS, including many returning soldiers are making peaceful but determined efforts to gain ground for themselves because of the tremendous high cost of foodstuffs. Is it any wonder there is such a scramble when you read the following facts?

1914.		1918.
$0.23	Eggs	$0.76
.27	Butter	.73
.05	Sugar	.09½
.18	Beef	.48
.14	Cheese	.42
.08	Milk	.14

NOW you know the reason for this land boom. And listen! It's booming is already heard in Antrim and Kalkaska Counties, Michigan, where we have 40,000 acres of hardwood land that is meeting the requirements of the most particular land buyers.

This virgin soil produces big crops of potatoes, clover, alfalfa, beans, vetch, rye, corn, oats, delicious fruits, and vegetables of all kinds. Owing to the fact that it was held off the market while adjoining districts were developing, it is surrounded with good schools, churches, markets, railroads, and crossed by hard roads, telephone, and rural free delivery.

In order to give every one just what they want, we have divided this big acreage into 10, 20, 40, 80, and 160 acre tracts. The down payment is small; also the monthly or yearly payments.

$10 to $25 starts you on 10 acres, $50 on 20 acres, and $100 on 40 acres.

REAL ESTATE—TIMBER AND COAL

FOR SALE — TIMBERED TRACTS, 100,000,000 to 10,000,000,000 feet; some with mills and railroads; Pacific Coast; also Southern States. Add. Timber Land Bureau, Bd. of Trade Bldg., Portland, Oregon.

REAL ESTATE—CATTLE RANCHES.

FOR SALE—CATTLE, SHEEP, HOG, GRAIN, alfalfa, and fruit ranches, from 40 acres up to 82,000 acres, prices ranging from $10,000 to $1,250,000. Some of these ranches are owned by old people wanting to retire, some are estates that have to be settled, some have been poorly managed and must be sold.

We have ranches that are stocked with thousands of cattle and sheep, are paying splendid profits, and will be sold with or without the live stock at fair and reasonable prices. We have large, improved ranches that present wonderful possibilities and can be bought right. We also have large tracts of land, good for ranching or colonization, irrigation, and subdivision. There are many small ranches and farms ranging from $10,000 to $50,000. All of the above can be sold on good terms.

There are several tracts of raw productive lands that are sure to increase in value without any expenditure of money, and there are lands, very cheap lands, lying adjacent to mineral lands recently prospected, surveyed, withdrawn and reserved for the U. S. navy. These are oil shale lands and are sure to increase in values very quickly and are recommended on account of their speculative values.

Having been engaged in ranch management for years I may be of service in assisting you in the selection of a profitable ranch. Remember, we have ranches for sale in California, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Kansas, Missouri, Texas, and Oklahoma. We handle nothing but ranches. Come in and talk with us. JAMES A. ODELL, Room 1403 Great Northern Bldg., 20 W. Jackson-blvd. Phone Wabash 5223.

ATTENTION!
FORM YOUR OWN OIL COMPANY.

Individuals, Bankers, Brokers: Be your own promoter and keep what he gets. Form a close company that will pay dividends now, by linking production to a lease. We can furnish everything ready to sell. Kentucky royalties, close-in leases, and selling plan. We invite investigation and personal interview with those capable of raising $10,000 and upwards. Ours is a safe field. We can show positive proof that over 85% of oil wells in our home fields—successful wells—don't cost much to drill. We have oil royalties paying 1½% to 2% monthly, with additional wells to be drilled in without expense to purchaser. These new wells coming in will increase the aforesaid dividends or royalties. We have close to production oil leases upon which the operating lease holder gets seven-eighths of all oil or gas. These leases are more speculative than royalties—the percentage of successful wells, however, warrants investment. Write providing you mean business. Address Y 525, Tribune.

Is the place to buy a

Gives You the Utmost Style, Service, Value.

Many of the handsomest, quietset running Cadillacs you see on the street are renewed Cadillacs. Note the perfect fitting pantasote tops [factory standard], the beautiful gray, tan, blue, and maroon color bodies, specially painted by us. You can't tell such cars from new. Every renewed Cadillac has been taken apart, minutely inspected, worn parts replaced by new where necessary, reassembled, adjusted, tested, and proved as good as new. And we give service on a renewed Cadillac. When you get such a car at several hundred dollars less than the original price you are getting a real bargain with which no "used" car can be compared.

TIRES SPECIAL OFFER
DOUBLE TREAD TIRES
GUARANTEED ON 5,000 MILE BASIS.

Our tires have treble thickness, which insures them against punctures, blowouts; also weather proof. These tires are guaranteed on 5,000 mile basis, but often give the user as high as 8,000 miles. Every tire is furnished with a reliner, absolutely FREE OF CHARGE; 14 plies of fabric between the inner tube and the road. Compare our prices, then send us your order.

PRICE LIST DURING THIS MONTH ONLY:

Size.	Price.	Size.	Price.
30x3	$6.00	34x3½	$8.90
30x3½	6.00	34x4½	9.95
32x3½	6.50	35x4½	10.25

To the Automobile Public.
We wish to inform you that this is the right time of year to do necessary overhauling on your automobile. We can do a much better job by those coming in early and avoiding the rush.
We have been doing business for the last 18 years and employ only the most skilled mechanics. We make any part or parts of any auto. We do cylinder grinding, make new pistons, fit new rings, etc.; in fact, anything pertaining to an automobile. We are centrally located, and if you want first class work on any high grade foreign or domestic car you need look no further. Prices reasonable, as we have no large overhead expenses. Our machine shop is one of the best equipped in the west. No work done on Ford cars. Give us a trial. You will be convinced.

FOURTH BIG
Horse & Mule Sale

We will sell five hundred horses [500] and about one hundred and fifty [150] mules on next Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 7 and 8, without reserve, to the highest bidder.

This lot consists of good draft horses, weighing from 1,400 to 1,600 pounds; extra good chunks from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds, just the size for farm purposes in any country; also good useful horses, weighing from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds, that were bought for cavalry purposes.

The mules are a good rugged type, that weigh from 1,100 to 1,350 pounds, from 4 to 10 years old, and a very good kind.

These horses are young, sound, and every one aclimated and ready for immediate use.

It is an opportunity that you have not had heretofore, where you can buy good, sound, acclimated horses for less than you have been able to buy common blemished ones for.

Remember the date, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, Jan. 7 and 8.

Don't let this opportunity go buy when you can buy horses like these at the prices you will be able to get them for, as the British army horses will soon be all sold, and we are sure you cannot buy them in any country for the prices you can get them for here at the present time.

PACKERS' CLUB RULES SHIPPING OF MEAT, HE SAYS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Operation of refrigerator cars by independent meat packers was declared "theoretically possible, but in reality a losing venture," by Chairman Colver of the federal trade commission, at the house interstate commerce committee's meat industry hearing.

"Railroads furnish such poor service to small packers that they soon find they cannot afford to continue to operate the cars," he said. "Marked discrimination of service has been shown in many instances. Cars operated by the 'big five' averaged eighty miles a day, while the average of all other refrigerator cars is fifty-four miles."

Mr. Colver said the large packers "wield a traffic club over the railroads and threaten to take their business away unless perfect service is given."

He introduced into the record letters said to have passed between the Swift Refrigerator and Packing company and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway, "showing how the railroad was to dismantle a stock yard at Fort Worth, Tex., which operated in competition to yards owned jointly by Armour & Co. and Swift & Co., before the packers would give the road any traffic from that point."

BUSINESS PROPERTY DEALS WEEK'S FEATURE

BUILDING SPACE LEASING ACTIVE IN CITY MARKET

Number of Important Deals Made; Shedd Property Sold.

An unusual number of important leases of building space featured last week's real estate market, making it a notable one in this respect. Another interesting feature was the closing of the transaction by which the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago acquired the John G. Shedd properties at the northwest corner of Jackson boulevard and La Salle street, which was announced in THE TRIBUNE a short time ago.

There were also several fairly good sized transactions in outside business property, together with a fair run of medium sized flat transactions, although the showing in this class of property was not up to that of several preceding weeks.

The activity shown in building leases was of a fairly impressive character, and serves to call attention to the greatly improved conditions reported in this field by brokers. Not only is vacant space being quite rapidly absorbed, as regards office as well as store space, but there also is a distinct tendency toward higher rentals.

Office Space Well Rented.

It is thought that the situation as regards store space is not quite as good as that of office space, but how good the situation as a whole is may be gathered from the fact that practically all of the better class of office buildings, with a few exceptions, in the loop district are said to be 90 per cent rented, several making an even better showing. It is the most encouraging outlook in several years, and should give a decidedly better tone to the entire downtown market.

The largest of the leases covered the Planters' hotel at 19 North Clark street, which has been leased by the Gayety Theater company of New York, owner of the leasehold and building, to the Planters' Hotel Company of Illinois, the present lessee, for a term of seventeen years from Jan. 1, 1919, at a term rental of $765,000, or $45,000 a year, the lessee paying the water taxes. This superseded a lease made by the Gayety Theater company to Martin J. Breen in 1910, which subsequently was assigned to the Planters' Hotel company. The Columbia theater, in the building, is excepted. The hotel, which occupies the eight upper floors of the building, contains about 200 rooms.

Chinese Syndicate in Deal.

Another interesting event was the recording of the twenty-five year lease by the Art institute of Chicago to a Chinese syndicate of the property at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Van Buren street, 80x125½ feet, with two story building, which disclosed some interesting details. While the net annual rental runs from $28,000 to $36,000, it is provided that if the lessor desires to sell, lease for ninety-nine years, or erect an eight story building the lease may be termined April 30, 1934, by giving a year's notice and paying the lessees $40,000. The upper story will be occupied by a restaurant and around $100,000 will be expended in remodeling. The stores will be sublet by E. F. Keebler & Co., who, with Hall & Ellis, negotiated the lease.

A large lease in the State-Lake building at State and Lake streets was reported by which the Hardware Club of Chicago has leased through the Hool Realty company, managers of the building, space on the eleventh floor at a term rental of $90,000. It will be subdivided so as to include a large lounging room, billiard room, and dining room. It is stated that a number of applications have been received from hardware agents for space on the same floor and it is being held for them, so that the club may have control of the entire floor, which contains about 14,000 square feet. A. Vere Martin is president of the club, which was organized in 1913.

Term Rental Is $105,000.

John Raklios has leased from Edward Manierre and the estate of Benjamin Manierre the first floor and basement of the building at 81-85 West Randolph street for a term of years at a term rental of $105,000. It will be occupied for restaurant purposes. Dibblee & Manierre were the brokers.

A noteworthy lease on Wabash avenue was also filed for record, comprising the first and eighth floors and basement of the building at 533-35 South Wabash, which was leased by Frederick R. Barnheisel to Victor S. Pearlman & Co., gas fixtures, for a term of ten years from May 1, 1919, at a stated term rental of $85,500.

A large South Chicago store lease made a matter of record covers the store at 9150 Commercial avenue, which, with the basement, has been leased by Ascher Bros. to John B. Stamos for twenty-five years from Jan. 1, 1919, at a term rental of $79,800. The lease was negotiated by E. C. Sumerfield.

Lease in Market District.

In an interesting lease in the West Randolph street market district Alex Friend & Co. have leased for Edward Katzinger to Glass & Preaskill, wholesale grocers, the five story and basement building at 120-22 North Peoria street at a term rental of approximately $100,000. There is said to be a healthy gradual expansion of the allied grocery, meat, and produce business in this district.

Friend & Co. also report the lease for the Mid-City Trust and Savings Bank building to Edward Rutishauser of the Virginia theater on Madison street, just west of Halsted street, at a term lease of $50,000. It is being renovated and decorated throughout.

Willis & Frankenstein have leased for the Federal-Huber company and the Michigan Boulevard Building company to Miss Tilford Goldberg the store at 34 North Michigan boulevard for a term from Jan. 1 at an aggregate rental of $55,000. It will be occupied as a millinery shop by Miss Goldberg, who has been associated with her sister, Mrs. Goldstone, for some years in charge of the Leschin company millinery department in the Tower building, conducted under the trade name of Mrs. G. Hats.

POOR SHOWING MADE FOR WEEK IN APARTMENTS

Neither Volume Nor Quality Equals Past Activity.

Apartment property failed to make the good showing it has for the last three or four weeks. Not only was the volume of business less, but there were also fewer large transactions.

Charles F. Helgren sold to Clara S. Simpson the high grade six apartments of seven rooms and three baths each at 5435-37 Michigan avenue, lot 60x161 feet, with gross annual rental of more than $7,000, for a reported consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the nine room residence at 4646 Drexel boulevard on a lot 75x200 feet, at a reported consideration of $25,000, clear. Frank H. Lang represented both parties.

Wilson Avenue Deal.

The apartment property at the northwest corner of Wilson and Lyman avenues, lot 74x121 feet, has been conveyed by Laura Simmons to Annie Conwisher for an indicated consideration of $52,000, subject to an incumbrance of $28,500. In this connection the grantee conveyed to Elsie Peterson the property in Lincoln avenue, forty feet northwest of Berenice avenue, west front, 50x125 feet, with store and flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $26,000, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000.

The twelve apartment building of four and five rooms, with annual rental of $5,000, on a lot 50x125 feet, at the northeast corner of Glenwood and Foster avenues, has been sold by Dr. Aldora J. Tyler for an indicated consideration of $37,500, subject to an incumbrance of $21,500. The seller took in part payment the eight flat and one store building at the northwest corner of Wellington and Sarak avenues for an indicated $15,000, subject to $6,500. James A. Savage and George W. Walker were the brokers.

Eight Flat Structure Sold.

F. C. Schulz has sold for Murray Wolbach the eight apartment building at the southeast corner of Dorchester avenue and Sixty-ninth place for a reported consideration of $25,500 to Leah M. Planett, who conveyed in part payment vacant at 555 Barber street and the two story brick dwelling at 7121 Vernon avenue.

Record has been made of the transfer by Leo Canman to Grace K. Buchman of the flat property in Vincennes avenue, 100 feet north of Forty-third street, lot 50x127 feet, east front, for an indicated consideration of $36,000, subject to an incumbrance of $16,000.

Paxton Avenue Sale.

Edward M. Bertha has sold to Martha G. Paddleford the six apartment building at 7431-33 Paxton avenue, with sun parlors, lot 60x125 feet, for an indicated consideration of $21,000, subject to $14,500 incumbrance. Mr. Bertha took in part payment the residence property at 4546 Oakenwald avenue. J. H. Christensen & Co. were the brokers.

Fight for Southern Pacific Oil Land in Supreme Court

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—The Supreme court was asked by the government today to hear as soon as possible arguments in proceedings brought to cancel patents to land valued at $10,000,000 granted to the Southern Pacific Railroad company.

"The case is of importance," said the motion filed by Solicitor General King, "because its decision will probably materially affect several pending cases involving a large oil acreage of great value and will also guide the land department in cases presented to it."

The government claims that in securing the patents for the land which is part of California naval oil reserve No. 1, the company concealed the fact that it contained valuable oil deposits. The federal District court upheld the government, but the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decision.

E. F. Carry Quits Shipping Board; Work Is Praised

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—E. F. Carry of Chicago, head of the shipping board's commission on terminal and harbor improvement, has resigned to return to his private business. His resignation was accepted today by Chairman Hurley, who cabled from France his appreciation of the work of Mr. Carry during the war in planning the development of ports for the vast movements of supplies and troops.

CLOSING SHEDD PROPERTY SALE WEEK'S FEATURE

Business Property Deals Also Include Sale of Theater.

The feature of the week in a sales way was, of course, the closing of the purchase by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago of the Shedd properties at the northwest corner of Jackson boulevard and La Salle street, although the fact the bank had practically acquired the property had previously been announced in THE TRIBUNE.

The actual terms of the sale were not known, however, nor what the building plans of the bank might be. The consideration named in the deed is $2,936,500, and it was a cash transaction, evidenced by the $2,936.50 worth of revenue stamps on the deed, making it one of the largest single cash transactions in the history of the city. Mr. Shedd paid $2,855,000 for the property. The transfer to the bank was made by Laura A. Shedd Schweppe of Lake Forest and Helen Shedd Reed of Chicago, and the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, trustee, to whom the property had been conveyed by Mr. Shedd.

No Building Plans Made.

While it was purchased as a site for a new home for the bank, Mr. McDougal, governor of the bank, stated yesterday that no plans whatever had been made in connection with the proposed building on the property, the question not even having been taken up yet, he said.

The property fronts 160 feet on Jackson boulevard and 165 feet in La Salle, running through to Quincy street. This formerly comprised the following four properties: The Royal Insurance building, the Counselman building, the Gaff building, and the building formerly occupied by the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank, at Quincy and La Salle streets.

Theater Property Transferred.

There was filed for record the transfer by John R. Thompson to Harry W. Thompson, his brother, of the Logan Square theater property in Milwaukee avenue, 216 feet southeast of Logan Square, for a stated consideration of $90,000. The lot is 125x110 feet, and in addition to the theater, which has a seating capacity of about 1,400, there are two stores and two offices. The grantee has been conducting the theater. The property was bid in at auction sale at the rooms of the Chicago real estate board Dec. 31.

A good sized transaction in Rogers Park business property was included in yesterday's real estate news. It was the sale by Mrs. Mildred K. Archibald to Joseph H. Defrees of the property at the northeast corner of Clark street and Greenleaf avenue for an indicated consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000. The lot is 93x100 feet and is improved with one and two story buildings containing six stores, twenty offices, and a 300 seat theater. Mr. Defrees will remodel the building, converting the space occupied by the theater into stores. In exchange for the equity the purchaser conveyed the apartment property at 4709-15 Ellis avenue, west front, lot 99x202 feet, containing twelve apartments of eight, nine, and ten rooms, which was conveyed subject to $43,000. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. represented all the parties to the transaction.

Wells Street Sale.

The property at the southwest corner of Wells and Hill streets, lot 59x100 feet, with store and flat improvements, has been conveyed by Charles K. Miller to Benjamin E. Harris for an indicated consideration of $55,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

Record was made of the transfer by Claus Ludermann to John Krotkas of the property at the southwest corner of Twenty-second and Leavitt streets, lot 25x100 feet, with business improvements, for an indicated consideration of $29,000, the grantee giving a part purchase money mortgage of $10,000.

The property at the southeast corner of Twelfth and Paulina streets, lot 43x83 feet, with store and flat improvements, has been conveyed by Fannie Rothouse to Walker Jensen, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000, there being 50 cents' worth of stamps on the deed.

Four Outside Leases Made in Property for Business

Hart & Whetston have leased for the Lovejoy estate to F. W. Thurston company the five story and basement building at the northwest corner of Eighteenth place and Clark street for five years at a term rental of $50,000. The same brokers have also leased for Sarah Felsenthal et al to the Fleet Paper Stock company the four story and basement building at 757-59 West Taylor street, 50x100 feet, for a term rental of $48,000. They also have leased for Robert Glendenning to the Rubber Company of America the one story building and land, 140x160 feet, at the southeast corner of Forty-eighth street and Campbell avenue, for a term rental of $26,000. Also they have rented for Hiram Cody, receiver, to the Wizard Talking Machine company the three story and basement building at 1977-79 Ogden avenue for a term rental of $12,000.

Deal in Vacant Property Made on Sheridan Road

In an interesting transaction in high grade Sheridan road vacant the estate of Walter B. Pearson has conveyed to Martin J. Ahern the property 225 feet north of Granville avenue, seventy-five feet, west front, back to the lake, for an indicated cash consideration of $27,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The grantee subsequently conveyed to the Chicago Title and Trust company for the same consideration.

PARKSIDE-AV. PROPERTY TRANSFERRED.

The Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance company has conveyed to Max Leibovitz the property at the southwest corner of Ogden avenue and Paulina street, 263 feet to Paulina street and alley, excepting the piece occupied by the elevated road, for an indicated cash consideration of $10,500.

NEARLY 3 MILLION

Replies to Box-Number Want-Ads Were Received at THE TRIBUNE Office, Alone, During 1918—

2,994,805 replies to want-ads with a box-number address were mailed or brought to the Main Office of THE TRIBUNE during 1918—an increase of 205,688 replies over the same record for the year 1917.

2,994,805 replies!—that's one to every man, woman, and child in Chicago, with several hundred thousand added for good measure.

An average of 249,500 replies a month!— More replies than every person in Columbus, Capital of Ohio, could furnish if every one of its 225,000 men, women, and children sent but one reply a month.

An average of over 57,000 replies a week — almost as many replies as there are people in Evanston and Elgin, together.

An average of over 9,500 replies for every working day in the year!—that's more replies than there are people in many a thriving Illinois County Seat.

And these almost 3 MILLION replies to TRIBUNE want-ads, remember, are only those which were made in response to want-ads ending with a TRIBUNE box number; only those which were mailed or personally delivered to THE TRIBUNE'S Main Office at Madison and Dearborn Sts.

Compared with the total volume of replies to TRIBUNE want-ads

—telephoned to the advertiser's home, office or factory; or —mailed to the advertiser's home or business address; or —answered in person,

these 3 MILLION box-number replies bear an estimated ratio of one-to-four. In other words, it is estimated that three out of every four replies to TRIBUNE want-ads go direct to the advertiser and one out of every four comes to a TRIBUNE box-number.

Twelve Million Replies a Year

therefore, probably represents the total response which TRIBUNE readers made to TRIBUNE want-ads during 1918.

This is the most powerful known force for the constructive co-operation of the American people—the mightiest medium for the mutual interchange of domestic or business "wants"; for buying, selling, barter, exchange or investment.

Yet this Great Popular Exchange, great as it is, only represents that portion of the business offered to THE TRIBUNE which it was willing to print.

Every want-advertisement appearing in THE TRIBUNE is as honest an advertisement as close scrutiny and constant censorship can make it. THE TRIBUNE'S strict requirements are no handicap to the honest, but they're fatal to fakers. They force THE TRIBUNE to refuse thousands of want-ads during the year, but they build confidence—they account for those 12 MILLION REPLIES!

Translated into Public Service, this dominating record of THE TRIBUNE for 1918 clearly proves:

—that THE TRIBUNE'S want-ads supplied the most important solution of the unusual business and labor problems incident to the war—a stabilizing and steadying influence in the community, and —that TRIBUNE want-ads will be the biggest factor to Chicago's industrial progress for 1919—hastening business—reconstruction—the natural bond between employer and employed.

Whether it's a situation, a helper, a home-buying or an investment opportunity—you get the good ones through THE TRIBUNE.
